Nixon Speeds The Pullback

But He Warns Hanoi On Final Settlement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon Friday ordered a speedup in U.S. troop withdrawals from Vietnam that will remove 45,000 more men in December and January. But he warned Hanoi some American forces will stay in Indochina until there is a negotiated settlement.

"If we do not get a negotiated settlement, then it is necessary to maintain a residual force," Nixon said.

He said there was "no reason for encouragement" that he could speak about publicly that American prisoners of war might be released. But he promised the United States would "never give up" on the issue.

Congressional critics of Nixon's war policies expressed dissatisfaction with the statement a residual force would stay in Vietnam. Communist negotiators at the Paris talks have set complete American withdrawal as the price for releasing U.S. prisoners.

"I'm sorry about it," Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said of Nixon's statement. Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, said he was disappointed because there was "no indication of any termination of the war."

And Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said a residual force could serve as a "trip wire" that could keep American forces involved indefinitely.

It was Nixon's sixth troop withdrawal announcement. He said an additional 25,000 men would leave Vietnam in December and 20,000 in January, dropping the U.S. force in Vietnam to 139,000 men. The current withdrawal phase, which continues through November, will bring the level down to 184,000, from a high of 543,000 men in April, 1969.

The current phase has withdrawn an average of 14,300 men a month.

Nixon said he would make another troop withdrawal announcement by Feb. 1.

The President said U.S. air power would continue to be used in support of the South Vietnamese until there is a negotiated settlement or "until the South Vietnamese have de-

How Police Broke Open The Trident Robbery Case

By GEORGE NEVIN

Sausalito police yesterday credited aid from law enforcement agencies all over the state, a stubborn detective and a Sausalito resident who couldn't sleep with providing clues which led to the arrest of two men in connection with the Oct. 25 amphibious robbery of the Trident restaurant.

The men, believed to be part of a statewide safecracking ring, were captured in the East Bay and San Diego County in coordinated raids early yesterday. At least two more persons are being sought.

Sausalito Police Chief James D. Wright said he and another officer, along with state and federal agents, raided the home of William Ettleman, about 48, in El Cajon, San Diego County, while another team was entering the home of Edward Walter Devancy, 32, in the Contra Costa County community of Alamo.

Ettleman, who complained of chest pains to arresting officers, was being held under guard in University Hospital in San Diego today. Devaney was returned to Marin County Jail yesterday where he was held on $150,000 bail on suspicion of robbery and burglary to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Wright said three weapons matching the description of those used in the robbery were found in the Alamo home, along with torches, a hoist, and a set of walkie-talkies, all believed to have been used in the crime.

Wright said he did not know if

Phase Two Machinery Set To Go

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government regulations for the Phase II economic program that starts at midnight today will allow 4.3 million federal employes —military and civilian —to collect $5 billion in pay increase by the middle of next year.

The Cost of Living Council made the ruling Friday. It also waived its requirement that the government be notified in advance for pay raises in industries falling due by Jan. 1 under existing contracts.

This provision will benefit the United Auto Workers, among others.

Shortly before the council issued its rulings, President Nixon told a news conference he believed the rate of inflation would be cut in half during 1972. He predicted Phase II, which follows the end of his 90-day wage-price-rents freeze today, will succeed with continued "enormous public support."

The Price Commission has set an average nationwide ceiling of 2.5 per cent a year for price increases, while the Pay Board —the other agency created to supervise Phase II —has established a guideline of 5.5 per cent for annual pay raises.

Nixon again predicted 1972 will be a "good year" for the economy. He conceded there possibly would be "some bulge" in the rate of inflation as the freeze is lifted but argued that Pay Board and Price Commission decisions had been "very sound" and would make Phase II as much of a success as the freeze had been.

Barrows Asks Relaxation In Civic Center Security

County Administrator John F. Barrows recommended yesterday that security measures at the Marin Civic Center be relaxed.

His recommendation, contained in a four-page document, will be considered Tuesday by the board of supervisors.

"If there is to be a reduction in the level of building security it would be appropriate to relax restrictions on the administration wing and retain a higher level of security for the Hall of Justice. . ." he said in his report.

His recommendation calls for elimination of entrance checkpoints at the Administration Building to normal hours (from early morning to as late in the evening as public meetings are being conducted), and to keep the Hall of Justice hours as they are (8 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays).

"If your board were to adopt this schedule, eight deputy sheriff positions, related to the three public entrance checkpoints, could be eliminated," Barrows said.

Savings to the county as a result of the slackened security would be about $32,000 for the rest of the fiscal year.

However, Barrow's letter noted opposition to any security reduction from Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos, "who believes that only by the screening, patroling and closing of the building on off-hours have we prevented further violence to the building or employees."

Barrows further said that continuing "our present level of security after Miss (Angela) Davis leaves would undermine the county's assertion that some of the security is attributable to her trial and presence."

Social Security Hike Delay Attempt Fails

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate rejected today a proposal to delay for one year the $3 billion increasein social security taxes which is to take effect Jan. 1.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Wis., sponsor of the proposal, argued that the social security tax increase would just about wipe out for most low income families the effect of the 1972 income tax cuts approved by the Senate Friday. That cut is to be achieved — if the House goes along — by increasing the income tax personal exemption to $800 for income earned in 1972 and future years. This was more than President Nixon advocated as a spur to the economy.

Opponents of Mondale's amendment to the tax bill said it would nearly exhaust the surplus in the social security trust fund and make it difficult for the Senate to vote higher social security benefits early next year.

The Mondale proposal was killed by a 41-25 vote. Mondale said his purpose was to defer the social security tax increase in order to stimulate the economy by putting more money in consumers' pockets.

That increase would raise taxes for workers who earn more than $7,800 a year by a maximum of $62.40. Their employers would have to pay an equal amount.

The increase is achieved by applying the Social Security tax to the first $9,000 of earnings instead of the first $7,800.

The higher personal exemption voted Friday will mean a $50 tax cut for an average family of four which has $12,000 in taxable income left after exemptions and deductions are subtracted from gross income.

For families with larger incomes, the saving would be larger. For poorer families, the saving would be less.

As the bill now stands, still subject to amendments, the personal exemption, now $650, would rise to $675 for 1971

It's Official: Santa Clara Gets Angela

By MARY LEYDECKER

Angela Davis must go to Santa Clara County for her murder-kidnaping-conspiracy trial, a judge ruled yesterday in Marin Superior Court.

After two days of testimony, Judge Richard E. Arnason said that, although evidence had been presented that "Santa Clara County is not totally free from bias and prejudice," he had heard nothing to indicate Miss Davis could not get a fair trial there.

The testimony, which he described as having a "certain vagueness," did not meet legal requirements of "establishing a reasonable likelihood" that she cannot get a fair trial in Santa Clara County, he said.

Arnason shifted the case to Santa Clara County last week after ruling that a "resonable likelihood" had been established that Miss Davis could not get a fair trial in Marin.

Miss Davis's lawyers protested the switch, holding out for their original request for San Francisco. They claimed residents of Santa Clara County were equally or more prejudiced than Marinites against blacks, communists and militants.

Several witnesses from the peninsula county testified about discrimination in housing, racial polarization and concern over costs of the trial. A copy of the San Jose Mercury with a two-inch-high headline saying "Angela Expensive" was shown in court yesterday.

Arnason yesterday ordered the case transferred in 10 days. It was unknown whether the trial will be scheduled in San

Property Owners Chief Lashes Conservationists

By DAVID DIETZ

The new president of the Marin Property Owners Association lashed out at conservationists in general and proposals for restricted use of Point Reyes National Seashore in particular yesterday at the group's annual meeting. (See other story, page 7.)

Novato businessman Richard P. Nave viewed conservationists as "annointed. . .lobbyists who believe God sent them on earth to tell the rest of us how to live," and criticized their appeals for up to a 33,000-acre wilderness area in the 57,000-acre national seashore.

It and other proposed use restrictions, he said, meant "no family fun" and that the "park is to be preserved for wood ticks" and hikers "with the class ring, club shirt, $40 boots and mahogany backpacks."

"Did you ever try to put your grandmother in a pack?" he asked. "I can't."

Nave — whose luncheon audience at Dominic's Harbor Restaurant in San Rafael included a leading Marin conservationist, Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael — endorsed the present National Park Service master plan, which calls for a wilderness area of 5,150 acres in the Bear Valley-Mount Wittenberg area. And he demanded a balance of uses to insure maximum public enjoyment.

The seashore was provided at high cost to taxpayers, Nave said, and belonged to "all the people of the United States," not simply limited-interest groups.

Proposals to limit auto access to the seashore and to remove cars from the park altogether are unrealistic, Nave said. While other forms of transportation may minimize traffic impact, he said, it's time "that some planners realized that pogo sticks, unicycles, rocket sleds and skunk trains are not going to replace the auto."

Amid concern over the environmental impact of a proposed east-west parkway near the headlands, Nave called for an "excellent highway" to feed the seashore.

Nave, whose family owns and operates Nave Lanes and Nave Shopping Center, later switched his attack from conservation-

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Suez Could Reopen

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Egypt can clean up the Suez Canal and reopen it to international shipping at any time as long as Israel is not required "to do anything," Israeli Deputy Premier Yigal Allon said today.

Allon was interviewed on Israel Broadcasting's English language program "This Week" about reports from Washington that Israel will let Egypt clear the canal, closed and clogged by disabled ships since 1967.

Allon's remarks came as the semiofficial newspaper Al Ahram said in Cairo that Egypt will urge the United Nations to impose economic and arms sanctions against Israel if it refuses to withdraw from occupied Arab lands.

Israel has indicated it is willing to pull back in some areas but insisted on retaining strategic positions such as the Golan Heights in Syria and the old city of Jerusalem.

Prisoners Riot

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI)— Several hundred inmates rioted at the state reformatory Friday, causing extensive damage and injuring at least six prison staff employes, officials said.

"We have no idea what caused the uprising," said Brown County Sheriff Norb Froelich who was called along with 80 of his deputies to help quell the violence.

"All we know is that it started in the mess hall and there is severe damage to some physical areas inside the prison," he said.

One report said some prisoners blamed the outbreak on rumors circulating through the prison that guards were beating inmates. Prison officials would not comment on the report.

The trouble broke out about 4:45 p.m. and lasted about 1 12 hours.

Indira Returns

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi today returned from a three-week tour of Western capitals and said a peaceful solution to the tensions between India and Pakistan "is exercising my mind and also the minds of world leaders."

The prime minister said her trip to six Western nations, including the United States, had resulted in a better understanding abroad of the situation in East Pakistan. But she could not say how long it would be before some solution was found.

Alioto's Trial

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto Friday completed three days of testimony at trial of a $2.3 million civil lawsuit against him and will return Monday for at least several days more.

Alioto's free-wheeling answers — which several times strayed far enough from the questions to cover subjects his attorneys had tried unsuccessfully to introduce earlier — appeared occasionally to annoy Judge Donald L. Gaines. Gaines told Alioto Friday, "When I get lawyers on the stand I always have problems and you're no exception."

In the suit the State of Washington and 12 publicly owned utilities seek refund of a $2.3 million fee they paid Alioto for serving as their attorney in antitrust suits in the 1960s before he became mayor.

Machinegun Death

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Police sought help from abroad today trying to discover why a young Dutch sailor was machine-gunned to death as he sat in a Belfast dentist's waiting room.

A spokesman for the Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC), Northern Ireland's police force, said Interpol, the International Police Organization, had been called into the investigation.

The death of the 18-year-old Dutch sailor brought to 126 the number of persons to die this year in Northern Ireland bloodshed where the IRA and minority Roman Catholics have been battling protestants and the army over religious and secular issues.

Chinese Thank-Yous

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — It's been business before pleasure for the new Communist Chinese delegation to the United Nations.

Since their arrival Thursday they have been busy paying thank you calls on delegations who led the battle to get them into the United Nations and to U.N. officials.

Their first courtesy call, shortly after their arrival, was on the Albanian delegation to the United Nations. The Albanians sponsored the resolution that put Communist China in the world body.

The Chinese also have called on the Romanians, the Yugoslavs and the Nepalese, to name just a few. The calls were continuing over the weekend until all of the "friendly missions" have been visited.

Troops Flee

PHNOM PENH (UPI) —Four understrength battalions of Cambodian troops abandoned the besieged town of Rom long about 60 miles north of Phnom Penh today while Communist guerrillas attacked the outskirts of the capital, cutting commercial communications with the outside world.

Phnom Penh was cut off from outside commerical contact for more than 12 hours by heavy fighting at Kambaul, 12 miles southwest of the capital, where the post and telegraph international transmitters are located.

Cambodian high command spokesman Lt. Col. Am Rong said the village of Rom long was abandoned by government forces engaged in an 18-day battle against the Communists. About 1,000 Cambodian troops—some 40 of them wounded —had been fighting to hold the village while a 20,000-man support column tried to link up with their embattled comrades.

A RECORD ABUILDING

Those two fellows peeking through the window in the background probably are a little envious of the fellow in the foreground. He's barber Guy Mudd of St. Louis and, after already setting speed and endurance haircutting standards, wants to set "a new and different kind of record." So, Mudd is shaving the legs of women — lots of them. He figures that even if only 100 girls show up, he'll have his record. He uses an electric shaver to avoid nicks.

Israel, Egypt Huddle Now A Must: Rogers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State William P Rogers for the first time has publicly called for Egypt and Israel to engage in "negotiations in close proximity" to promote a Middle East peace settlement.

"The practical fact is that the discussions between the parties have reached the stage where differences are difficult to rectify by means of negotiations at a distance," Rogers said Friday. "What is required are negotiations in close proximity so that the parties can exchange thoughts quickly."

In an address to the 62nd national convention of Sigma Delta Chi, a journalistic fraternity, Rogers also disclosed that the Nixon administration "was apprehensive that war could break out between India and Pakistan in the next few days."

Officials were following with great care intelligence reports from the subcontinent telling of border clashes between Indian and Pakistani forces along the border of Tripura state where it joins East Pakistan.

Rogers, it was understood, during the last few weeks has made an effort behind the scenes to get Egypt and Israel into closer contact, possibly by setting up his right-hand man, Joseph J. Sisco in a New York hotel to shuttle between delegations.

The Egyptian government was understood to favor the proposal, but the Israeli government has yet to transmit its reaction for such intensified exchanges.

Instead, the Israeli government has asked the United States to clarify its position on the possible shipment of Phantom F4 fighter-bombers which it has requested. Israel also reportedly wants clarification of the six points which Secretary of State Rogers outlined at the United Nations for a Mideast settlement.

Coral Sea On Its Way To Vietnam

ALAMEDA, Calif. (UPI) — The aircraft carrier Coral Sea sailed for Vietnam Friday with only a few men missing despite a campaign by antiwar groups and radicals to persuade her 4,300 crewmen to jump ship.

A Navy spokesman said only 35 men were absent which "is not unusual for a ship the size of the Coral Sea." He said half the number had been listed as missing before the sailing.

A "stop the Coral Sea" demonstration, in which protestors in cars were supposed to cause a traffic jam in front of the Alameda Naval Station to prevent sailors from boarding the ship, was thwarted by Navy police.

They waved the surprised demonstrators onto the base, over a circuitious route, and out another gate.

Another disruption, in which protestors were to leave junked cars in a highway tunnel connecting Alameda with Oakland, appeared at first to have slowed traffic in the tunnel. But it later turned out that the tieup was caused by a government vehicle which had broken down.

And a much-publicized program by 10 Bay Area churches to offer "sanctuary" to deserters, which was supported by the radical-dominated City Council in nearby Berkeley, was also unsuccessful.

Antiwar groups running the "sanctuaries" waited all morning for sailors to show up, and finally announced at noon that one had.

Fairfax Rezoning On Agenda

The Marin County Planning Commission, meeting Monday at 9 a.m. in its Civic Center chambers, again will consider rezoning an area north of Fairfax to reduce development density allowed under present zoning.

The rezoning, covering the area north of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard from Oak Manor to White's Hill, would cut potential development to about one-eighth the density allowed under the Fairfax area general plan.

Rezoning previously was approved by the commission on Sept. 27, but rejected by the board of supervisors which requested additional study.

On other matters, the commission is expected to consider a master plan change to the Roundtree townhouse development in Marinwood to allow construction of a single-family home, and is expected to consider a rezoning application to change the designation of a parcel of property near Mill Valley from single-family to multiple residential zoning.

Yuen Enters Innocent Pleas

DOWNIEVILLE (UPI) — Carter Paul Yuen, a 21-year-old San Francisco student, has entered dual pleas of innocent and innocent by reason of insanity to charges of murdering three hunting companions Sept. 25 in the gold country.

Sierra County Superior Court Judge John F. Keene ordered a psychiatric examination of the Chinatown resident after Yuen's brief court appearance Friday.

The judge set March 20 for the trial of Yuen, a San Francisco State College student. He has been indicted for murder in the gunshot slayings of three fellow deer hunters.

Flood Crews Win Creek Access

Marin County and Army Corps of Engineers survey crews won the right yesterday to enter private property along Corte Madera Creek in Ross to complete flood control work through the town.

Judge Thomas F. Keating of Marin Superior Court ruled that the crews may have access to 14 parcels of land whose owners refused to cooperated in extension of the flood control project from below Lagunitas Bridge to Sir Francis Drake Boulevard at the San Anselmo line.

The judge ruled, however, that the crews must give 48 hours posted notice or, in an emergency, a 16-hour personal notice, before they enter the properties.

Keating also ordered the flood control district to deposit $100 per parcel, or $1,400, with the court to be paid to residents if their property is damaged by the crews.

Flood control work to the Lagunitas Bridge area was completed recently, with the project to resume in the spring.

Legal Aid Unit Faces Shutdown

A growing deficit ranging into thousands of dollars may force shutdown of the Legal Aid Society of Marin, the organization has announced.

In a letter to the Marin County Board of Supervisors requesting a $5,000 contribution, the organization said it has incurred a deficit of "as much as $8,000."

"The deficit has been caused by inflationary rental increases and unexpected overhead resulting from an unusually large volume of cases handled," the society said.

A spokesman for the organization told the Independent-Journal that unless funds are found, it may have to close its doors by the end of the year. The group had an operating budget for 1971 of $63,000.

Attorney Alvin H. Goldstein Jr., chairman of the society's board of directors, said the federal Office of Economic Opportunity, which finances the society, has refused to cover added costs of operation because of Marin County's affluence.

Goldstein said that the county bar association and United Bay Area Crusade also were being approached.

The supervisors will consider the funding request during their Tuesday meeting at Civic Center.

The society, which provides legal counsel to the poor, handles about 2,500 cases per year in Marin.

During the 16 years Justice John M. Harlan served on the Supreme Court he never granted a single interview.

$12,700 Added To Sturla Fund

A Petaluma radio action to raise funds for injured teenager Robbie Sturla ended yesterday, raising a grand total of $12,780.

Sturla, 15, has been paralyzed since Sept. 14 when he was injured in a practice football game at St. Vincent's High School, Petaluma. He is a patient at Santa Clara Rehabiliation Center, San Jose, where treatment costs may run as high as $6,000 per month.

Yesterday, the auction's final day on radio station KTOB was extended from the normal one hour to more than three so that all donated items could be sold. The one-day sale brought $3,930 to bring the three-week auction total to $12,780.

"It was simply a fantastic response," said Michael Gonzalez, athletic director at the high school. "We had secretly hoped for $7,500, but this is just amazing."

Total donations for Sturla are nearing $20,000, according to Gonzalez.

Hijacker Poleaxed; 6-Hour Ordeal Ends

CALGARY, Alta. (UPI)—A masked hijacker carrying more than 40 pounds of dynamite was knocked unconscious today by an Air Canada crewman wielding a fire ax. The crewman's actions 3,000 feet in the air ended a bizarre six-hour hijacking which skipped back and forth over the U.S.-Canadian border.

The hijacker, reported in fair condition today with a possible skull fracture, was putting on a parachute to bail out of the DC8 over Calgary when he was struck by the ax.

The hijacker, carrying a shotgun in addition to the dynamite, took control Friday night of the Calgery to Montreal flight carrying 123 persons. Claiming to be a member of the Irish Republican Army, the man demanded $1.5 million and a free passage to Ireland.

After landing in Great Falls, Mont., the man accepted $50,000 ransom. The plane took off, landed again at Great Falls, and the man let the passengers go unharmed. But he ordered the plane with its five-member crew to take off again. Indecision on the part of the hijacker led the plane back and forth across the border before he apparently decided to jump.

"The guy had a parachute and demanded to be allowed to jump out at 3,000 feet and said if the crew would not open the emergency window, he would blow off the tail of the plane," an Air Canada official said.

The official said that as the hijacker was preparing to jump, the pilot, Capt. Vernon Ehman, 42, "went into a back cabin with him and the guy put down his gun to put on the parachute.

"As he did that, the pilot jumped him and a purser came up behind him and let him have it with a fire ax. The captain held him as the purser hit him."

Flight 812 made its first landing at Great Falls after the hijacker had taken over 40 miles west of Winnepeg, Man. There it was refueled and the $50,000 was handed to the hijacker by a policewoman. The money was later recovered.

The plane then took off for a scheduled stop in Regina, Sask., to let the 114 passengers aboard disembark. The plane did not land in Regina, however, but turned back and set down in Great Falls again where the passengers and three of the nine crew members were set free.

On its second takeoff from Great Falls, Air Canada officials said the hijacker wanted to be taken to New York City before proceeding to Ireland.

SECURITY

County, although defense attorneys want it held in San Francisco.)

Barrows, who said government would function better and the Civic Center would be a better place to work if the checkpoints were eliminated, posed two questions for the supervisors: Will elimination of security checkpoints generate a serious threat to lives and property in the Civic Center? And should the present level of building security be considered as normal, with no real hope of returning to previous conditions?

Among other "pertinent considerations," he listed insurance rates, the forthcoming trial of six San Quentin Prison inmates involved in the August escape attempt, public and employee irritation over the constant checks upon entering the buildings, weekend closure of the buildings as a hindrance to employees and weekend closing of the main branch of the county library.

He also said the proposed reduction of security is opposed by all superior court judges.

NAVE

ists to the proposed countywide master plan, saying the proposal would "bankrupt us all."

The plan would restrict development largely to the county's eastern corridor, envisioning extensive blocks of open space.

"Who's going to pay for it?" Nave asked. He observed that the plan, which recently underwent a series of public hearings, would "confiscate property through zoning" and cautioned his audience that "many of you would find yourselves in the park business without compensation."

The plan, he said, is "doomed to failure."

Nave took over the presidency from Rex Silvernale of San Rafael, who bowed out with a reminder to the association to exert its muscle since members represented more than half the county's assessed valuation.

Other new officers are Bill Colbert, Walter F. Freitas, Carlos Gonzalez and Boyd Stewart, vice-presidents; Alfred Grossi, secretary, and David G. Stephens, treasurer.

Fifty-nine directors also were chosen.

TRIDENT

published reports linking the pair to the Mafia are correct. He conceded, however, that the Justice Department's Organized Crime Unit had assisted in the investigation.

Three armed men garbed in wetsuits and SCUBA gear entered the Trident in the early morning hours of Oct. 25, handcuffed two cleaning men and then opened a safe with blowtorches.

The men communicated with one or more lookouts with walkie-talkies during the two-hour operation. They left with about $30,000 in weekend receipts after failing to open a second safe containing coins.

According to the chief, the "pieces began falling together" last week after a Sausalito resident called with a tip. Wright said the man, an insomniac, had been awake on the morning of Oct. 25 and had seen a 27-foot cabin cruiser lying off the Trident. He was able to supply officers with an identifying number, and the yellow-and-white-striped vessel was traced to Robert Tegay of San Francisco.

Wright said the boat — its name was unknown by the chief — was found docked at San Francisco's Marina Green and Tegay gave police permission to search it. On board they found two acetylne welding tanks.

Tegay told officers he had loaned the boat to Devaney on the night in question.

Wright said the two cleaning men who were handcuffed at the robbery scene identified Ettleman and Devaney through photographs.

Evidence supplied by other police departments and state and federal investigators showed where the two men lived, and warrants for their arrests were obtained Thursday afternoon, Wright said.

The chief said much of the credit in solving the case was due to "two persistent detectives," from his department, especially William Palmini, who, he said, put in 140 hours on the case.

Wright said officers were tipped off to the identities of the criminals early in the investigation through the method in which they opened the safe. The fact that they used torches and "lots of water" as a coolant suggested that they were responsible, he said.

Both Devaney and Ettleman have prior records for safe burglary, Wright said, and both have cases pending in San Diego County in connection with a market safe robbery there.

The chief didn't know how many men may be involved in the safecracking ring and had no comment on whether other arrests were immiment.

ECONOMY

said Friday large industries could raise prices to cover the pay increases coming due in the next few weeks without notifying the Price Commission in advance for its approval.

However, the council said, the price increases still would be subject to the general 2.5 per cent yardstick.

Government officials pointed out federal employes a'so were exempted during World War II and the Korean conflict.

The 2.9 million member military force will get an almost immediate $2.4 billion pay raise of about 15 per cent —nearly three times the Pay Board's guidelines. Congress voted the raise in an effort to attract an all-volunteer armed force by mid-1973, which would allow termination of the draft.

The 1.4 million civilian federal employes won't get their raises until next July 1. The civilian raises were due Jan. 1, but were pushed back six months by Nixon.

Civilian raises will total $2.6 billion and represent a 5.5 per cent increase, matching the Pay Board guidelines.

The council also:

—Exempted workers making less than the federal minimum wage or $1.60 an hour from long-term economic controls.

—Ruled life insurance and annuity premiums but not health and accident insurance would be exempt from controls.

While civilian federal pay raises will be delayed until mid-1972, in-grade, merit and longevity increases will be allowed to take effect immediately.

Weapon Withdrawal Plea Made By Sato

TOKYO (UPI) —Prime Minister Eisaku Sato has asked Treasury Secretary John B. Connally for U.S. assurances nuclear weapons will be withdrawn from Okinawa, Japanese government sources said today.

Connally, who left for the United States today, said he would carry the request to President Nixon.

Mariner Nears Its Mars Rendezvous

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — American's Mariner 9 spacecraft raced toward an unprecedented orbit around Mars and its raging dust storm late today, followed by two larger Russian probes expected to try to land later this month.

The U.S. planetary explorer took a final series of approach pictures from 130,000 to 70,000 miles out before preparing for the critical braking maneuver designed to place it in an orbit lasting decades.

Mariner 9's small rocket motor was programmed to fire at 7:17 A.M. EST for 15 minutes — 20 seconds to slow it from 10,917 miles per hour to 8,322 MPH — enough to place the spacecraft in the grip of Mortian gravity.

If the motor fails to fire for at least 12 minutes, Mariner 9 will whip around the planet and soar into an eternal orbit around the sun.

The 2,193-pound spacecraft accelerated rapidly toward Mars on the last leg of its curving 248-million mile, 167-day journey.

It was the most accurate interplanetary course ever followed by an American spacecraft. The two Russian craft, each weighing more than 10,000 pounds, are expected to reach Mars later this month, possibly next weekend. Dr. Carl Sagan, a noted Cornell University astronomer and member of the Mariner scientific team, said Friday night he understood in talks with Soviet scientists the two spacecraft were equipped to enter Mars' thin atmosphere and attempt a landing.

Sagan also said the Russians told him the two landers will carry a flammable material designed to be triggered on radio command to destroy any earth germs in the spacecraft after the instruments complete their Martian studies.

One of Mars, most tantalizing questions is whether it harbors some primitive form of life. Mariner 9's orbital studies may be able to tell more about the possibilities of life existing there, but the satellite will not be able to detect living things. Sagan said he understood the Russian probes do not carry biological instruments.

Mariner 9 radioed back its second series of scientific approach pictures Friday night. They showed that the dust storm under way since September, was still obscuring most features on the red planet.

The photographs displayed Mars as it appeared from 325,000 to 160,000 miles away and a portion of the south polar cap of dry ice appeared in some shots. For the first time, the edge of the frost cap seemed to be irregular rather than circular. Some of the pictures also had a large dark spot which rotated with the planet and scientists said this might be a high point near an area called Nix Olympica on Mars. There was speculation that a mountain might be piercing the dust clouds or disturbing wind patterns to open up the dusty haze.

Mariner 9's planned orbit will take it within 750 miles of Mars every 12 hours to give the spacecraft's twin cameras and other instruments a detailed view of the Martian surface. Mariner is designed to operate for a minimum of 90 days and map 70 per cent of Mars.

NIXON

veloped the capability to handle the situation themselves." He repeated earlier statements that the American offensive role in Vietnam has been concluded and that U.S. troops are now in defensive positions.

On other subjects Nixon said:

—There is a possibility of "some bulge" in the inflation rate when the wage-price freeze ends at midnight, but he described decisions of both the pay board and price commission as "very sound" and "very realistic." He said he believed the target of holding wage increases to 5.5 per cent is an achievable goal and that inflation will be cut in half by the end of next year.

—Persons with investments in the stock market should not sell. "I strongly advise anybody who invests to invest on the long term, not the short term." He predicted again that 1972 "will be a very good year" and that there will be a new prosperity based on more jobs in peacetime production.

—Progress will be made toward an agreement in the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) with the Soviet Union. But he said it was "highly improbable" that the talks will reach complete accord on restricting offensive and defensive weapons by the end of this year.

—Reported a "conscious decision" had been made not to send combat troops or military advisors into Cambodia for fear of falling into a Vietnam-style trap. He said "Cambodia is the Nixon doctrine in its purest form."

Nixon said future troop withdrawals would be announced at shorter intervals.

"As we get closer to the end, if we are going to maintain any negotiating leverage, the withdrawal periods will be somewhat shorter," Nixon said.

Nixon cautioned it would "not be well" to speculate about what effect his visits to Peking and Moscow would have on Vietnamese Communist negotiators.

But, he added, "we have not given up on the negotiating front."

Jose or Palo Alto, but Santa Clara County officials seemed to be leaning toward the latter because there are no jail facilities for women in San Jose.

Miss Davis's chief attorney, Howard Moore Jr., said yesterday he was undecided whether to appeal Arnason's ruling immediately or whether to renew the motion for change of venue when the case is moved.

Another of her attorneys, Margaret Burnham, observed that the judge seemed to have picked out the Bay Area county "with the fewest blacks" when he chose Santa Clara.

It was learned that Arnason had made his choice after the state judicial council surveyed 11 Northern California counties to determine which had the least court congestion.

The judicial council also had recommended Contra Costa and San Joaquin counties, it was learned.

Miss Burnham said the judge had acted unconstitutionally by considering merely court calendars, and not taking into consideration the degrees of prejudice in various counties.

Tiburon Council Meets Monday

The Tiburon City Council, meeting in adjourned session at 7:30 p.m. Monday at city hall, will consider levying a one-time property development tax.

The tax, also called a bedroom tax, would apply to all new construction.

Also on the agenda is consideration of leasing additional space for city offices and approval of a master plan for 36 apartments of Marinero Circle.

income and to $800 for income earned in 1972 and thereafter.

A taxpayer subtracts the exemption for himself and each of his dependents from his gross income in calculating his taxable income.

The House-passed tax bill calls for a $750 exemption for 1972 and thereafter, as Nixon recommended.

A House-Senate conference committee must accept the higher figure before it is enacted. That committee's job is to reconcile differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill.

Thirty-eight Democrats and only two Republicans voted for the higher exemption; 28 Republicans and nine Democrats voted no.

But by a two-vote margin, the administration won the victory it considered most crucial. A 37-35 vote turned back a two-pronged proposal by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., which would have:

—Repealed the more liberal business depreciation rules sought by the Treasury to save corporations about $2 billion a year in taxes for decades to come.

—And used that money in 1971 to allow every taxpayer to subtract from what he owes in 1971 taxes $25 for himself and $25 for his spouse —a one-shot $1.8 billion tax reduction.

The administration feared the effort to kill the liberalized depreciation schedule, known as "Asset Depreciation Range," and a matter of fierce debate both for what it does and how it is achieved.

Last January, President Nixon announced the ADR rules, designed to save corporate taxpayers $36 billion over the next 10 years and billions more in future decades.

A number of Democrats said the administration action putting ADR into effect was unconstitutional since the Constitution reserves for Congress the power to alter tax rates. The White House said it had acted under authority extended it by Congress.

As a way out, the House Ways and Means Committee wrote a version of ADR into the tax bill. It did not go as far as the administration's original plan, but its constitutionality was beyond challenge.

The administration's bill, as approved by the House, cuts business and individual taxes by an estimated $15.5 billion over the next three years with the aim of stimulating consumer spending, business modernization and export activity.

Labor May Demand 1-Year Wage Pacts

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—The president of the Retail Clerks Association has indicated organized labor may demand one-year contracts in an effort to recoup wages lost during the period of economic controls.

"We definitely are thinking along these lines at the moment," said James T. Housewright, head of the 550,000-member Retail Clerks Union.

Housewright and Floyd Smith, chief of the Machinists Union, were among the early arrivals Thursday of labor leaders gathering here for next week's AFL-CIO convention.

Housewright said if his union members couldn't regain wages lost during the economic freeze, "we'll consider the short-term contract to gain relief as quickly as possible when controls are lifted."

Smith said he felt it was unlikely that the five labor members of the National Pay Board would walk out to protest the 5.5 per cent wage increase ceiling set earlier this week by the board.

"We feel pretty strongly that we have to stay there for the protection of our members," said the boss of the one-million member Machinists Union.

Smith added that the 5.5 per cent wage hike ceiling didn't come as a surprise to the labor members of the board because "you don't sit in a meeting and not get a feeling of what they're going to peg it to."

The Machinists Union president also said that while he felt the Phase Two of the President's economic program may help slow inflation, it stopped short of helping solve the nation's unemployment problem.

Oil Talks Will Resume This Month

VIENNA (UPI)—The major oil-exporting nations resume talks with Western oil companies later this month to offset losses caused by the "de facto devaluation of the U.S. dollar," the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) said Friday.

A statement issued by OPEC headquarters said OPEC experts will meet representatives of Western oil companies in Vienna Nov. 22 "to develop and analyze facts and other data relating to the external purchasing power of member countries' oil revenues and to assess the loss to the per barrel revenues of members as a result of the recent monetary development and the de facto devaluation of the U.S. dollar."

OPEC had approved a plan to start negotiations for oil price hikes at its last meeting in Beirut Sept. 22. A first round of talks, with oil company representatives, however, ended without results in Teheran earlier this week.

Last February, the Persian Gulf nations succeeded in getting increases in Texas and royalties amounting to $1.2 billion this year alone. In return, they promised to hold the price line for the next five years.

But, in September, OPEC decided "to seek ways and means to offset any adverse effect on the per barrel real income of member countries resulting from the international monetary developments."

The OPEC member nations are Algeria, Lybia, Iran, Venezuela, Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Abu Dhabi, Kuwait, Indonesia and Nigeria.

Cycle Gang Killers Are Sentenced

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Fourteen motorcycle gang members who pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the killing of four rival gang members were sentenced today, 11 of them to 10 month jail terms.

Eleven of those sentenced have been in jail since last March when the killings occurred and will get credit for time already served. They will serve the balance of their sentences in the Cuyahoga County workhouse.

The other three, who surrendered about a month ago, were sentenced to the workhouse until next Feb. 7, 1972.

Common Pleas Judge Frank J. Gorman also placed all 14 on two years probation and ordered that they share the court costs.

"I believe this is the only way substantial justice can be served," Gorman said. "I believe these are reasonable sentences under the circumstances."

The 14 were charged following a brawl between members of the Hell's Angels and the Breed motorcycle gangs at a cycle trade show here March 6.

Among those sentenced to 10 month terms was Russell Beyea, 29, of Van Nuys, Calif.

Yablonski Killer Gets The Electric Chair

WASHINGTON, Pa. (UPI)—Aubran W. "Buddy" Martin, 23, was sentenced Saturday to death in the electric chair for his part in the New Year's Eve, 1969, slayings of United Mine Workers (UMW) official Joseph A. "Jock" Yablonski, his wife and daughter.

A jury of seven women and five men, which on Friday found Martin guilty of first degree murder, met again at 10:26 a.m., EST, today and needed only 40 minutes to decide on the penalty. It had the choice of death or life imprisonment.

Martin, of Cleveland, Ohio, was the first of five defendants to be brought to trial in the triple slaying.

He sat coatless, at the defense table and stared at the jury as Foreman Frank Costello, a former coal miner, handed the jury's decision to Judge Charles Sweet.

The trial judge read the decision: "We the jurors impaneled in the above case, having heretofore determined that the defendant is guilty of first degree murder, do hereby fix the penalty at death."

Martin said not a word and displayed no emotion as Judge Sweet repeated the jury's findings three times, each time mentioning the names of the three victims. The judge made no other comment and dismissed the jury.

The judge, on whom the verdict was binding, will set an execution date, but Martin's ultimate fate still was uncertain.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp, whose term of office runs until Jan. 1, 1975, has said there would be no executions while he is governor.

Under Pennsylvania law, a jury which returns a verdict of first degree murder must deliberate again and decide on one of two sentences —death or life imprisonment.

Martin's trial, which began Nov. 1 with selection of a jury, left unanswered the question of who ordered the slayings and paid the killers $5,000.

The Yablonskis were shot to death in their beds in their home at nearby Clarksville, Pa., Dec. 31, 1969—three weeks after Yablonski was defeated in an election for the UMW presidency by the incumbent president, W. A. "Tony" Boyle, after an unusually bitter and violence-marked campaign.

Yablonski had been the leader of an insurgent group within the UMW.

The other defendants in the slayings were Claude E. Vealel, 27, Cleveland, who made a confession after his arrest; Paul E. Gilly, 37, Cleveland, and his wife, Annette, 31, and Annette's father, Silous Huddleston, 62, of LaFollette, Tenn., president of a small UMW local composed of pensioned coal miners.

Martin denied he took part in the killings. He said he sat in an automobile outside the Yablonski home while Gilly and Vealey went inside.

Prosecutor Richard Sprague said Gilly would be the next to be brought to trial, some time in January.

According to Vealey's confession, Gilly was their leader in the assassination plot.

The state charged Huddleston and his daughter funneled the payoff money from unknown persons.

The $5,000 was split among Gilly, Vealey and Martin, who were accused of the actual killings.

Bar Owner Fined In Assault

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A Kent Woodlands man who is a part owner of a Tenderloin bar was fined $2,500 in U.S. District Court yesterday for assaulting an Internal Revenue Service agent.

Milton Mohr, 40, of 296 Crown Road, was found guilty last month of assaulting and interfering with two federal agents who had gone to his home May 3 to serve a subpoena growing out of an investigation of organized crime in the Tenderloin.

"It seems to me he had his fun and now he has to pay for it," Judge Thomas J. Clary said yesterday as he fined Mohr and also placed him on probation for one year.

Mohr is president of West-Ent Inc., which owns the Mocambo Bar.

Arraignment In Hit-Run Charge

David G. Taft, 24, of Larkspur, has been arraigned on charges of marijuana possession, drunken driving and hit-and-run driving.

He was stopped on Highway 101 by Corte Madera police on Nov. 7 and was turned over to Larkspur police because there was evidence Taft's car had been in an accident in Larkspur.

Taft is to plead to the charges on Nov. 18.

Environment Awards Won By Conservancy

The Nature Conservancy has won one of six merit awards presented by the San Francisco Bay Area Council in its annual environmental awards contest.

The conservancy was commended for obtaining key preserve acreage in the Bay Area, including the 556-acre Wheelwright property in Southern Marin.

Park-Rec Panel Will Study Archery Plea

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Commission is considering a request by the Northwood Bowmen's Association to locate an archery range on city-owned property in Black Canyon.

The commission is expected to discuss the request again at a meeting Dec. 9. Harold G. Mayfield of the association told the commission Thursday night the site had been chosen because the present range in Santa Venetia is too expensive to lease.

Parks and Recreation Director Andrew J. Snyder Jr. told Mayfield that archery was one of the uses considered when the city purchased the land but that no master plan has been developed for the area.

In other action, the commission heard a request from Scott Jones, Glenwood School Parent-Teacher Association president, that a recreation program be held next year for East San Rafael students attending Santa Venetia Middle School.

The commission also plans to discuss this matter again at the December meeting.

A $300,000 Gift From Howard Hughes

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI)—A $300,000 check from industrialist Howard Hughes was delivered Friday to the Board of Regents for the University of Nevada Medical School.

Attorney James Wadsworth, a lawyer for the Hughes Tool Co., presented the cashiers check to Regent Chairman Harold Jacobsen minutes before the board convened its regular meeting.

Careening Car Kills Six; Driver Is Held

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (UPI) —A car driven by a man with no driver's license careened through a busy downtown intersection at noon Friday "mowing people down like grass." Six persons were killed and nine injured.

Hundreds of people were in the area during lunch hour when the car swerved from a congested street into a group of persons along a one-block stretch.

A policeman said the auto "mowed people down like grass."

"There were several pairs of empty shoes that people had been knocked out of," said radio newsman Bill Clark, one of the first persons on the scene. "There was blood all over the sidewalks."

The driver of the car, James Anderson, 30, Youngstown, was not injured and was taken into custody.

"Anderson had no drivers license on him and we are charging him with driving without an operators license," Youngstown police said today. "He's also being held on an open charge pending investigation of the accident."

Police said Anderson started "shaking and sweating" in his jail cell Friday night and was taken to Youngstown Southside Hospital where he was reported in "fair" condition.

"It almost seemed like he was having a seizure," a policeman said. "We don't know if he has any background of epilepsy."

The dead were identified as Joseph LeGree, 68; Al Satterwhite, 42; Leetonia Williams, 12; Mrs. Ortha Hoffman, 79; Gloria Bankston, 30, and Eunice Foster, 60, all of Youngstown.

The owner of a restaurant on the street where the accident occurred, Robert Cahill, described what he saw:

" A car went by my window quite fast and I saw a lot of dust and glass and heard screams.

"I went outside the door and noticed people laying on the sidewalk. I started to go up the sidewalk and the first person I came to looked like he was in shock. He was laying up on his elbow. The next person I saw seemed to be dead. Then I saw a lady who was also dead. I covered her body, somebody brought out a sheet.

"There was one man bleeding from the nose and mouth. I turned him sideways because it looked like he was drowning in his own blood."

The car, which traveled out of control for about 500 feet, went from the street, onto a sidewalk and slammed against the sides of buildings before stopping.

New Panel Member For Gallinas CSD

An incumbent was reappointed and a new member named Thursday night to the Gallinas Village Community Services District board.

Secretary Marguerite F. Clark said incumbent Herbert C. Belben Jr., who originally had planned to retire, changed his mind and was renamed to a new term. The new director is Fred Schroeder of 736 Estancia Way, sales manager for the Continental Baking Co.

Schroeder succeeds Walter Rudolph, who sought but failed to win reappointment.

A fourth candidate was an 18-year-old College of Marin student, Roff Blake.

Belben's and Rudolph's seats were up at the Nov. 2 election, but no candidate filed.

Ross Boys Hurt In Car Wreck

A 14-year-old Ross boy suffered serious facial cuts early today when a car in which he was a passenger slammed into a power pole in San Anselmo.

Mark Lavin of 11 Redwood Avenue was reported in satisfactory condition today at Marin General Hospital.

His brother, John, 16, who was driving the car, was not injured in the accident, which happened at 12:07 a.m. on San Anselmo Avenue near Madrone Avenue.

Police said the older youth apparently lost control of the car on the wet street.

Patrick On The Stand; Takes Fifth

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—"I have nothing to hide," said William Penn Patrick, then promptly took the Fifth Amendment Friday at a Federal Trade Commission hearing when he was asked about his business dealings in his cosmetic company.

Patrick, a San Rafael millionaire and one-time California gubernatorial candidate who is one of seven officers of Holiday Magic Inc. to be questioned about the firm, said:

"My life is pretty well an open book and it looks like it really is by looking at everything (all the court exhibits) here.

"And my attorneys have advised me to take a certain position which I don't like to take ... I don't want to do it but I have to do it," Patrick said.

The FTC has charged Patrick and two other company officers with violation of various parts of the Federal Trade Commission Act and the Clayton Antitrust Act, including:

—Misrepresentation of potential earnings to prospective salesmen.

—Misrepresentation of the ease with which a person can supposedly build a distributorship.

—Discrimination in prices the company charges distributors for the same products.

All seven officers appearing at the hearing have thus far taken the Fifth Amendment. The hearing began Nov. 1 before Examiner Edgar Buttle of Washington, and is expected to move on to Miami on Nov. 29; then to Detroit, Chicago and Washington over a six-month period.

Mailliard: U.S. Should Restrict Responsibilities

Congressman William S. Mailliard, supporting revival of the Senate-defeated foreign aid bill, said yesterday the U.S. should "restrict perhaps, but not abdicate" its responsibilities as a world power. (See related story, page 1.)

"It's important in this new isolationist mood not to flake out on the rest of the world," the Sixth District Republican, who represents a portion of Marin, told the Marin Property Owners Association. "It's a highly dangerous thing to do.

"As a great power, we have this responsibilty and there isn't any way to put it down."

Mailliard, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, believed the Senate was in a "strange, pixilated, peevish mood" when it rejected American's omnibus foreign aid package last month. But, he said, "they woke the next morning in a little more somber period."

He noted a growing effort to revive at least some features of the program, lamenting that funds earmarked for such areas as child relief, aid to Communist-threatened countries and the international antidope effort had died with the bill's defeat.

Mailliard believed that most people would be inclined to reject the program as a whole, but would take a different view of pieces of the total package.

On another subject, Mailliard told the association's annual luncheon he was worried over prolonged extension of the 10 per cent surcharge on most imports — a feature of President Nixon's new economic policies.

"If it goes on very long," he said, "labor and management alike are going to find it so comfortable, they're going to scream like the devil" when it's repealed.

On the other hand, he said, foreign governments won't stand for it much longer without retaliating. And before long, there would be no trade at all because of financial barriers thrown up by both American and foreign governments, he oberved.

An interested listener to Mailliard's address was Roger Boas, Democratic hopeful for Mailliard's seat, who was invited to the meeting by an association member.

Dean Martin's Gift To The State

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The state Park and Recreation Commission Friday accepted a gift of 78.9 acres of land in Topanga Canyon of the Santa Monica Mountains from entertainer Dean Martin.

The land is valued at $700,000 and brings to 3,147 acres the amount of land in the area owned by the state.

Mill Valley Mystery: Man Found In Rain

A young man found mysteriously wedged between two trees in a Mill Valley park in the pouring rain still had not regained consciousness today nor had he been identified.

Mill Valley Juvenile Offier Jeff Sousa said he received an anonymous call about 3:30 p.m. yesterday that a man was lying in Ethel Park and "might be dead."

Sousa said he found the man, who appeared to be between 21 and 25 years old, jammed between two redwood trees, unconscious and soaking wet. Sousa said the man, who had a weak pulse, was rushed to Marin General Hospital where he was reported in serious condition today in the intensive care unit.

There were no signs of violence, Sousa said, except that the man's jacket had been slashed as if by a knife.

Sousa described the man, who had no identification, as about 5-9 or 5-10, weighing 145 to 150 pounds. He has brown eyes, short brown hair, a short beard and wore brown, horn-rimmed glasses. He was dressed in a white T-shirt, black jeans and a brown simulated leather jacket.

FBI Probe Of Newsman Was 'Clumsy'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon has indicated he feels the FBI investigation of CBS correspondent Daniel Schorr was handled "in a clumsy way," according to the White House.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., said his constitutional rights subcommittee would investigate the incident.

White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told newsmen Friday that because of his concern Nixon has ordered "that whenever anyone is being considered for a government job that he always be informed beforehand and be told that the customary FBI check is being made."

The investigation of Schorr was first disclosed in Thursday's editions of The Washington Post, which said the probe was conducted mostly during the weekend of Aug. 20 and involved questioning of Schorr's friends, neighbors and employers.

The White House said Schorr was being considered for an administration environmental post. Schorr said he never was informed about the job.

Ziegler said Nixon had planned to emphasize to reporters, if asked at his Friday news conference, that "no intimidation was intended in this case and never has been, and there never will be while the President is in the White House."

But Nixon was not asked about the incident, and Ziegler told newsmen afterward the President would have outlined the new safeguards he has ordered to avoid the appearance of intimidation.

Ervin said he would summon Schorr and top administration aides to testify when the Senate panel that he chairs resumes hearings in January on freedom of the press.

"Apparently neither Schorr nor various White House officials with general responsibility in the area of recruiting were aware of any such appointment under consideration," Ervin said.

Young Crash Victim's Status Good

A 16-year-old Mill Valley boy was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital with injuries suffered in an automobile accident on Shoreline Highway.

A Forest Knolls man suffered minor injuries in another accident on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard today, the California Highway Patrol reported.

The hospital said that Charles J. Alfonso of 388 East Blithedale Avenue suffered injuries to his left hand when his brakes locked and he lost control of his car on Shoreline near Ross Drive in Tamalpais Valley about 2:40 p.m. yesterday.

The highway patrol said the car hit an embankment and rolled over. Two passengers in Alfonso's car were uninjured, patrolmen reported.

In the other accident, David T. Kircher, 21, of Arroyo Road, Forest Knolls, told the highway patrol he would see his own doctor for undisclosed injuries suffered when he failed to make a turn and went off the road on Sir Francis Drake just west of Fairfax at 2 a.m. today.

Plane Crash Survivor 'In Bad Shape'

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI)—The lone survivor of an Air Force cargo transport plane crash which killed 10 crewmen was in "very bad shape" today.

S-Sgt. Louis F. Hribar "is listed in very serious condition, but that's just about a step above critical," said a spokesman for Brooke Army Hospital's Burn Center in San Antonio, Tex., where Hribar was flown after the crash Friday of the C-130.

Hribar was flown to the burn center shortly after the cargo transport crashed on takeoff at Little Rock Air Force Base and exploded in a mass of flames, killing 10 of the 11 airmen aboard.

The Little Rock sergeant, a loadmaster on the giant aircraft, apparently was thrown clear in the crash and fought his way through the 40 foot high flames which engulfed the plane. Hribar sustained third degree burns.

4-Year-Old Dies In Burning Shed

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A 4-year-old boy was killed Friday when he became trapped in a shed filled with burning newspapers.

Authorities said Jonathan Cramer and two young companions were playing with matches in the shed behind a Latter Day Saints church. The papers had been collected by the church.

MANY MEN'S wear manufacturers are getting away from the concept of topcoats, raincoats and overcoats and are coming up with "total coats" which can go almost anywhere. The look is big and brawny, as seen in this double-breasted shearling and calfskin coat by Robert Lewis.

MEN'S WEAR

The 'Total Coat' Big On The Fashion Scene

By WALTER LOGAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—They still make raincoats, topcoats and overcoats, of course, but this year there is a growing trend toward the "total coat" which can be used for almost anything. Most of the coats are a little longer, knee length at least, and there are a lot of knits.

A big, manly, rugged look is the essence of leisurewear look for men this fall and winter, including brawny sheepskin coats. There are also outfits called pants suits but they are rugged themselves, in coats and pants made of suede and leather.

There are a lot of "looks." There is the military look in Cossack-length greatcoats in wool, suede or smooth leather. There is a warm look in raincoats with pile linings and collars for warmth. And there is a boutique look—very long and tubular coats.

There is an incredible array of fabrics for these "total coats," and there is also fur, leather and suede. The fabrics run from treated velvets through brushed denim, tweeds, rubberized cotton, moleskin, gabardine and a sharp and shiny twill. And always knits.

THERE ARE all sorts of coordinates which sometimes are really shirt suits and three quartercoats with matching trousers, usually called walking suits.

Martin Smith, a onetime Yale swim team star who ended up as president of the Robert Lewis Co., sees the rebirth of the coordinated look as a "return to a certain discipline after recent years of youthful excesses when men sought to look uninhibited and thus liberate themselves from the restraints of the Ivy League Look."

The big news at Harbor Master is its raschel warp knit fabric of fancy check pattern in a texturized Dacron polyester. It turns up in two travel coats and the manufacturer says he has ended the problems of snagging and picking in doubleknits.

One coat is a single breasted, button through coat with a split shoulder—sleeves set in in front, raglan in back and lined with satin. The other has a zip out wool and mohair liner. A cold coat has wing shoulders and a half back belt in twill trimmed in leather.

SOME OF the other things on the market:

Designer Jon Jolcin showed a trench coat in olive pigskin suede with a wide storm collar and with big bellows pockets with button flaps. Rafel Fashions showed a denim safari style, no belt, in the long tubular boutique look.

Carlo Palazii showed a navy, shaped safari coat — four flapped pockets in a wetproof twill and Jaeger showed a natural suede walking suit consisting of a double breasted trench coat with matching trousers.

Jupiter of Paris showed a felt suede midi-length coat, doublebreasted, belted, and flared, shown with coordinated jeans. And in the Cardin Boutique line there was a World War I type trench coat in moss green cotton sateen. London Fog showed a doubleknit, doublebreasted camel colored coat, eight buttons, just above the knee.

Lakeland had a series of coats that included one with a fleece lining, trim and collar and a tapestry woven outershell. Another spdctacular one had monstrous coachman's lapels in melton camel with shearling pile trim. Zero King had a double breasted coat in wool twill with mouton collar and lapel.

Van Heusen-Windbreaker introduced a sophisticated collection of jackets and matching pants to add a bit of elegance to leisure wear. Jackets ran to all lengths from short Ike jackets to below the knee lengths. The pants, called frontier flairs, naturally had a western look. Colors ran through the colors of natural foliage, from chestnut to egg plant.

Mcgregor-Doniger, Inc., used water repellant double knits for many things from ski wear to golf wear to outer coats, including some double knits that looked like corduroy. A particularly handsome coat was a ribless corduroy with a pile collar and lining, single breasted and with slashed pockets.

From Now On, Women Are 'Ms.'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Women's Wear Daily has decided to stop referring to women as "Miss" or "Mrs." in its pages and instead will refer to all females as "Ms."

A spokesman said WWD was believed to be the first national publication to make the change, one advocated by women's lib forces. The newspaper now refers to all women by their full name on first reference and thereafter switches to "Ms."

The publication said it also has dropped "Mr." for all men, including the President.

The 'Block Parent' Plan Paying Off

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — The "block parent" program aims to make it as safe as possible for children to get to and from school.

One or two volunteer parents, usually mothers, are chosen along the routes to school. These volunteers should be at home during the half hour before and after school. It is desirable to have a parent on every block, says Rollin Schneider, extension safety specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Originally the program was developed to help protect against child molestation in the larger cities, says Schneider. The block parent plan has paid off and produced an extra dividend by helping child accident victims.

Posted on the inside of the front window or door is a sign identifying the home of a block parent. The children are told to go there should trouble occur.

The block parent is not supposed to be used to break up fights, furnish rest room facility or give medical aid other than the washing of a scrape or application of a small bandage — unless it is an emergency and the child's life is at stake.

Purse Style Emphasis Made Her Fast Rise

VENICE (UPI) —Roberta di Camerino's rise to head a multi-million dollar accessories business started with purses that have since become status symbols among those in the jet set.

Mrs. di Camerino has been at it now nearly a quarter of a century. When she decided after World War II to emphasize purses instead of hats as the main accessory, Mrs. di Camerino was ahead of her time.

"Hats used to give tone to a woman's outfit," she said. "I thought the purse could become the main accessory. I made them colorful instead of utilitarian. I had luck instantly."

A story in an Italian magazine brought her a contract from Neiman-Marcus, the giant Texas department store. That launched Mrs. di Camerino internationally.

Now she has stores in five Italian cities, franchises in Switzerland, West Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands and Sweden, and sells in boutique departments in many American cities, and in Japan, Turkey, Canada, Australia and South Africa.

Her son, Ugo, 28, is an architect working on plans for the restoration of Venice. He designed her new Rome store. Her daughter, Roberta, 22, has joined the firm, which now makes umbrellas, luggage and clothing, in addition to purses. A perfume was added recently.

Select Wisely

Don't be a slave to a calorie table all your life say nutrition consultants from the Dairy Council of California. Carefully selecting foods from the four food groups, milk, meat, vegetables and fruits and breads and cereals, for each meal, reducing portions if necessary, and increasing body activity, are ways to maintain desired weight or bring about a gradual loss if necessary.

Freeze-Dried Foods Easier To Store

When food is freeze-dried the moisture does not go through a liquid stage during its removal. The moisture from fresh food is removed by first freezing and then drying the food under high vacuum conditions so that about two per cent of the original water remains.

The freeze-dried product may be stored without refrigeration and is much lighter in weight than the undried product.

THE GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Young Bride Wants To Know If Her Marriage Is On The Skids

DEAR SUE: ALSO HELEN:

I know you aren't a marriage counselor, but you're just about my age, so maybe you'll understand, Sue. And Helen —please help.

Duncan and I have been married two months and I thought we'd never fight. I thought he was the sweetest, most considerate person in the world, but I was so-o-o-o wrong.

This evening we were talking about when he'll get out of the service, and he said he might stay in and make a career of it. I always expected us to go back home where he'd work in dad's store. One thing led to another and we were both yelling, so I stormed out the front door, saying I wouldn't come back till he apologized.

Well, I stayed out in the cold for a half hour and when I looked in the window, there he was asleep on the couch — or pretending to be. So I'm now in the bedroom with the door locked, and writing my very first letter to a column. I'd go home, but it's 1,500 miles away and there's no money. Besides I'm getting the sniffles, probably from overexposure to the cold.

Does our marriage have a chance with him so darn stubborn? — JANEY

DEAR JANEY:

True, I'm not a marriage counselor, but maybe this story will make you see that Duncan wasn't any more stubborn than you, and someday you'll be laughing with your kids about that first fight. (I hope you're laughing together about it now.)

Anyway, these newlyweds got into a big hassle over some silly thing. Like you, Janey, the wife stomped outside, thinking he'd be right behind her with an apology.

Naturally, you don't stop to put on shoes or a robe when you're red hot mad, so there she stood barefooted, in her thin nightie; and it was snowing hard. She shivered (and steamed) on their tiny front porch, hopping from one foot to the other, for what seemed like hours, but wasn't. Finally she decided losing face was better than turning into an icicle, so she went in.

Guess what her husband did? Still reading his upside-down book, he remarked casually, "Oh, you're making snow ice cream? I'll take mine with maple syrup."

By the way, Janey, the marriage is still going strong over 30 years later. — SUE

DEAR JANEY:

And I can vouch for it, because guess what teenage columnist just loves telling tales about mama-collaborator?

From personal experience, I know, Janey, that the sniffles you got weren't from "overexposure to cold," but to a cold-shoulder-which warmed soon afterwards when you saw the funny side together. Right?

As for the future: talk it out, don't fight it out, but don't push for decisions until discharge-time draws closer. The present is so much more important! — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

A friend gave me a rabbit he couldn't keep. Then another guy gave me one, because I already had the hutch. My folks went along with the first rabbit. Why are they so dead against two? — RABBIT, ANYONE?

DEAR RABBIT:

Easy: They want to avoid a hare-raising experience. — SUE

DEAR R.A:

Why don't you trade one of your rabbits for a guinea pig and sidestep the population explosion? — HELEN

Single, Ply Yarns —The Differences

Single yarns are those made from a single filament or from a group of staple of filament fibers twisted together sufficiently to form the desired yarn.

Ply yarns are made by twisting together two or more single yarns and are stronger than the equivalent single yarns of the same diameter and fiber.

Cooking In 'Air'

High altitude cooking requires an increase in time for boiled foods and a change in the proportions of ingredients used in leavened foods, such as cakes and yeast bread. In some cases a change in baking temperatures may also be necessary.

Plastic Wrap For Velvet Seams

By EUNICE FARMER

Once again, I'm writing in answer to many letters concerning velvets. Yes, they are beautiful, and they are being used rather extensively in ready-to-wear. Naturally, you will be wanting to use velvet in your own wardrobe.

A friend of mine, who literally spends half a lifetime in her laboratory working out such puzzles as fabrics and sewing techniques, has given me the best tip I have had so far when working with velvet. This technique prevents two pieces of velvet from slipping which causes uneven seam ends. Also, it makes seams appear smoother. I tried it and got the best results I have been able to come up with.

Take a strip of plastic wrap or a strip of plastic from a dry-cleaner's bag, place it between the two layers of velvet (with the pile on the inside) and baste the seams together for machine stitching. Next, turn the seam to the opposite side and machine stitch the seam line, which will mean stitching through the plastic since it is firmly basted in between the two layers of velvet.

By turning your fabric to the opposite side from the side you basted, you will be stitching from the opposite direction. If you basted from the neckline down to the hem, you should machine stitch from the hem up to the neckline. After the stitching is completed, you can easily pull out the plastic from both sides of the machine stitching.

MILDRED BOWLES, Framingham, Mass., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her suggestion:

"With today's rage in tie-making, it is not difficult to make a bow tie. I made one for my husband in black satin, lined in red satin for a dinner suit. I was unable to find the hardware needed to make the adjustable part. I found a workable replacement for it by using the back hook and eye section made for a replacement on a bra. It worked perfectly, and I think it would have worked just as well on an un-tied bow tie.

DEAR EUNICE,

I neglected to take your advice about beginning early to make a winter coat. Somehow when the weather isn't cold, you think it will never get cold so you put off the things you should be taking care of. Now, winter is here, and I still don't have my coat. With time running out, can you please give me information about the easiest type of pattern to choose and the kind of fabric that will not require too much skill.

MRS. P.B.

DEAR MRS. P.B.,

Coats are actually much simpler to make than suits as a general rule. The things that take time are underlining a fabric, if it isn't heavy enough to use as it is, matching plaids, and using fabrics that are difficult to press.

I would suggest a solid melton cloth for a tailored coat. This takes top stitching and tailored details beautifully. They are new and usually don't have a definite pattern that needs matching. If you choose one with a combination of lovely colors woven together, it makes a great background for solid colored dresses to pick up any of the colors.

As to the simplest styles to look for, a Peter-Pan collar is much easier to make than a coat with a notched collar. The facing is usually cut in one with the front of the coat which eliminates a separate stitching at the front edge, which again takes time to grade your seams and do the proper pressing.

If the fabric is the right weight and keeps its shape, it will not require underlining. However, you must always use interfacing for the fronts of your coat as well as the collar. If a garment is not underlined, it is also important to place a bias strip of interfacing at the hem of the coat as well as the hem of the sleeves.

It's never too late to make your coat. In most parts of the country, you will need your coat until late spring even if the winter starts a little late. One advantage to waiting is that you will find marvelous sales on beautiful fall coatings at this time of year. You can probably end up with a much nicer piece of fabric than you originally planned because of the added savings.

Coats are fun to make and more fun to wear, so dig in with my blessings. If you think your coat needs a professional pressing, have it done before you apply your finished lining.

DEAR EUNICE,

I love the nice, smooth fitting, stand-up neckline for dresses, not a turtle neck that doubles over.

Some patterns call for this piece of the garment to be cut on the straight grain. When I do this, I don't achieve the smooth finish I like. Instead, the collar stands away from my neck and ends up with breaks in the collar. This seems to look so home-made. Any solution?

MARY T.

DEAR MARY T.,

I have found that a collar never appears as smooth or attractive when it is cut with the straight grain. I advise cutting this piece of your pattern on the true bias grain-line.

I have also found that there is usually too much fabric given for this stand-up neckline. Instead, pull it slightly as you pin in place. Baste the collar to check for the fitting before completing. You will probably find that the collar was at least an inch too long. When you have determined to exact length, you may finish the ends and apply to your dress or jacket.

May I also add that we find the soft, polyester, non-woven fleece to be ideal as an interfacing for these collars. It will give a smooth, puffy look which fills in the fabric nicely. It is washable, should you intend to wash your garment. It is also dry cleanable.

Eunice Farmer give you illustrated instructions on how to make professional looking sleeves in her booklet "All About Sleeves." To obtain your copy send 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Senators Attack Agnew

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew was the subject of an attack by two Senators Friday who suggested he begin performing his constitutional duties before accusing them of shirking theirs.

At the same time, Agnew, addressing the Northeastern Republican Conference, charged the news media was helping Democrats conduct a "total propaganda war aimed at misrepresenting" President Nixon's accomplishments.

Sens. Earnest F. Hollings, D-S.C., and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I. attacked the vice president for his speech last week condemning Democratic presidential prospects for missing the Oct. 29 vote which temporarily killed the foreign aid bill.

They said Agnew was not present for that vote and did not have the "guts" to come to the Senate any more.

Meanwhile, Agnew criticized by name the Washington Post and Newsweek magazine, claiming they were "distorting" the administration's record on the school lunch program.

And the vice president also hit the press generally for ignoring an attempt by the administration to obtain jobs for American Indians, while giving "full coverage" to a recent Democratic attack on the administration's Indian programs.

"It offers a striking object lesson in how the partisan opposition abetted by its allies in the press, has all-too-often obfuscated the constructive efforts of the Nixon administration in the domestic field," Agnew said.

Quartet Invades Radio Station

MIAMI (UPI) —Four armed and hooded Cuban refugees in green fatigues took over control of a leading Spanish-language radio station for about 10 minutes Friday night, and broadcast a tape message for Cubans to "take to the streets" to "purify" the regime of Fidel Castro.

The men, police said, were armed with automatic pistols and burst into the control rooms of WQBA-AM at 11:05 p.m., bound newsman Luis Fernandez at gunpoint, and then held a pistol to the head of talk show host Jose Alva.

They ordered Alva to play a 3 1-2 minute tape recording which conceivably could have been heard by listerners in Cuba tuned to WQBA.

63 Charged For 'Conspiracy'

MANILA (UPI) —President Ferdinand E. Marcos said today criminal charges were filed against 63 persons for conspiracy to overthrow the Philippines government.

Those charged included former army lieutenant Victor Corpus, who defected to the Communist New Peoples Army (NPA) nearly a year ago, several student leaders connected with protest demonstrations and Mila Astorga Garcia, a young woman writer for the Manila Times Sunday magazine.

A charge sheet identified 45 of the accused as "officers and or ranking members of the Communist Party of the Philippines."

All 63 were accused of conspiring "by taking arms against the government" and engaging in "urban guerrilla warfare" in an attempt to overthrow the Philippines government.

Longest Session For Legislature

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —The 1971 state legislature set an all-time record for longevity Friday as hooky-playing lawmakers celebrated by staying away in droves.

The legislature has been in session for 313 calendar days, surpassing the 1940 session by one day. Lawmakers hope to adjourn by Thanksgiving, or at least by Christmas.

Harrington Remains On Critical List

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Henry Harrington, the sixth person to survive a leap from the Golden Gate Bridge, remained in critical condition today at San Francisco General Hospital.

His wife, Freida, their son, Dan, 4, and daughter, Sandy, 11, were in seclusion at their Pacifica home.

Mrs. Harrington said her husband was depressed over his work at the Internal Revenue Service.

Barnard Completes His 8th Heart Plant

CAPETOWN, South Africa (UPI)—Dr. Christiaan Barnard performed his eighth heart transplant operation today, inserting the heart of an unidentified dead person into a 62-year-old man.

Before undergoing the operation at Capetown's Groote Schuur Hospital, recipient Lindsay Rich, who has been bedridden with heart disease, said:

"I think it is definitely worthwhile, even at my age, to get a new heart. What person at my age would not cling to the last spark of hope to lead a normal life.

"At the moment I have no life—I just exist. I would prefer death to continuing the way I am. Even a year or so of normal life would compensate for all the trouble."

Under South African law, doctors are barred from releasing the identity of the donor.

Of Barnard's seven previous heart transplant patients, two survive. They are Dirk Van Zyl, 44, and Dorothy Fisher, 39.

Remodeling Plan Approved

The Fairfax City Council approved final plans last night for remodeling city hall.

City Mgr. Robert E. Crowe said the council will advertise for bids early in December. Construction is scheduled to begin in early 1972 once rains subside.

The renovation, estimated to cost $9,000, will include raising and stabilizing a corner of the building, installing new wiring and refinishing interior walls.

Atlantic Richfield Corp. offered the reward Friday for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer or killers of the two young men.

STARS ABOVE

Mythology's Flying Horse Visible Now

By SHERMAN WALKER

Pegasus, the famous flying horse of mythology, is prominent in the sky at our 9 p.m. viewing time. The so called Great Square of Pegasus forms the body of the steed and the head, neck and forelegs are well defined but the rest of the body is missing.

The adjoining constellation makes pretty good hind legs for the animal, and it is a mystery why these weren't indluded in just one figure. They were not though, and through the ages have been classified as two different constellations.

The star at the northeast corner of the square is borrowed from Andromeda and is called Alpha Andromedae, even though on many older maps it is shown as Delta Pegasi.

To locate Pegasus in the sky, face southward at 9 p.m. and look at the region that is four-fifths of the distance up from the wouthern horizon to overhead.

The Great Square has at its corners three stars of magnitude 2 and one that is 3, but all are bright enough for easy observation. The other stars of Pegasus are mostly magnitude 4, excpet Enif at the horse's nose.

Just west of Enif is a small group of four stars forming a figure called the Little Horse. It was one of the constellations known and studied by the ancients.

Further arraignment for the six San Quentin convicts indicted for the Aug. 21 prison uprising has been continued until 9 a.m. Nov. 22.

Marin Superior Court Judge E. Warren McGuire last week set the court session for Nov. 19, but on Wednesday postponed the date until Nov. 22. He explained that one of the six accused, Fleeta Drumgo, is being tried in San Francisco for a Soledad guard killing, and this trial continues Tuesday through Friday. He therefore set the Marin appearance for a Monday.

Wrong Person Named In Story

The Independent-Journal erred Wednesday in reporting that William Stuart Brockus, 35, of 22 Dolores Street, San Rafael, had been arrested Sunday in a Francisco Boulevard parking lot with more than $9,000 of counterfeit money.

Brockus was in San Francisco jail at the time, having been arrested at home Saturday by federal agents on suspicion of passing fake bills at two San Rafael establishments last month.

Shirley Evon Neal, 27, and Billy Ray Neal, 29, both of Riverbank, Stanislaus County, were the persons arrested by federal agents Sunday after they allegedly had exchanged $9,000 in phony money for $2,500 in legitimate money on Francisco Boulevard.

Special School Panel Meeting

The third special meeting called by the Mill Valley School District to discuss complaints over the trend of education in the district will be at 8 p.m. Monday at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church, Mill Valley.

At two previous meetings parents and others complained of unstructured classes and experimental educational programs and demanded alternatives for those parents who want them.

Due for discussion Monday are options being sought by parents, how to bring about requested changes and discipline and behavior in the schools.

Policeman Pleads Innocent To Charge

Timothy Daniel O'Donnell, 31, former San Rafael police officer, has pleaded innocent to felony grand theft charges that he rolled back the odometer of cars he sold at T and D autos in Ignacio.

Preliminary hearing is set for 9 a.m. on Nov. 30.

Sausalito Artists' Work On Display

A variety of works of art fashioned by Sausalito artists will be on display at the Sausalito Art Center, 630 Nevada Street, through Nov. 26. The center is open from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily.

The works include paintings, drawings, wooden furniture, mobiles and several types of sculpture, including ceramic, glass, plastic, metal and wood.

Meeting Reset

The Terra Linda Community Services District will meet Tuesday at 9 p.m. at the Terra Linda firehouse instead of Monday as originally scheduled.

YMCA Grants

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (UPI) —Energy Minister J. J. Greene has announced the Young Men's Christian Association here will receive $14,600 from the federal government's welfare grants program. The YMCA, working with alienated youth at the neighborhood level, will provide a counselling referral service.

NO TASK FOR A RAKE

John Rucker, at the controls of a San Rafael public works loader, scoops up a hefty pile of streetside leaves for deposit in a truck and transport to a dump. The scene, on H Street, is an annual one as the city struggles to keep open catch basins during rains. Some minor flooding was reported in downtown streets earlier this week as a result of clogged basins.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

10 Days Without Water And The Chips Can Be Cashed In

A person can survive for more than two weeks without food but 10 days without water and he's had it. In a hot desert, the individual without liquids might die in less than 48 hours, especially if he perspires profusely. A loss of 10 per cent of body weight as water is disabling; 20 per cent is fatal. Water loss due to sweating can be enormous (up to three gallons) during a day or hard labor in extremely hot weather.

UNDER NORMAL conditions the amount of urine eliminated by the kidneys is equal to the liquid intake by mouth (output equals intake). The water lost in perspiration and in exhaled air is roughly equivalent to the water content in solid foods. The minimum daily liquid requirement for an adult is approximately one quart. Most of us would do better on two quarts. This would increase the water losses in urine — an excellent idea since certain waste products are excreted only by the kidneys. Water is needed as a solvent especially for the end-products of protein metabolism. Theoretically, the more proteins consumed, the more liquids we should take.

THE KIDNEYS also have the ability to maintain water balance. They eliminate the excess liquids, and if too little has been taken, they conserve as much as possible. But the consequences of drinking too little fluid is a concentrated urine which interferes with waste product excretion.

Thirst is a good index of water need. An excess intake of salt or salty foods will produce thirst to maintain the proper water and mineral balance in the body. The normal kidneys also need the additional water and mineral balance in the body. The normal kidneys also need the additional water to excrete the salt. But if the kidneys are malfunctioning, salt cannot be eliminated and water accumulates in the tissues.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

MARGINAL ULCER

R. A. writes: My husband had most of his stomach removed five years ago and was told he would not develop any more ulcers. But recently he started hemorrhaging. At the hospital, his physician found he had a marginal ulcer. How could this happen after the acid-producing sac was removed?

REPLY

When most of the stomach is removed, the remaining portion is connected to the small intestine. Now and then a new ulcer develops where these two structures join (marginal). In some instances, a marginal ulcer develops because some of the acid-producing cells remain. In others, the incision is too taut and an ulcer forms where the two surfaces were sewed together.

BREAKING POINT

W. R. D. writes: Please tell me all you can about a nervous breakdown.

REPLY

Our space limitations make this impossible. However, the following are a few of the symptoms that develop. Some victims become hyperactive and irrational. Others refuse to eat and sleep poorly. Still others become depressed, cry easily, and blame themselves for not being able to do what others seem to accomplish with so little effort. As a rule, the individual escapes reality by shutting himself up in a world of his own. This is the breaking point and represents a useful safety valve. Otherwise, the man or woman might commit suicide.

Today's Health Hint — Young people should continue exercising after they leave college so that all muscle tissue including the heart, will be maintained in good tone.

'Anti-Swindle' Bill Vetoed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill which supporters contended would have been a major step toward ending consumer swindles by non-accredited colleges has been vetoed by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

The bill by Sen. Albert Rodda, D-Sacramento, would have established a council on private post secondary schools. The council would have been able to investigate abuses by the schools and to recommend needed legislation to regulate them.

Reagan, in his veto message Friday, said "This administration has consistently resisted adding new boards and commissions unless there is an overwhelming requirement of public protection or public participation."

Bomb-Laden Truck Flips

CORNING, Calif. (UPI)—A truck-trailer rig loaded with Vietnam-bound explosives ran off Interstate 5 and overturned Friday forcing closure of a section of the highway for five hours.

Highway patrolmen said the truck's load included land mines and canisters of jellied nitroglycerine. However, a Navy ordnance team would only say the cargo was "Class A military explosives."

The patrol reopened the highway after the Ordnance team determined there would be no danger to traffic and the explosives specialists unloaded the truck.

Mythology's Flying Horse Visible Now

By SHERMAN WALKER

Pegasus, the famous flying horse of mythology, is prominent in the sky at our 9 p.m. viewing time. The so called Great Square of Pegasus forms the body of the steed and the head, neck and forelegs are well defined but the rest of the body is missing.

The adjoining constellation makes pretty good hind legs for the animal, and it is a mystery why these weren't indluded in just one figure. They were not though, and through the ages have been classified as two different constellations.

The star at the northeast corner of the square is borrowed from Andromeda and is called Alpha Andromedae, even though on many older maps it is shown as Delta Pegasi.

To locate Pegasus in the sky, face southward at 9 p.m. and look at the region that is four-fifths of the distance up from the wouthern horizon to overhead.

The Great Square has at its corners three stars of magnitude 2 and one that is 3, but all are bright enough for easy observation. The other stars of Pegasus are mostly magnitude 4, excpet Enif at the horse's nose.

Just west of Enif is a small group of four stars forming a figure called the Little Horse. It was one of the constellations known and studied by the ancients.

Further arraignment for the six San Quentin convicts indicted for the Aug. 21 prison uprising has been continued until 9 a.m. Nov. 22.

Marin Superior Court Judge E. Warren McGuire last week set the court session for Nov. 19, but on Wednesday postponed the date until Nov. 22. He explained that one of the six accused, Fleeta Drumgo, is being tried in San Francisco for a Soledad guard killing, and this trial continues Tuesday through Friday. He therefore set the Marin appearance for a Monday.

Wrong Person Named In Story

The Independent-Journal erred Wednesday in reporting that William Stuart Brockus, 35, of 22 Dolores Street, San Rafael, had been arrested Sunday in a Francisco Boulevard parking lot with more than $9,000 of counterfeit money.

Brockus was in San Francisco jail at the time, having been arrested at home Saturday by federal agents on suspicion of passing fake bills at two San Rafael establishments last month.

Shirley Evon Neal, 27, and Billy Ray Neal, 29, both of Riverbank, Stanislaus County, were the persons arrested by federal agents Sunday after they allegedly had exchanged $9,000 in phony money for $2,500 in legitimate money on Francisco Boulevard.

Special School Panel Meeting

The third special meeting called by the Mill Valley School District to discuss complaints over the trend of education in the district will be at 8 p.m. Monday at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church, Mill Valley.

At two previous meetings parents and others complained of unstructured classes and experimental educational programs and demanded alternatives for those parents who want them.

Due for discussion Monday are options being sought by parents, how to bring about requested changes and discipline and behavior in the schools.

Policeman Pleads Innocent To Charge

Timothy Daniel O'Donnell, 31, former San Rafael police officer, has pleaded innocent to felony grand theft charges that he rolled back the odometer of cars he sold at T and D autos in Ignacio.

Preliminary hearing is set for 9 a.m. on Nov. 30.

Sausalito Artists' Work On Display

A variety of works of art fashioned by Sausalito artists will be on display at the Sausalito Art Center, 630 Nevada Street, through Nov. 26. The center is open from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily.

The works include paintings, drawings, wooden furniture, mobiles and several types of sculpture, including ceramic, glass, plastic, metal and wood.

Meeting Reset

The Terra Linda Community Services District will meet Tuesday at 9 p.m. at the Terra Linda firehouse instead of Monday as originally scheduled.

Curtis Case Turns Into Rights Issue

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—What constitutes a fair standard for admission to college, for students in general and athletes in particular?

That, it turns out, is the question Judge Albert C. Wollenberg will have to decide in the next two weeks in U.S. District Court.

What started out Friday as a simple challenge by University of California football players Isaac Curtis and George Brumsey of the NCAA's 1.6 predictability test rule wound up as a civil rights case.

Richard J. Archer, representing the NCAA, flatly declared toward the end of the long day that he was unprepared to argue a civil rights case and asked for more time to prepare a defense.

Judge Wollenberg, agreeing the argument had progressed "beyond the NCAA," granted the motion and tentatively set the next hearing for Nov. 26.

Curtis and Brumsey were declared ineligible for athletic competition by the NCAA for failing to take the standard 1.6 predictability grade test. When the University of California declined to declare the two ineligible, the NCAA put California on probation. The probation prohibits California from participating in any NCAA championships.

Curtis and Brumsey charged the NCAA acted "arbitrarily and capriciously" to penalize them and in so doing acted in violation of the Due Process clause of the 14th Amendment.

Attorneys for the two—Fred Rosenfeld, Stanley Sanders and Herman Selvin—brought in "expert" witnesses—Dr. Thomas MacMillan and Dr. Arthur Cherdack—to testify that standard college admission tests do in fact discriminate against blacks and other underprivileged students.

MacMillan and Cherdack claimed they have conducted extensive research in college admission tests and found that they are, by and large, discriminatory against blacks.

Archer argued since the NCAA's member schools accept the admission tests as a standard the NCAA hadn't acted in a discriminatory fashion against Curtis and Brumsey, both of whom are black, and had in fact merely followed the standard in setting up its 1.6 rule.

Archer further declared Curtis and Brumsey should consider themselves "privileged" since both were admitted to the University of California under the so-called four-per cent rule.

Under that rule four per cent of the total school enrollment each year includes students —

Terra Linda Whips Drake

By RON LENT

Terra Linda High School lost its Marin County Athletic League football championship but learned a lot.

This schooling was in evidence last night when the visiting Trojans trounced a good Drake team, 27-0, in the Pirates' homecoming at San Rafael High.

"We accomplished quite a bit this year," winning coach Don Lucas commented afterwards. "As far as the instructional aspects go," he assessed, "we're quite satisfied. True, it is not as exciting as when you win a championship (like Terra Linda did the past five years) but we got a lot done. This will certainly show in the future."

For now, Lucas must be content with a 6-3 log and a solid victory over his fierce San Anselmo rivals. The Pirates unleashed a devastating aerial circus on muddy terrain before an enthusiastic, albeit shivering crowd.

Quarberback Kevin Donohoe threw from the very outset in showing Drake, 3-6, that the elements would not preclude the Terra Linda game plan. This pass-oriented strategy was implemented, despite three Pirate interceptions.

The pilfers and moisture failed to slow down the high-powered Terra Linda attack as the visitors scored three second-quarter touchdowns to win going away.

The victors began the assault after safety John Buckley intercepted his first of two passes on the final play of the opening quarter. Encamped on his own 38 as the second period began, Donohoe triggered a four-play, 62-yard drive. The big yardage gainers were tosses of 10 and 27-yards to receivers Paul Mooney and Wes Emerson, respectively. Emerson's grab placed the ball on the Pirates' eight, setting the stage for halfback Mike Sabel's nine-yard scoring run one play hence with 9:45 left. He circled left end behind crisp blocking and scootered across untouched.

Six plays after the ensuing kickoff, monster man Paul Berry latched onto a Tom MacAusland pass and raced 49 yards unmolested down the right sideline.

Their spirits buoyed by this turn of events, the defense again forced the green shirts into a punting situation. However, Rick Herbert fumbled the

Unbeaten Rancho Whips Petaluma

I-J Special Report

PETALUMA — Quarterback Steve Wlodarczyk accounted for four touchdowns as Rancho Cotate High School of Rohnert Park climaxed an unbeaten season last night with a 30-0 win over the host Petaluma High School Trojans.

The Cougar signal caller passed for three touchdowns, covering 42, 35 and 30 yards, and ran two yards for another as Rancho's offense dominated the contest.

The Cougars' passing attack totally negated the Trojans' upset aspirations as Wlodarczyk had a field day against a good Trojan defense. Despite the point disparity, it was only 8-0 at the intermission as the defenses controlled the game. Wlodarczyk's plunge, climaxing a 65-yard drive, accounted for the only score in the first 24 minutes.

However, Wlodarczyk triggered a second half uprising which blew open the tight battle of defenses. Rancho tallied once in the third and twice in the final period to trimph going away.

Until the explosion, two way tackle Dan Cader dumped Wlodarczyk twice and linebacker Al Bettman stood out in aborting Cougar goalward thrusts. Sam Solis also shined in the Trojan secondary.

However, the trio's efforts were not enough, because Wlodarczyk had ample time to pass. "You just can't afford to give a sharp shooting quarterback like Wlodarczyk that much time and expect to win," losign coach Howard Cadenhead said.

This great pass protection was particularly prevalent in the final two periods when Wlodarczyk engineered three touchdowns. The big field general also scrambled in waiting for his receivers to get open.

Such was in evidence when Wlodarczyk hit his tailback Bob Murray with a screen pass. The quick cutting runner took a delayed short toss behind the line and journeyed 30-yards into the end zone behind several crunching blocks.

Warriors Fall To Hawks

CINCINNATI (UPI) —Without newcomer Cazzie Russell, the Golden State Warriors appear to be just another team.

Russell, the club's leading scorer, sat out Friday night's game against the Atlanta Hawks with a jammed finger. He watched from the sidelines as the Warriors wilted in the final 18 minutes to fall before the Hawks 106-104.

Tonight the Warriors are in Cincinnati to play Bob Cousy's fast-breaking Royals. The Warriors defeated the Royals 116-112 in their first meeting at Oakland Oct. 30.

Clyde Lee missed a tying shot with three seconds to go against the Hawks. But don't blame everything on poor Clyde.

It just seems Golden State pays scant attention to the weak sisters in the NBA. Earlier in the season, the Warriors lost to the Buffalo Braves and managed to lose to the Hawks who had dropped 10 of their previous 13 games and were playing without flashy high-scoring Pete Maravich.

Golden State led 60-52 at the half and built that lead up to 13 points early in the third period. But the Hawks went on a tear, outscoring the Golden Staters 29-19 in the final period to pull it out.

Lou Hudson led the Hawks with 28 points. Rookie George Trapp added 25.

Nate Thurmond paced the Warriors with 25 points and Jeff Mullins bucketed 24. Joe Ellis swished eight baskets and Lee chipped in with 11 points.

Santa Rosa Whips Marin; Tars End Winless Season

By JIM SMITH

The rain came down in force last night, and so did Santa Rosa Junior College's football team. The College of Marin Tars suffered through both onslaughts to lose the game, 34-3, and finish the season with a "perfect" record — no wins, nine losses.

The victory by the host Bear Cubs clinched the co-championship of the Camino Norte Conference and assured them a place in the state playoffs. They will face Orange Coast College Nov. 27.

Marin outclassed the hard-rushing Bear Cubs in first downs, passing yardage and interceptions, but not on the scoreboard. The passing statistic is deceptive — the Tars threw because they had to, and completed only 16 of 37. Santa Rosa's defensive line was equally punishing against scrambling quarterback Bob Daniele and passing quarterback Kevin Peak.

WORLD CUP GOLF

Player, Henning In Front

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (UPI)—With his stomach ache gone and the South Africans holding a three-stroke lead over the favored Americans, Gary Player was speaking in superlatives.

"I'd say this was about as perfect a round as anybody can play—as perfect a round as I can play anyway," said Player as he and teammate Harold Henning logged a 10-under-par total of 278 at the end of the second round of the 19th World Cup golf tournament.

Player strung together five birdies for a 67 Friday to give him a total of 136, one stroke better than Jack Nicklaus in the race for the individual scoring trophy.

"I never missed one green on the approaches and I only missed one fairway," said the South African, while Nicklaus was complaining that five of his putts lipped the cup and popped out.

Nicklaus and his partner, Lee Trevino—who was named the PGA's Player Of The Year—both hit 69s. It was a big improvement for Trevino who had a 75 on the first round.

"If we had gotten some of those putts we should've had, we'd be doing all right," said Nicklaus, who shot a 68 the first day.

With the U. S. entry in second place with a seven-under-par total of 281, England's team of Tony Jacklin (75-67) and Peter Oosterhuis (69-75) was sharing third place with New Zealanders Bob Charles (71-69) and John Lister (72-74) at 286, two under par.

A field of 92 golfers from 46 countries are competiting in this so-called "olympics of golf."

Trevino, who said "my game seems to be coming around," added that he feels he tried to go back on the tour too soon after an appendics operation last August.

"I haven't played well since the British Open, except for the Sahara," said Trevino, who also holds the U. S. and Canadian Open titles.

Trevino added that he is "very excited" about the announcement Friday from PGA President Warren Orlick that he has been named Player Of The Year.

"It's a great honor," he said. "Every pro athlete has as a goal being named the best in his field."

Player, troubled with stomach cramps during the first round, said he felt better Friday.

"I got some medicine from a doctor and that stopped the cramps," said Player.

Henning, who has shot identical 71s, said he was having trouble hitting the fairways on the 7,096-yard PGA National Golf Clubs East Course.

"Gary hardly missed any fairways and I hardly hit any." he said.

The two South Africans have teamed together in seven World Cup tournaments, winning in 1965.

Drake Booters Face San Rafael

Drake and San Rafael high schools each won soccer games yesterday, thus clearing the decks for their title-deciding collision Monday at 3:30 p.m. at San Rafael.

Drake outlasted Marin Catholic, 3-2, while San Rafael came from behind twice to down Novato, 4-2. In other Marin County Athletic League action, Redwood whipped San Marin, 3-1, and Tamalpais upset Terra Linda, 2-1.

Drake now has an 11-1-1 record for 23 points. San Rafael is 10-1-2 for 22 points. The game Monday is a replay of the two teams' disputed 0-0 tie earlier this year, in which a San Rafael player was ejected and no substitute permitted, contrary to league rules.

The game will be replayed from the beginning, and San Rafael will be allowed to field a full team, including the banished player.

With a one-point lead in the standings, Drake needs only a tie to win the championship. (Each team gets one point for a tie. A victory is worth two to the winner, none to the loser.)

For a while, it looked like San Rafael might be ambushed by Novato. The underdog Hornets led 1-0 and 2-1 on goals by Rick Esmerian and Bob Nissan, but San Rafael came back to tie on Steve Bianchini's goal and won on a pair of tallies by high-scoring Adalpho Flores. Misak Pirinjian got the first Bulldog goal.

Drake jumped out to a 3-0 lead on Marin Catholic on two goals by Doug Harnsberger and one by Rick Larsen. The Wildcats came back to make it interesting on scoring shots by David Stacey and Pete Smith, but time ran out.

Redwood got goals from Shariar Sarabi, Kendall Edgemon and Tom Sleisenger to close with a fine 8-3-3 record, good for third place. Ken Neibur scored for San Marin.

Dave Claxton and Joe Roth did the scoring for Tamalpais, negating a goal by Terra Linda's Bill Aaker.

The standings, which are final for all teams but Drake and San Rafael:

	W	L	T	Pts.
Drake	11	1	1	23
San Rafael	10	1	2	22
Redwood	8	3	3	19
Terra Linda	5	6	3	11
Tamalpais	4	7	3	11
Novato	4	10	0	8
Marin Catholic	3	10	1	7

NBA ROUNDUP

Rockets Outshoot Bucks, Still Lose

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

There's an old baseball story about Stan Musial and a hot streak he had going against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

It seems that Musial, a Hall of Famer with the St. Louis Cardinals, was battering Dodger pitching at a record clip one season.

In one game, an unfortunate Brooklyn hurler actually managed to strike "The Man" out, but the ball rolled so far away from the catcher that Musial made it to second base.

"Even when you strike him out you're lucky to hold him to two bases," lamented one Dodger.

The Houston Rockets must have had similar feelings Friday night. They outshot the Milwaukee Bucks from the floor, 46-42, but came out second best in the free throw and rebounding contests as the champs built their record to 13-1 with a 111-102 victory.

Milwaukee—with a 10-of-12 performance by John Block leading the way—connected on 27 of 38 free throws. Houston managed only 10 of 14 at the line.

The Rockets were outrebounded by 20—58 to 38—as Kareem Jabbar spreadeagled the boards to snare 24.

Jabbar also led all scorers with 31 points. Block added 20. Stu Lantz paced Houston with 26 points as the Rockets swooned to their 14th defeat in 16 games.

Milwaukee lifted its lead to 4 1-2 games over idle Chicago in the Midwest Division of the Western Conference.

In other games Friday night, Los Angeles increased its lead in the Pacific Division with a 115-107 triumph over Seattle, Atlanta snapped a five-game losing streak with a 106-104 squeaker over the Golden State Warriors, Philadelphia crept within a game of Boston in the Atlantic Division as the 76ers routed Detroit, 115-101 while the Celtics were losing to Phoenix, 128-119. Also, Cleveland edged Portland, 106-104.

Los Angeles suffered from "shooter's malaise" in the second quarter, hitting on only three of 26 field goal attempts. Jerry West was symptomatic of the trouble as he missed 11 straight floor shots.

The ice-cold Lakers saw Seattle build a 65-50 lead with 9:48 left in the third quarter before they began to grow torrid.

West collected 13 points in the last seven minutes of the frame and Jim McMillian—the starting replacement for retired Elgin Baylor—added four quick hoops to give Los Angeles an 80-79 lead after three periods.

Seattle, paced by Spencer Haywood's 26 points, moved to a 99-95 lead with 5:27 left in the game, but Los Angeles cinched the game with a closing 20-8 spree.

West finished with 28 points and McMillian and Gail Goodrich each contributed 27.

San Rafael Wins Frosh Football Championship

San Rafael High School's freshman football team clinched the Marin County Athletic League championship by drubbing Marin Catholic 29-8 yesterday.

The victory gave the Bulldogs a 5-0 league mark (7-0 over-all) and preserved their fine defensive record. They have not allowed a touchdown on the ground all year and precious few through the air, outscoring their opponents 192-34.

Quarterback David Steele threw two 20-yard touchdown passes yesterday, to Mike Ellingson and Reggie Bryant. Mark Meredith scored on a 10-yard run and Rick Wright on a 15-yard jaunt. Steele kicked three extra points and passed for a two-point conversion. San Rafael scored in every period.

NBA Body Refuses To Change Playoffs

PHOENIX (UPI) —The National Basketball Association will retain the present playoff system to determine the league champion by advancing the top two teams in each of the four divisions to the post-season scramble.

The NBA's board of governors decided Friday not to alter the present system, amid speculation the board would consider an alternate proposal that would have sent the four division champions into the playoffs, along with the next four teams with the best records, regardless of division.

Commissioner Walter Kennedy said, however, that no alternative was presented and the move to retain the present system as approved by a substantial margin.

In other action on the final day of the winter meeting, the board approved a 32-game television schedule with the American Broadcasting Co., reduced the maximum number of exhibition games for each team by four and heard a report on the proposed merger of the NBA and the American Basketball Association.

Kennedy said the television schedule for this season was worked out with ABC sports executives and will begin with the Nov. 26 Baltimore at Atlanta encounter. From 10 to 12 of the games will be aired in prime time and all seven championship games will be televised nationally.

The board, at the request of the Players Association, approved a cut from 12 to eight in the maximum number of exhibition games scheduled by each team.

The report on the merger proposal was presented by the merger committee, headed by Abe Pollin of Baltimore. The U.S. Senate Antitrust Committee is to conduct hearings on the merger Monday, Tuesday and Thursday.

Kennedy and ABA Commissioner Jack Dolph will testify at the hearings. Kennedy said it was possible the bill proposing the merger would be reported out of committee by the first of the year. He said that if the merger won final approval before the 1972 season, he doubted it could be fully implemented until 1974-75.

Denise Ham Sets U.S. Swim Mark

San Rafael High School swimmer Denise Ham surpassed the national girls high school record by swimming the 100-yard individual medley in 1:04.5 Thursday at San Rafael's pool.

Her brilliant performance could not counteract the depth of opponent Marin Catholic, which won the meet, 72-41, to lift its Marin County Athletic League record to 6-0.

Denise broke the old 100 IM record by four tenths of a second. She also set new MCAL standards in the 50 butterfly (30.1) and the 100 butterfly (1:04.6). Jo Hislop of San Rafael broke her league record in the 100 freestyle (56.4).

Terra Linda defeated San Domenico, 71-42, with three double winners. Anne Engel took the 100 IM and 100 fly, Cyndi Salvisberg took the 50 fly and 200 free and Lisa Benedetti won the 100 free and 100 backstroke.

49ERS VS. SAINTS

Tough Job For Cornerbacks

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Cornerbacks Bruce Taylor of San Francisco and D'Artagnan Martin of New Orleans won't have to look far Sunday to find a speedy, pass-catching skeleton in their closet.

Martin, a rookie from Kentucky State, will at times be called upon to shadow Gene Washington who attracts passes and defenders like wood does termites. Or maybe Ted Kwalick might fly Martin's way.

Kwalick, with 30 catches, and Washington, with 29, are pressuring Chicago's Dick Gordon (33 snags) as the top receiver in the National Football League.

San Francisco is a 14-point favorite to hand the Saints their 14th loss on the road without a win since 1968 before an expected sellout of 45,000 at Candlestick Park. The 49ers won the first go-round this season, 38-20, at New Orleans.

Bruce Taylor is itching to get another crack at Dan Abramowicz, New Orleans' leading receiver who is averaging a NFL-high of 18.7 yards on 22 catches. Abramowicz caught a couple of touchdown passes against the 49ers in the first game.

"He does a lot of yakking about what he's going to do and I'd like to shut him off," said Taylor. "But it's a big challenge."

Rookie quarterback Archie Manning, who has been slowed by a sore thigh and elbow, and substitute Edd Hargett can expect an all-out pass rush from the 49ers who have the best pass defense in the NFL, allowing foes an average of 121 aerial yards.

A front four of Tommy Hart, Cedrick Hardman, Charlie Krueger and Earl Edwards have sacked quarterbacks 32 times for 250 lost yards, another NFL high. Against New Orleans earlier in the season, that group nailed Manning six times behind the line.

"I'm never satisfied unless I can get to the passer three times a game," said the 255-pound Hardman in his second pro season from North Texas State.

The 49ers will be without the full services of safety Mel Phillips who reinjured an ankle and wide receiver Dick Witcher who cut both hands on the turf last week at Minnesota.

RAIDERS-OILERS

Madden Expects A Tough Battle

OAKLAND (UPI) —The one thing Oakland Raiders coach John Madden probably doesn't want to talk about is point-spreads.

Last week his Raiders were picked by 17 points over the New Orleans Saints and wound up with a 21-21 tie. Before the game Madden talked of the "balance" in the National Football League and how hard it is to win these days.

NO CHANGE

"I haven't changed my view one bit since last week," he said earlier this week as he prepared the Raiders for Sunday's game with the Houston Oilers.

The Raiders go into the game with a 5-1-2 record and a half game lead on the Kansas City Chiefs in the AFC West while the Oilers are 1-6-1 in the AFC Central. Naturally, Oakland is favored to win Sunday's game, and by 14 points.

Defenses seem to have caught up with the offenses this year in the National Football League, so much so that hardly any team logically is a two touchdown or more favorite over any other.

"All you have to do is check all the upsets this year," said Madden "to see what I mean when I talk about balance."

CLOSE GAMES

Madden is right, especially in the case of the Oilers. Houston barely beat Cincinnati and tied with New Orleans yet lost to Kansas City, Washington, Pittsburgh and New England by a total of 28 points. The loss to Kansas City, one of the toughest teams in the NFL, was by only four points.

Thus, Madden takes his team into Sunday's tussle with a lot of respect for the Oilers and dismisses the 14 point favorite's role completely.

"We should beat Houston," Madden said, "but I know it won't be easy."

With the Raiders no longer the "big play" team they were in seasons gone by, victory has been tough to achieve this year. A big change in personnel, especially at wide receiver, has forced the Raiders to rely more on their defense and a running game. Any time you take away the "bomb," points are earned the hard way.

MORE PASSING

Last year the Raiders passed their way to 2,865 yards and ran for 1,964 and the touchdown ratio was 28-7 in favor of the pass. This year, in eight games Oakland has passed for 1,132 and run for 1,364, and the TDs are even at 12-12.

Two reasons are responsible for the change. The first is the solid, steady running of Marv Hubbard and Pete Banaszak, and the second is a shakeup in the wide receiving corps after Warren Wells went to jail.

Most coaches would rather run the ball than throw it if the running is doing the job, and Madden is no different.

"Ball control is the name of the game," said Madden. "Also, when you run you have less chance of losing the ball."

NEW SYSTEM

The Oilers have a new coach in Ed Hughes, and with him a new system, and a rookie quarterback in Dan Pastorini, the former Santa Clara ace.

"Pastorini is big and strong and he knows how to throw the ball," Madden said of the Houston quarterback.

While Pastorini likes to throw, he may have to stick to a ground attack inasmuch as Houston's running has improved of late. Robert Holmes, ex Kansas City, Dickie Post, ex San Diego, and Woody Campbell are the team's big running threats.

Rhodes Fires 709 Series; Curry 708

Bill Rhodes was one pin better than Bob Curry and both men were head and shoulders above other Marin County bowlers in scores recorded during the past week.

Rolling at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael, Rhodes recorded a 709 series and Curry tallied 708. Three other hefty series were bowled at the same lanes — Howard Chidester's 681 and a pair of 676 totals, by Chuck Jones and Tony Kozlowski.

Ed Henry was tops at Greenbrae Lanes with a 671, topping Will Bettencourt's 655. Bettencourt rolled a 278 game. Top men at Nave Lanes in Ignacio were Bruce Hubbell and Vern Nathe at 611.

The only woman to break 600 was Penny Taucher at Greenbrae with 611. She also had a 594. Leemoi Bekey of Country Club missed the magic 600 circle by one pin and Judy Griggs at Greenbrae missed by three. Top woman at Nave was Barb Garrison, 577.

Mike Blum, a junior at Greenbrae, recorded a 613.

mostly black —who otherwise would not qualify for admission.

Since both Curtis and Brumsey also received scholarships, said Archer, "they indeed are privileged young men."

However, when Rosenfeld, Sanders and Selvin sought to blanket all admission tests as being discriminatory, Archer begged off and asked for time to prepare a proper response.

"Obviously," he told Judge Wollenberg, "the question here is broader than the NCAA and has gone beyond the original charges and I will need time to prepare for a defense."

Judge Wollenberg agreed the question had gone beyond the injunction Curtis and Brumsey are seeking and that much study and arguments are needed to draw a conslusion.

If Judge Wollenberg grants the requested injunction, just what will it mean?

Immediately, it would lift California's probation and make the school's football team eligible for post-season play, such as the Rose Bowl.

The Golden Bears, whose games thus far this year have not counted in Pacific 8 Conference standings, have a 32 record against league rivals. They meet Oregon today and Stanford next Saturday. Victory in the two games would give them a 5-2 record and send them to the Rose Bowl, if they get a favorable court ruling by the end of the year.

In the broader context, a favorable ruling by Wollenberg could force a whole new system by which schools will have to guide themselves in granting admissions—to students in general and not only to prospective athletes.

It's a big question, Archer and the three attorneys for Curtis and Brumsey agreed, and it's one Wollenberg will have to decide.

fourth down snap and was snowed under at his own 20.

Four plays later, Donohoe found tailback Sean Casey with an 18-yard touchdown pass.

Trailing 20-0 in the third frame, coach Bob Franceschini's charges were forced to deviate from the ball control ploy. "We're really good on off-tackle and up-the-middle runs, but, when we're forced to throw, we don't do as well. When we hold our opponent, we can usually grind it out. But once you're behind . . ."

To his dismay, Franceschini could only watch as Terra Linda recorded its final touchdown on the heels of a 79-yard, 11-play march. During this prolonged trek, Donohoe teamed with Emerson on passes covering 27 and 11 yards.

A subsequent 16-yard bullet to his favorite target, flanker John Buckley, advanced the ball to the five. Sabel carried the mail over from that point on second down in notching his second score in the cold night.

"What can I say about Buckley?" Lucas asked rhetorically later, "he is like Tom Matte. He excells anywhere you put him. Just like Matte, he does a great job, but without great speed."

Lucas also praised lineback Steve Withers. Regarding his ace backer, Lucas asserted, "he and (Drake's Rick) Bozzio are the best in the league. Withers is the most underpublicized player around."

Lucas also threw kudos at two-way tackle Larry Madden and lineman Brian Jordan "for great blocking."

While Lucas was dishing out the compliments, so was a composed Franceschini.

"You just can't afford to fall behind like that against a team like Terra Linda." In reference to his own team's plight, the veteran Pirate mentor mused, "if we only had a back fast enough to turn those ends." But he didn't, so Franceschini returned to the business of picking up the pieces after a tough year. Split end, "Dan Trimble was really coming along well. He was doing a fine job, but what can I say? The same mistakes, fumbles, beat us again" — that coupled with Terra Linda's stout defense and passing attack.

The score by quarters:

TL—Sabel 9 run (Corbett kick); TL—Barry 49 interception return (Corbett kick); TL—Casey 18 pass from Donohoe (kick failed); TL—Sabel 5 run (Corbett kick).

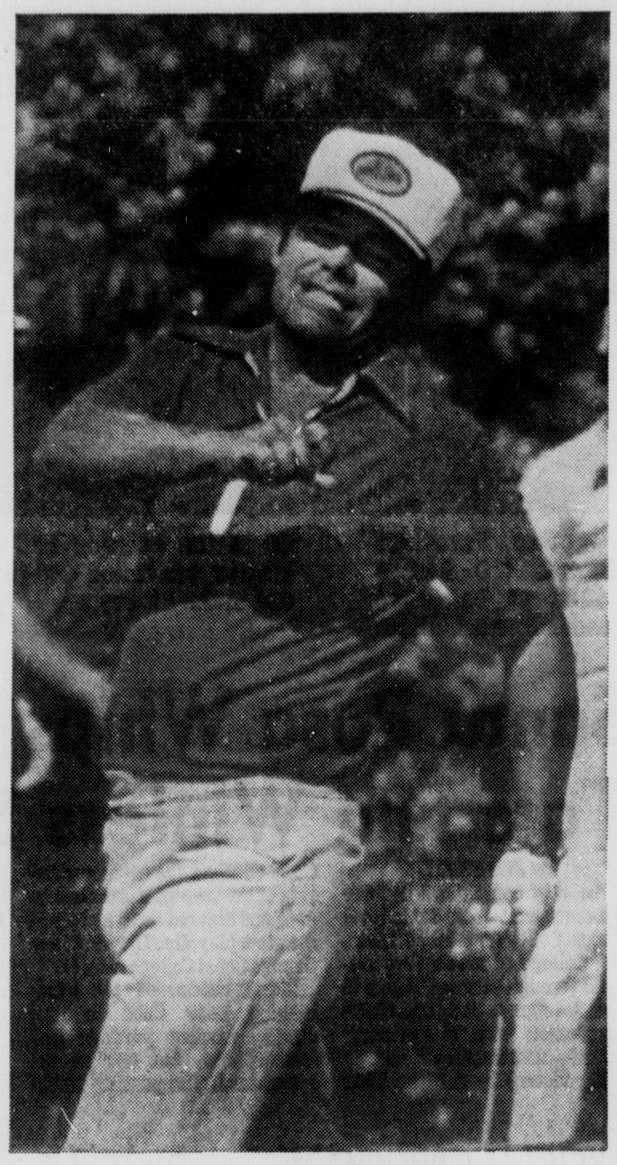
Drake Girls Upset Redwood In Swim Meet

Sparked by double winners Sue Secondo and Robin Bachrach, the Sir Francis Drake High School girls' swim team upset previously undefeated Redwood High, by a 59-54 count in San Anselmo yesterday.

Ann Redig and Kim Hughes grabbed two firsts apiece for the losers.

Marin Catholic High School, by virtue of Redwood's loss, has clinched a tie for the Girls' MCAL title.



SMILE FOR THE BIRDIE

Colorful professional golfer Lee Trevino reacted after sinking a birdie putt on the 11th hole during the World Cup Tournament second round Friday in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla. Despite the birdie antics, the American team of Trevino and Jack Nicklaus trailed South Africa's Gary Player and Harold Henning by three strokes. The leaders carded a 278.

Old Story Repeated: Barry Hot, Nets Not

By United Press International.

Rick Barry scored 38 points Friday night and the 6,602 at Island Gardens was the largest home crowd to witness a New York Nets' game on Long Island.

It would have been a happy occasion but for the efforts of Julius Erving and Charley Scott.

The pair combined for 71 points—including nine in overtime—to lead the Virginia Squires to a 127-123 victory over the Nets. The win raised the Squires' record to 11-4 —good enough for first place in the East Division of the American Basketball Association, one-half game ahead of idle Kentucky.

In the only other contest Friday night, Memphis edged Dallas, 107-103, as rookie Johnny Neumann came off the bench to deliver eight points in the final four minutes of the game.

Seals Take On Blues Tonight, Hawks Sunday

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Now that St. Louis is singing the blues over its lacklustre pro hockey team, the California Golden Seals would like to add another bar to the tune.

The teams meet for the first time this season tonight in this Mississippi River town where the Seals never fare too well.

Only this time, the Seals, at 5-7-3, own a better record than the Blues (3-10-1). California is deadlocked with Philadelphia in fourth place in the National Hockey League West while St. Louis is fighting with Los Angeles to escape the West basement.

The Seals follow with a clash against the Black Hawks in Chicago Sunday night.

California came out of the 5-2 loss to the Boston Bruins Thursday night with one casualty. Wing Norm Ferguson broke his nose in a second-period collision with Boston's Bob Stewart.

"The doctor straightened it out. It's okay. I can play," said Ferguson.

Marin Booters Face Holy Name

Four All-Star teams from the Marin Youth Soccer Association will play four teams from Holy Name Grammar School of San Francisco Sunday at noon at Ross Common.

"Holy Name has more advanced teams than we do and is much stronger," said MYSA head Bob Braghetta. "This will be a terrific learning process for us." Holy Name is a power in the Catholic Youth Organization.

One fourth-grade team, one fifth-grade team and two sixth-grade teams will compete for each side.

Sonoma State Hosts Humboldt

Sonoma State College faced a rugged Humboldt State College football team in Rohnert Park today at 1:30 p.m.

Sonoma, 2-6 in the Far Western Conference, had broken a four-game losing streak two weeks ago only to fall back into losing ways last week against California Lutheran, 40-6.

Retired Catcher Speaks

DETROIT (UPI) — Jim Price, who had the nickname "big guy" during his days as No. 2 catcher for the Detroit Tigers, hopes baseball will "listen to an average guy."

Price retired Friday rather than accept being sold to the Tigers' Toledo farm club and asked baseball owners to get together with the players' association to modify the reserve clause before the U.S. Supreme Court decide Curt Flood's suit.

"I'm not for throwing out the reserve clause," Price, 29, said in his farewell to his playing days. "Baseball cannot survive without the reserve clause."

But the former players' representative with Detroit called for some sort of modification in the controversial clause which binds a player to a team for life unless he is traded, released or sold. Price proposed a three-man review board.

"Each case is different," he said. "Why should one kid suffer? Times have changed.

"Kids watching this on TV or reading this might say 'who the heck does he think he is?" Price said. "Jim Price is a guy who was hurt by the reserve clause."

Price played behind Bill Freehan for five seasons after being obtained by the Tigers from the Pittsburgh Pirates' organization in 1966. He had been unable to crack the Pirates' roster despite having decent seasons with Pittsburgh's Columbus farm team.

"I'm not a big star," he said. "But maybe they'll listen to an average guy."

He retired with a lifetime .214 major league batting average, 18 home runs and 71 runs batted in for the 261 games he played. Detroit sold him to its Toledo affiliate at the end of the season.

Even if drafted by a major league club Nov. 29 during the winter meetings, which would cost a team $25,000, Price said he was through playing. It was learned he had cleared $20,000 waivers three times before being sold.

During his days as player representative, Price said he and Detroit general manager Jim Campbell never had any trouble sitting down and working out differences. He praised the Tigers' organization.

"We don't need the federal government stepping into baseball," he said. "We can settle our own problems."

Hanratty, Phipps Get New Chance

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Terry Hanratty and Mike Phipps, two collegiate stars of recent vintage, get another chance to see what they can do in the professional ranks Sunday, and both are being put under fire at a critical time by their respective clubs.

Hanratty, a former star quarterback at Notre Dame, will start for the Pittsburgh Steelers against the Miami Dolphins due to a sprained ankle suffered by regular quarterback Terry Bradshaw. Hanratty, who was the Steelers' No. 1 quarterback before Bradshaw arrived on the scene, has seen only limited action this year, but he did complete a 40-yard touchdown pass to Dave Smith last Sunday to help the Steelers defeat Cleveland 26-9.

That victory enabled the Steelers to tie the Browns for first place in the AFC's Central Division and Hanratty will have to deliver more of the same if Pittsburgh hopes to defeat the powerful Dolphins. Miami boasts a 6-1-1 record and leads the Baltimore Colts by a half game in the AFC's Eastern Division. The Dolphins have won five in a row and have averaged better than 30 points per game in their last four outings.

Hanratty has not been impressive in two full seasons in the National Football League. Entering this year he had completed only 40.1 per cent of his passes and had 21 passes intercepted while tossing for 13 touchdowns.

Phipps, who was a star quarterback at Purdue during the same years Hanratty was at Notre Dame, will be starting for the Browns against the Kansas City Chiefs Sunday as Coach Nick Skorich had decided to give regular quarterback Bill Nelsen a rest.

Phipps, who is in his second pro year, spent most of his rookie campaign learning his trade and saw only spot duty. He completed 48.3 per cent of his passes for just one touchdown and had five passes intercepted. Like Hanratty, he has seen only spot duty this year.

The Chiefs pose a difficult task for Phipps. They should be coming into this game hungry after being upset by the New York Jets last Sunday, and they are only a half game behind Oakland in the AFC's Western Division. Kansas City has one of the pro football's top defensive units and has been known to feed on inexperienced quarterbacks.

Pittsburgh and Cleveland are both 4-4 on the season, but neither is expected to improve on that mark this weekend. The Dolphins are a 10-point pick over the Steelers and the Chiefs rate a 13-point choice over the Browns.

In other Sunday games, Denver is three over Cincinnati, Washington four over Chicago, Detroit four over Los Angeles, Atlanta seven over the New York Giants, New England seven over Buffalo, Minnesota seven over Green Bay, Dallas 11 over Philadelphia, Baltimore 13 over the Jets, Oakland 14 over Houston and San Francisco 17 over New Orleans.

San Diego is a three-point pick over St. Louis in Monday night's nationally televised game.

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

For The World Champions, The Correct Heart Play Not Difficult

Today's hand presents no problem to the world champion, so if you happen to be one of the 15 or 20 best players in the world, congratulations — but you may not learn very much from my column today. If your estimate of your bridge ability is less exalted, the heart suit today may give you something to think about.

WITH ACE

West opened the jack of clubs, and South won with the ace. Declarer led a low trump, and West played low in the hope that South was about to try a losing finesse of some kind.

Since South had the queen of spades, there was no trump finesse. Dummy's jack won, and declarer led the king of spades to force out the ace. West looked at the dummy (always a good idea), and saw that the contract could be defeated only if the defenders could take three heart tricks then and there.

PLAYS POORLY

Unfortunately, West didn't know how to do the job. He led the ace of hearts and then the jack, hoping his partner had both the king and ten. This didn't work because declarer covered the jack of hearts with dummy's queen. East took the king, but then South's ten stopped the slaughter.

ONE WAY

"No use leading the nine of hearts first," West commented. "He plays low from dummy."

This was correct, but West still hadn't hit on the right way. West should begin the hearts by leading the jack. If dummy plays low, the jack wins the first heart trick, and then the defenders easily take the ace and king.

WORLD CHAMP?

If declarer puts up dummy's queen, East wins the first heart with the king and then returns a heart through the ten. West then takes two more heart tricks with the ace and nine.

Now you're ready to declare yourself a world champion.

Tax Return In Humor Magazine

PARIS (UPI)—The French Post Office Department is trying to find out how the income tax return of Prime Minister Jacques Chaban-Delmas disappeared from the mails and turned up printed in a humor magazine.

A photocopy of a notice to the prime minister listing what he owed in taxes was published in the newspaper Canard Enchaine (Chained Duck), which often kids politicians.

The photocopy said the prime minister listed $14,480 as taxable income for 1970.

Pets Outnumber People In U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pets now outnumber people three-to-one — in the United States, according to an insurance company survey.

The U.S. pet population is more than 600 million and growing 15 to 18 million pets each year, reports the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. The survey showed more than 45 per cent of U.S. families own a dog, a cat or both.

MANY MEN'S wear manufacturers are getting away from the concept of topcoats, raincoats and overcoats and are coming up with "total coats" which can go almost anywhere. The look is big and brawny, as seen in this double-breasted shearling and calfskin coat by Robert Lewis.

MEN'S WEAR

The 'Total Coat' Big On The Fashion Scene

By WALTER LOGAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—They still make raincoats, topcoats and overcoats, of course, but this year there is a growing trend toward the "total coat" which can be used for almost anything. Most of the coats are a little longer, knee length at least, and there are a lot of knits.

A big, manly, rugged look is the essence of leisurewear look for men this fall and winter, including brawny sheepskin coats. There are also outfits called pants suits but they are rugged themselves, in coats and pants made of suede and leather.

There are a lot of "looks." There is the military look in Cossack-length greatcoats in wool, suede or smooth leather. There is a warm look in raincoats with pile linings and collars for warmth. And there is a boutique look—very long and tubular coats.

There is an incredible array of fabrics for these "total coats," and there is also fur, leather and suede. The fabrics run from treated velvets through brushed denim, tweeds, rubberized cotton, moleskin, gabardine and a sharp and shiny twill. And always knits.

THERE ARE all sorts of coordinates which sometimes are really shirt suits and three quartercoats with matching trousers, usually called walking suits.

Martin Smith, a onetime Yale swim team star who ended up as president of the Robert Lewis Co., sees the rebirth of the coordinated look as a "return to a certain discipline after recent years of youthful excesses when men sought to look uninhibited and thus liberate themselves from the restraints of the Ivy League Look."

The big news at Harbor Master is its raschel warp knit fabric of fancy check pattern in a texturized Dacron polyester. It turns up in two travel coats and the manufacturer says he has ended the problems of snagging and picking in doubleknits.

One coat is a single breasted, button through coat with a split shoulder—sleeves set in in front, raglan in back and lined with satin. The other has a zip out wool and mohair liner. A cold coat has wing shoulders and a half back belt in twill trimmed in leather.

SOME OF the other things on the market:

Designer Jon Jolcin showed a trench coat in olive pigskin suede with a wide storm collar and with big bellows pockets with button flaps. Rafel Fashions showed a denim safari style, no belt, in the long tubular boutique look.

Carlo Palazii showed a navy, shaped safari coat — four flapped pockets in a wetproof twill and Jaeger showed a natural suede walking suit consisting of a double breasted trench coat with matching trousers.

Jupiter of Paris showed a felt suede midi-length coat, doublebreasted, belted, and flared, shown with coordinated jeans. And in the Cardin Boutique line there was a World War I type trench coat in moss green cotton sateen. London Fog showed a doubleknit, doublebreasted camel colored coat, eight buttons, just above the knee.

Lakeland had a series of coats that included one with a fleece lining, trim and collar and a tapestry woven outershell. Another spdctacular one had monstrous coachman's lapels in melton camel with shearling pile trim. Zero King had a double breasted coat in wool twill with mouton collar and lapel.

Van Heusen-Windbreaker introduced a sophisticated collection of jackets and matching pants to add a bit of elegance to leisure wear. Jackets ran to all lengths from short Ike jackets to below the knee lengths. The pants, called frontier flairs, naturally had a western look. Colors ran through the colors of natural foliage, from chestnut to egg plant.

Mcgregor-Doniger, Inc., used water repellant double knits for many things from ski wear to golf wear to outer coats, including some double knits that looked like corduroy. A particularly handsome coat was a ribless corduroy with a pile collar and lining, single breasted and with slashed pockets.

'Enriched' Bread

Be sure the loaf of bread you buy is "enriched." This means important vitamins and a mineral have been added.

From Now On, Women Are 'Ms.'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Women's Wear Daily has decided to stop referring to women as "Miss" or "Mrs." in its pages and instead will refer to all females as "Ms."

A spokesman said WWD was believed to be the first national publication to make the change, one advocated by women's lib forces. The newspaper now refers to all women by their full name on first reference and thereafter switches to "Ms."

The publication said it also has dropped "Mr." for all men, including the President.

The 'Block Parent' Plan Paying Off

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — The "block parent" program aims to make it as safe as possible for children to get to and from school.

One or two volunteer parents, usually mothers, are chosen along the routes to school. These volunteers should be at home during the half hour before and after school. It is desirable to have a parent on every block, says Rollin Schneider, extension safety specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Originally the program was developed to help protect against child molestation in the larger cities, says Schneider. The block parent plan has paid off and produced an extra dividend by helping child accident victims.

Posted on the inside of the front window or door is a sign identifying the home of a block parent. The children are told to go there should trouble occur.

The block parent is not supposed to be used to break up fights, furnish rest room facility or give medical aid other than the washing of a scrape or application of a small bandage — unless it is an emergency and the child's life is at stake.

Purse Style Emphasis Made Her Fast Rise

VENICE (UPI) —Roberta di Camerino's rise to head a multi-million dollar accessories business started with purses that have since become status symbols among those in the jet set.

Mrs. di Camerino has been at it now nearly a quarter of a century. When she decided after World War II to emphasize purses instead of hats as the main accessory, Mrs. di Camerino was ahead of her time.

"Hats used to give tone to a woman's outfit," she said. "I thought the purse could become the main accessory. I made them colorful instead of utilitarian. I had luck instantly."

A story in an Italian magazine brought her a contract from Neiman-Marcus, the giant Texas department store. That launched Mrs. di Camerino internationally.

Now she has stores in five Italian cities, franchises in Switzerland, West Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands and Sweden, and sells in boutique departments in many American cities, and in Japan, Turkey, Canada, Australia and South Africa.

Her son, Ugo, 28, is an architect working on plans for the restoration of Venice. He designed her new Rome store. Her daughter, Roberta, 22, has joined the firm, which now makes umbrellas, luggage and clothing, in addition to purses. A perfume was added recently.

Select Wisely

Don't be a slave to a calorie table all your life say nutrition consultants from the Dairy Council of California. Carefully selecting foods from the four food groups, milk, meat, vegetables and fruits and breads and cereals, for each meal, reducing portions if necessary, and increasing body activity, are ways to maintain desired weight or bring about a gradual loss if necessary.

Freeze-Dried Foods Easier To Store

When food is freeze-dried the moisture does not go through a liquid stage during its removal. The moisture from fresh food is removed by first freezing and then drying the food under high vacuum conditions so that about two per cent of the original water remains.

The freeze-dried product may be stored without refrigeration and is much lighter in weight than the undried product.

Larkspur Street Job Obliterates History

THE LONG-OVERDUE improvement of the intersection of Magnolia Avenue and Dougherty Drive in Larkspur may be a welcome change to commuters and those who drive to and from Redwood High School (as well as Disco shoppers), but it is somewhat painful to those of us who are local history buffs.

The intersection improvement project now nearing completion marks the final obliteration of what is probably the most historic site in all of Larkspur and Corte Madera.

Even before the white man first came, the aborigines had a settlement there. It existed over so many generations that it resulted in a sizeable Indian mound from whence grew mature oaks.

A tidal arm of Corte Madera Creek extended all the way to the mound.

After the Spanish established Corte Madera del Presidio early in the 19th century, a couple of lumber mills rose in the area. Where the arm of Corte Madera Creek ended at the old Indian mound, scows arrived to be loaded with lumber destined for construction activity in San Francisco.

In 1846 when John C. Fremont and his band of "explorers" visited Marin, they set up camp at this very spot.

Via Corte Madera Creek, they could move by water all the way to and from Sutter's Fort, 100 miles away.

WHAT WAS FREMONT doing in Marin?

According to one account, his Larkspur camp was the site of a meeting with Capt. John Sutter and Gen. Mariano Vallejo, to discuss what they might do to precipitate the take-over of California from the Mexicans by the U.S.A.

A 1935 Marin Journal account reported the descendant of a soldier in Fremont's Larkspur encampment was then living in Sausalito.

By 1850, the former Indian village site and former Fremont camp had become the landing for the logging camp, described as a "little settlement of several hundred." Several times a week, boats from San Francisco brought supplies and carried lumber away to the city.

In 1852, Larkspur got its first permanent house. It was built by convict labor from San Quentin. It was erected on this same site where Indians had maintained a village and Fremont his camp.

The Marin Journal's 1935 account described the exact site as "Southeast of George Nevin's nurseries and on the R.C. Doherty property."

The Nevin greenhouses are still there. Dolph Doherty is long in his grave and the construction project recently saw his home razed and the hill it stood on leveled.

Now it is all but a dim memory.

The historic nature of this spot deserves to be remembered. Perhaps the City of Larkspur and the Marin County Historical Society can find a way to perpetuate the memory in a suitable historical monument.

IT HAS BEEN a year since fire destroyed a famous North Coast landmark, the Russian Orthodox Chapel at Fort Ross.

Early this year, another fire partially destroyed the commandant's house which had served as a museum. Fort Ross was built originally in 1824. It had been preserved and restored as a state park. But arsonists seemed bent on destroying it.

The State Parks Commission wants to see the chapel replaced and the commandant's house repaired. A commitment for a federal grant of $26,500 has been received, providing a matching $26,500 can be raised before the end of this year.

Developers of the Sea Ranch, a real estate development 17 miles north along the coast above Fort Ross, agreed to rebuild the burned-off roof of the museum to the tune of about $11,000. This is acceptable in lieu of matching cash, leaving a balance of $15,500 to be raised before Jan. 1.

The State Division of Highways plans to reroute Highway 1 around the old stockade, instead of bisecting it. The parks department intends to provide greater protection against fires in the future.

Anyone moved to assist in all this can make a tax-deductible donation to the State Parks Foundation at 1948 Pacific Avenue, San Francisco.

If the Fort Ross fund-raising effort is successful, perhaps it will encourage the Marin Historical Society to solicit contributions for a suitable monument commemorating the historic events at Magnolia and Doherty in Larkspur.

WORTH SAYING AGAIN

There is no evil in the atom; only in men's souls. — Adlai E. Stevenson.

After some 27 years in Washington, where the importance of being accepted is over-emphasized, I am convinced that the "inner ring" mentality, the inordinate desire for acceptance, can produce more spiritual corruption than any combination of things put together by the world, the flesh and the devil. — Ed Lahey.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Water Available From Cascade Creek

The unusually heavy no vote on the MMWD scheme for additional water would indicate that the voters feel that we should develop our local supply of water first.

In the Cascade area west of Fairfax there are at least two sites for dams which would control the waters of Cascade Creek, especially in flood times, as both dams would have an abundant water supply.

This control would eliminate the costly Corte Madera Flood Control Project.

Also if we are so short of water why is the MMWD syphoning off a large stream of water from the outlet of the Pine Mountain tunnel which is of sufficient volume to supply most of Fairfax?

Pal Balmes Could Interview Turnip

An interview with me by Pat Balmes appeared in the Oct. 18 Independent-Journal. Certainly I deeply appreciated the great things she said about me, but her general approach to the interview was most remarkable. Her questions were intelligent and perceptive; she was so charming I forgot I was being interviewed . . . thought I was just having coffee with a friend. This saved me from having a fit of nerves, and I was grateful for that, too.

Pat also checked some facts with me after the interview, something that rarely happens. Looking back, I really don't know how she got all the information, but it was correct —and painless. I had a good time.

Thank you for giving me so much space. I'm sure if Pat interviewed a — well, a turnip, she would have the facts, and make them interesting.

Park Service Should Lease More Land

It has come to my attention that a few years ago a national park was established to preserve the redwood trees in Humboldt County. The Sierra Club proposed that the National Park Service purchase some 97 acres, but instead the decided amount of land was about 50 acres, and the conservationists had to compromise. The result of this compromise is a forest of beautiful trees surrounded by a mass of stumps, erosion and overall ugliness. This is all caused by loggers who bulldoze through and clear out every living form of vegetation, leaving the soil loose and subject to landslides.

I assume that one mistake is enough and that the Park Service will use the Sierra Club's proposal this time, which is to acquire a two-year lease on the remaining 47 acres left out of the original purchase. This would include the slopes above Redwood Creek and Skunk Cabbage Creek. This action should be followed by permanent ownership of the land by the national parks.

Auto Is To Blame For Faire Turndown

I took no pleasure in shooting down the Lucas Valley site for the Renaissance Pleasure Faire at the Nov. 1 planning commission meeting.

The proposed site was literally run over by the automobile. Schemes to move parking somewhere else only offered to dump the auto mess in another backyard.

Discussion of widening Lucas Valley Road suggests the worst kind of conventional approach to the transportation problem. Construction of added auto facilities only invites more autos, more congestion, and in due course even more construction. Witness Highway 101 — in 1955, three lanes and now six lanes but still congested. So we're widening it to eight lanes. Ultimate projection of this approach indicate an eventual 18 or 20 lanes on 101.

Marin still has a chance to avoid wall-to-wall asphalt and concrete through the more imaginative approach to the balanced transportation program, which promises a variety of transit media for moving people around.

I suggest that the Pattersons apply their resourceful and creative minds to a radical transportation solution for the Lucas Valley Faire site: access by transit only, and automobiles prohibited . . .

Amchitka Test Mere Drop In Large, Expensive Bucket

WASHINGTON — The $200 million that the blast at Amchitka cost is a drop in a large bucket. With nuclear weapons already being capable of mass death and destruction on a scale almost impossible to take in, the pursuit of even more fantastic and wholesale killing devices goes on.

On both sides of the great divide, the pursuit seems to have no end, unless it be bankruptcy or total devastation. The demonstrators in Canada against Amchitka forget or ignore that the Soviet Union has had two big underground bangs — one equal to if not exceeding Amchitka, the other somewhat smaller.

IN A CLOSED SOCIETY these things are handled rather differently. Protesters, if any, are hustled off to prison or a lunatic asylum. The fact that no public announcement is made precludes any controversy even if it could occur in, say, the highest ranks of science and administration. Only through the remarkable American network of detection are the Russian bangs known.

They occurred on Novaya Zemlya, a barren island in the Barents Sea far above the Arctic Circle. Zemlya is, to be sure, at least 3,000 miles across the pole from Canada and the Aleutians. It was the fear of earthquake and tidal wave that touched off such widespread demonstrations against the American five-megaton blast.

The first Russian underground test on Zemlya occurred on Oct. 14, 1970. The initial finding from the detection network put it at "about six megatons," that is six million tons of TNT. This was revised to from three to six megatons. The second test was on Sept. 27 of this year, and it was rated from two to four megatons.

SIMILARLY IN RUSSIA the huge amounts spent for weapons development and weapons production are secret. It can hardly be doubted that they match American expenditures, which are staggering. The Atomic Energy Commission budget for the next fiscal year totals $2.294 billion. Of this, $1.357 is under the defense umbrella, largely weapons development and testing. The balance covers a variety of civilian uses from new-type power reactors to isotopes and other medical application of energy from the atom.

But AEC spending on weapons is small compared to the Pentagon budget. Research and development for weapons is billed at $7.9 billion. That is the province of John S. Foster Jr., a master persuader with Congress. He scares the daylights out of the Senate Armed Services Committee with private warnings of what the other side is up to and how our side is falling behind.

It is surely not unreasonable to ask where this race will end. The Cannikan blast (the test's code name) was to be the proof test, the final development test, of the warhead for the Spartan missile of the Safeguard antiballistic missile. The Russians on Zemlya, the conjecture was, were doing just the same thing.

But if Foster's wizards are working up new and more fantastic nuclear weapons, the Safeguard may already be as outmoded as the muzzle-loading rifle. Many scientific witnesses when the antiballistic controversy was at its height two years ago testified that it was then hopelessly out of date and wouldn't keep out incoming missile shots. Many of these witnesses had themselves been part of the inner circle of weapons developers.

SO WE COME to the strategic arms limitation talks, with the breath of hope out of Helsinki that agreement would come before the end of the year on limiting defensive missiles, with the Russians agreeing to approximately 100 around Moscow and conceding up to 250 to the United States to protect the intercontinental missile firing bases in the west. More recently doubts have been cast on this rather fragile hope. The word is no agreement until next year.

What this overlooks is the economic consequences of the race. In a totalitarian society the consumer can be squeezed down to a minimum existence. Take one item alone, the motor car. If the Russians produce this year 150,000 passenger cars, it will be a record. The United States is aiming for a 10-million-car year. All the rhetoric about a rich country being able to afford both guns and butter does not conceal the ravages of inflation and the pinch of poverty.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Okinawans Not All Eager For Japan's Rule

By PHIL NEWSOM

As the United States Senate and the Japanese Diet complete the formalities leading up to the return of Okinawa to Japan, happiness is not wholly unconfined among the Okinawans themselves.

Leftist Okinawan students protest the fact that of 134 military installations on Okinawa, the United States will retain 88 of them even after Okinawa and the other Ryukyu islands return to Japanese sovereignty.

Okinawa businessmen fear for the economic effects of gradual U.S. withdrawal.

And older Okinawans with memories going back to before World War II fear they will be treated as second class citizens by Japanese of the home islands as had happened to them under prior Japanese rule.

ACTUALLY, THIS APPEARS to be the case:

Most of the 50,000 or so American servicemen, plus their many dependents, will remain at least for the foreseeable future.

To reassure Okinawan businessmen and workers whose livelihood has depended upon the goods and services they supply to the American military community, the U.S. command has disclosed plans for a $60 million construction program which will be extended over the next seven years despite Okinawa's change of sovereignty.

It ranges from a $194,000 sentry dog training center to multi-million dollar projects covering repair and maintenance of runways and airfield facilities and construction of a new freight terminal.

Also to be constructed are an addition to the existing elementary school for children of military families, new warehouses, a new chapel and a theater.

THE JAPANESE government also is taking steps to ease for Okinawans the shock of transfer. Integration into the Japanese economic, legal and governmental system will be phased over several years.

Under Japanese rule, for instance, Okinawans actually will enjoy somewhat less autonomy than now.

On the other hand, a major sore point for Okinawans will be removed by a status of forces agreement which provides that Japanese courts will try Americans who commit crimes off post or off duty. Up to now American military courts have handled all such cases, often to the dissatisfaction of Okinawans.

U.S. nuclear weapons will be removed from the island but presumably could be returned in case of emergency.

The powerful Voice Of America relay station will be allowed to continue broadcasting.

TWELVE THOUSAND American soldiers, 66,000 Japanese soldiers and 150,000 Okinawan civilians were involved in the 85-day battle by which the Americans finally overwhelmed a suicidal last-ditch Japanese stand toward the end or World War II, and so it has strong emotional significance for both sides.

Formal date for the turn-over has not yet been set. A possible date is July 1, 1972, beginning of the U.S. fiscal year.

ART BUCHWALD

The Modern Way To Riches Through Pantry And Garage

WASHINGTON — The story concerning Aristotle Onassis' 170-clause marriage contract with the former Jacqueline Kennedy, as described by Onassis' chief steward, and denied by Mrs. Onassis' secretary, points up the hazard that only the rich must deal with. And that is:

"How does one find a faithful butler who has no desire to write his memoirs?"

By accident, I happened to be in the office of a literary agent the other day, and his phone didn't stop ringing.

This is some of what I heard:

"HELLO! YES, JIM, I was going to call you this morning. No, I couldn't find any one else on the Onassis yacht who had anything to add to the chief steward's memoirs, but would you be interested in a book written by Elizabeth Taylor's former hair-dresser? It's got some very juicy chapters in it. He was present when Liz cut Richard Burton's ear lobe with her diamond ring. Right, I'll send you over the manuscript."

The agent hung up and the phone rang again. "Doubleday? George, thanks for returning my call. Remember the gardener I told you about who worked for Frank Sinatra? Yeh, the guy who was fired when they found him in a tree at midnight looking into Sinatra's bedroom. Well he's just written a book titled 'A Tree Grows at Midnight.' It's told from the viewpoint of an outsider looking in on a world people rarely get to see. We're asking $100,000 advance. Okay, but give me your answer in 24 hours."

AFTER THE AGENT hung up he turned to me. "I've got one of Rockefeller's ex-upstairs maids writing a book on what went on in Rockefeller's basement when Happy was in Albany. And I have a ghostwriter working with Henry Ford's ex-chauffeur on a book titled "What Christina Ford Did to Henry Ford When He Got a Better Idea.' "

"That should sell. You seem to have a market for the ex-employees of very rich people," I said.

"We have a saying in the publishing business: 'In every ex-butler there's a memoir screaming to get out.' "

The phone rang again.

"HELLO! AH YES! Mr. McMurtry at the Souffle Chef Employment Agency told me you would call. You worked for Ethel Kennedy as a cook? How long? Three weeks? That's marvelous. What have you got? She served red winve with fish at a dinner she gave for Andy Williams? How soon can you get over here? Good, and don't talk to anybody about this."

"I guess there's a lot of money in being a servant these days," I said.

"If you work for the right person at the right time, there is a fortune to be made. I just sold Putnam the biography of the man who used to clean Bebe Rebozo's swimming pool. It's titled 'Backwash at Key Biscayne.' "

"I'd buy that."

"I ALSO HAVE a deal cooking with one of ex-President Johnson's ranch hands who kept a diary of what happened during the opening of the Johnson Library in Austin."

"Juicy?"

"It's going to shake up a lot of librarians."

The phone rang again. "Hellow . . . yeh . . . yeh. You were? Can you prove it? . . . And you're willing to talk about it? . . . You bet I'm interested. I'll see you at five."

"Who was that?" I asked.

"It's the gal who used to work for Martha Mitchell's answering service."

Tiny Micronesia's Great Big Fight

HONOLULU (UPI) — The mighty United States is engaged in a diplomatic battle with a sprawling group of tiny, remote Pacific islands with only 100,000 residents.

The two sides appear to be evenly matched in determination, if not in physical strength.

The islands are the U.S. Trust Territory of the Pacific, or Micronesia. The debate is over the future status of the territory, now administered by the United States under a United Nations trusteeship.

The more than 2,140 Micronesian islands stretch across an ocean area as large as the United States, but their land area totals only 687 square miles, little more than one-third the size of Long Island, N.Y. Containing such famous wartime battlefields as Saipan, Truk, Peleliu and Kwajalein, and the former nuclear test sites at Bikini and Eniwetok, they have been under U.S. jurisdiction since the end of World War II.

THE DEBATE, officially two years old, concerns just how free Micronesia should be. The United States has announced its willingness to give the Micronesians internal self-government under an arrangement similar to Puerto Rico's commonwealth status.

Most Micronesians are not satisfied with that. They want what they call "free association," which would grant them rights similar to a commonwealth with one important difference—at any time they could unilaterally sever their ties with the United States.

Behind The News

SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1971 31

Under either plan, the Micronesians would have internal autonomy, while the United States would handle their external affairs.

The apparent reason for the United States' refusal to allow "free association"—American officials don't like to discuss it —is the importance of the Micronesian islands to U.S. defense interests.

WITH THE REVERSION of Okinawa to Japan next year, that island and its formidable U.S. bases could become a weak link in the rim of U.S. allies and bases around the Communist nations of China, North Vietnam and North Korea. The Pentagon sees Guam and the Micronesian islands as the next line of defense if one day American troops must be withdrawn from their forward bases.

The Micronesians have said they are willing to have U.S. bases on their territory, but they object to giving the Americans carte blanche to take control over any land, at any time in the future.

And in spite of the clear economic and political consequences which would be raised for the tiny territory, the Micronesians say they would prefer to seek their independence through the United Nations, rather than submit to an unbreakable bond with the United States.

Last month, the third round of formal talks between the United States and Micronesia was completed at the remote village of Hana on the Hawaiian island of Maui. The secret talks, which lasted a week, were seen as an indication of some progress as agreement was reached on three key issues:

—The United States agreed to relinquish the right of eminent domain over Micronesian lands.

—The Micronesians will have the ultimate right to determine their future political status through a plebescite.

—The Micronesians will have full freedom to write their own laws and constitution without interference and influence.

IT WAS ALSO reported that for the first time, the United States made known the extent of its defense requirements in the island territory, spelling out specifically what land it may require for bases.

According to Sen. Edward Pangelinan of the Congress of Micronesia, quoted in a Micronesian News Service dispatch, the United States wants to retain the installations at Kwajalein and Eniwetok in the Marshall Islands, and wants to put installations on the island of Tinian in the Marianas chain, and at Malakal Harbor and on the island of Babeljhuap in the Palau Islands.

The substantial areas of agreement were a far cry from earlier talks when neither side seemed willing to compromise. But little or no progress was made on the key issue, whether the Micronesians should have the right to terminate any political agreement.

Simplified, it is the question, if someday the Micronesians want to throw out the Americans, will they have the legal right to do so?

"THE POINT of disagreement is so major that unless our position is met, free association won't be possible," said Sen. Lazarus Salii, chief Micronesian spokesman at the Hana talks.

But there appears to be room for compromise, such as separating military land leases from an over-all political settlement so they would not be affected by any changes. More talks are scheduled in the next few months.

In the meantime, a group of determined Micronesian political leaders is not giving an inch in the face of the power and influence of the United States.

The Swift Political Rise Of Dale Bumpers

By SYLVIA SPENCER

LITTLE ROCK (UPI)—Gov. Dale L. Bumpers has had a swift and surprising political climb since his election last year as a country lawyer whose only public office had been that of school board member.

Now he's being mentioned as a possible Democratic vice presidential candidate in 1972.

Bumpers sought the governorship with absolutely no political base and with little more than a warming smile, a way with a story and a look about him that women liked.

A poll in Arkansas taken before the heavy campaigning of 1970 showed Bumpers was known by less than 1 per cent of the electorate.

THE ONLY lawyer in Ozark mountain village of Charleston (population 1,353), Bumpers came on strong in the end, defeating former six-time Gov. Orval E. Faubus in the Democratic runoff and then swamping Republican Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller's bid for a third term.

With 61.7 per cent of the vote, he had won the governorship by the largest margin in the state's history. The Ripon Forum, the magazine of the liberal Republican Ripon Society, mentioned him as a possible vice presidential candidate for the Democrats in 1972.

Bumpers' first year in office has been just as impressive as his path to it. After a legislative session in which the governor succeeded in pushing through every major piece of legislation he wanted, there was talk he would challenge Sen. John L. McCellan for his seat next year instead of seeking a second two-year term as governor.

McCLELLAN IN the following months was campaigning harder than he had in recent memory. McClellan, 75, is seeking his sixth term in the Senate.

But now it appears Bumpers will not take on the Arkansas senior senator in what would have been a bitter and divisive struggle within the state Democratic party. Bumpers, despite the boyish charm and country-boy smile, is a shrewd and cautious politician of great skill.

Bumpers said in a recent interview that he was flattered by the national ogling but for the present, he intends to devote all his energy to improving Arkansas government and to boosting Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, A-Ark., as a presidential candidate in 1972.

Bumpers is viewed with wonder, envy and some downright distrust by the old courthouse gang who marvel at his accomplishments in the legislature at apparently no cost to his popularity.

HE HAS NOT, however, come through it all entirely unscathed. He has angered segregationists on the right and some liberals on the left, the former for adopting most of the moderate social philosophies of Winthrop Rockefeller and the latter for a less aggressive promotion of the black cause than Rockefeller.

Bumpers' national image, as well as his reputation with the local liberals, was tarnished some by his announcement that he supported Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter's antibusing resolution at the National Governors Conference in Puerto Rico. At a sometimes confusing and misleading news conference back in Little Rock, Bumpers went so far as to say he believed there could be separate but equal, segregated schools contrary to the 1954 U.S. Supreme Court ruling. However, what was not reported widely, was Bumpers' footnote, "But that has not been the case in the South."

At the end of the session, when a reporter told Bumpers his position if practiced could lead to re-segregation of the schools, the 43-year-old lawyer said, "Then disregard what I've said."

That elusiveness and inability to pin him down to one particular position has characterized the Bumpers administration. Many a person has left the governor's office sure of a firm commitment, only to discover he had none at all.

THE GOVERNOR'S biggest accomplishment so far has been the reorganization of state government, shifting more power to the executive branch and collecting some 60 of the state's 140 state agencies into 13 cabinet-like departments.

"The cabinet system is the greatest thing in the world," Bumpers said in the interview, "and reorganization didn't cost anything."

The Door To U.S. Statehood: Long Puerto Rico Wait

By MARGARET HYMAN

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI)— Twelve years after Hawaii was admitted to the union after knocking repeatedly on the door, the commonwealth of Puerto Rico still is stumbling at the threshold.

Its political leaders now are at loggerheads over the question of seeking permission for Puerto Ricans to vote for the U.S. president, a right they do not now have although they are U.S. citizens. The leaders also are divided on whether to seek statehood, full independence, or continue in the present status.

Most recently the issue that has divided the island's political parties is whether or when to ask for permission to vote for the U.S. president and vice president. Eventually, should such permission be sought, a constitutional amendment granting that right would have to be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the U.S. Congress and approved by three quarters of the 50 states.

BUT FIRST, the Puerto Ricans themselves must make up their minds what they want.

The issue has come to dominate the government scene here where continued extreme poverty, industrial development problems, major housing, education and health shortages, and a sagging tourist industry are among the issues competing for the political limelight.

The current "status crisis" was documented by the failure of the two legislative houses, controlled by different parties, to agree on a date when Puerto Ricans would vote on whether they would like to be able to vote in the U.S. presidential election.

Balked in his effort to move the island closer to what he calls "the mainstream of American political life," Gov. Luis A. Ferre said he would make the question an issue in the 1972 elections and would stage the referendum in 1973 "when our party controls both houses of the Legislature."

SENATE PRESIDENT Rafael Hernandez Colon, leader of the opposition Popular Democratic Party (PDP), retorted that the 1973 referendum date was what the Senate had asked for in the first place. Ferre's New Progressive Party (NPP) originally had wanted the referendum next February but the PDP said it would confuse issues to hold it in an election year.

If the island's five registered political parties are agreed on anything, it is that the present status must change. Ferre's party, which controls the executive branch and the House of Representatives, advocates full statehood. The PDP, which controls the Senate, and the People's Party of former Gov. Roberto Sanchez Vilella, want to "culminate" the commonwealth status by giving the island more autonomy. And the other two parties advocate complete independence.

While most observers agreed that a majority of Puerto Ricans favor having the presidential franchise, asking for it is not the same as getting it.

The island's non-voting representative in Congress, Jorge L. Cordova Diaz, admitted during the debates on the referendum that, even if "an overwhelming majority of Puerto Ricans favored it," the proposal would face an uphill battle in Congress. The reason is it is felt many of the states would look askance at an enfranchised sister state whose residents have been demanding more and more federal welfare programs, but don't pay a cent on federal tax.

ON THE OTHER hand, one leading U.S. senator, Democrat Henry Jackson has said, the franchise should be extended to all U.S. citizens, including those who live in the territories of the U.S. Virgin Islands and Guam. He said he would introduce legislation to enfranchise all these appendages to the American union.

Jackson, who served on a special committee named by President Nixon and Governor Ferre to study the presidential vote question, says the vote is a right of U.S. citizens, no matter where they live.

During two weeks of legislative hearings into the referendum, only former Gov. Sanchez raised the very real question of what would happen to Puerto Rican political parties if the island voted for the U.S. president.

While Ferre's party is aligned with the mainland Republican party, and Cordova Diaz is a member of the Republican Caucus in Congress, there is no official affiliation. Nor has the opposition PDP ever been affiliated with the Democratic Party, although its affinities lie in that direction.

PUERTO RICO'S parties are "status" parties and always have been. They are even known colloquially as the "statehood," "independence" and "commonwealth" parties. The economic divisions characteristic of the U.S. parties have always been secondary.

ROBERTA VILELLA
Former governor

HENRY JACKSON
Senate Democrat

Whatever else has come out of the latest status impasse, it has not helped the PDP, which ruled under former Gov. Luis Munoz Marin from 1949 to 1964. The party, which a decade ago asked for the presidential vote for Puerto Rico, opposed even the naming of the committee to study the question in 1969, and blocked a legislative appropriation to support the study, forcing Ferre to take up a public subscription to finance a referendum study committee.

When the committee recommended the referendum in its report issued this year, the PDP said it would go along with the recommendation just so long as the ballot explained that a vote for the U.S. president was not a vote for statehood. The party also insisted that the referendum be held this year.

THE SUPERINTENDENT of elections said he couldn't be ready this year, so Ferre's party chose to date Feb. 20, 1972. Then the PDP-controlled Senate chose November 1973 — and there died the hopes of Puerto Ricans for the U.S. presidential vote for at least two more years.

A Dubcek Supporter's Long, Lonely Separation From Imprisoned Wife

By BJOERN F. HOEIJER

LUND, Sweden (UPI)—Jiri Porizka had high hopes that after three years of separation he and his wife, Anna, soon would be reunited with their six-year-old daughter, Pavlina.

Now Porizka, a 31-year-old supporter of the deposed Czechoslovak liberal Communist leader Alexander Dubcek, sits alone in his two room apartment in Lund.

His 25-year-old wife, six months pregnant, is in a prison in the Czechoslovakia they fled in August, 1968, when the Soviet invasion put an end to Dubcek's experiment in "socialism with a human face." His chances of seeing Anna and Pavlina soon are slim.

CZECHOSLOVAK police arrested Mrs. Porizka Sept. 26 in the town of Prostejos near Brno when she flew in with two Swedish pilots for an attempt to smuggle Pavlina out of the country in the Swedes' light plane. The Swedes, Karl-Goeran Wickenberg and Christer Larsson, both 27, also were arrested.

"I should never have let Anna go. Prison will mean death for both my wife and the child she bears," Porizka said.

"I have served time in a Czech prison. I know what they are like," he added.

When the Porizkas fled they decided not to carry Pavlina, then 3 on the risky journey over the border to Austria, from where they emigrated to Sweden. They left her behind in Prostejos with Porizka's parents.

EVER SINCE they have tried in vain to bring their daughter out. In May, 1970 they began a hunger strike in downtown Stockholm to call attention to their plight. They called it off June 4 after Czechoslovak officials said they could have their daughter if they applied for legal emigration from Czechoslovakia.

Only later did they learn processing the applications would take up to four years.

The two Swedish pilots at first tried to rescue Pavlina on their own. But Porizka's parents refused to trust the little girl to a pair of tourists pretending interest in buying a Czech sports plane.

So the second time Mrs. Porizka went along, posing as Wickenberg's wife and with a false passport.

THEY LANDED their rented sports plane at Brno without trouble and prepared to continue on to Prostejos to pick up Pavlina.

Reports vary as to what happened then. One newspaper said they were arrested at their hotel in Brno. Another said they were seized immediately after landing.

One thing was clear, Porizka said: his wife was arrested— and faced a possible 18-month prison sentence for leaving Czechoslovakia illegally in 1968.

The case aroused Swedish public opinion. The Swedish Red Cross asked the Czechoslovak Red Cross to help Mrs. Porizka and the two Swedes.

CZECHOSLOVAK newspapers have accused Swedish news media of launching an "anti-Czechoslovakia campaign."

The Swedish foreign ministry has said it made inquiries about the case in Prague but could do little to help Mrs. Porizka, a Czech citizen.

Her husband said he planned to appeal to the U.N. Refugee Commission in Geneva. He also said he would ask the Swedish government to grant his wife Swedish citizenship.

This Week In The World

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

A 46-member Communist Chinese delegation to the United Nations arrived in New York this week and took up temporary residence at the Hotel Roosevelt. They rented the entire 14th floor.

The delegation is headed by Chiao Kuan-hua, a deputy foreign minister, who hailed Americans as "a great people."

The delegation visited the UN headquarters informally during the week and will make their formal entry into the General Assembly next week.

Cuban Premier Fidel Castro flew from Havana to Santiago, Chile in his first trip outside Cuba since he visited the Soviet Union in 1964. He arrived in a Soviet IL62 jetliner with a Russian crew.

GIVEN A tumultuous welcome in Santiago, he was greeted by Marxist President Salvador Allende and later said the trip and his welcome showed "the imperialists" had lost a round in the propaganda struggle. He is spending 10 days in Chile.

American jets carried out raids inside North Vietnam four consecutive days to bomb Communist antiaircraft missile sites. In Cambodia, Viet Cong attacked the airport, a radio transmitter and a bridge in a coordinate operation, killing 30 persons and destroying two helicopters and two aircraft.

In Washington, the Pay Board and the Price Commission issued rulings for Phase II of President Nixon's economic program. The Pay Board set a 5.5 per cent limit on most future wage raises and banned the collection of pay lost during the freeze. The Price Commission set a goal of limiting price increases to 2.5 per cent a year.

In the house an amendment to put prayer back in public schools was defeated.

The Senate Judiciary Committee spent most of the week in continued questioning of President Nixon's two nominess to the Supreme Court—Lewis Powell and William Rehnquist.

WITHOUT actually declaring himself in the race, President Nixon opened his reelection campaign by attending Republican fund-raising dinners in New York and Chicago, hich had closed-circuit television hookups with similar dinners in 18 other cities. The President praised his vice president, Spiro T. Agnew — but did not say Agnew would be his running mate in 1972.

On Amchitka Island in the Aleutians, last Saturday the United States set off its mightiest underground nuclear blast ever. A crater developed, as expected, at the site. An apparent crack at the bottom of a small lake drained it and dead sea animals began to turn up. Officials for the Atomic Energy Commission said they would run tests to see if a storm or the blast killed the animals.

INTRIGUING IDEA

Sell Art To Feed Poor

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. Religious Writer

England's Cardinal John Heenan shocked some of his fellow Catholic prelates by proposing at the recent Roman Synod of Bishops that the church sell its art treasures to feed the poor.

The proposal never came to a vote, but it remains an intriguing idea for Christians of all denominations to ponder.

The wealth of churches is nowhere near as great as some of the wildly-exaggerated figures that have gained currency. But Christian bodies — Protestant, Orthodox, and Anglican as well as Roman Catholic —unquestionably do have substantial sums tied up in art and architecture. In the United States alone, churches own buildings currently valued at about $100 billion.

Would the church be healthier, would its message be more convincing to the modern world, if it divested itself of this world's riches to the greatest degree practicable, and used the money to serve the needy?

Quite a lot of rank and file Christians of all denominations probably would agree with Cardinal Heenan that this would be a salutary move.

After all, the Founder of the church set an example of poverty. Jesus had no home, and rarely knew where his next meal was coming from. He just "went about doing good" as the Bible puts it, and refused to worry about such things as money.

If the church today were to emulate his example —to the extent practicable —it might live down the bad image it has acquired, among young people especially, as a fat-cat "establishment institution."

But there are arguments to be made on the other side, too.

Since more than 90 per cent of the wealth of churches is tied up in buildings that are not easily adapted to any other purpose, liquidating this investment is much easier to propose than to accomplish. There simply isn't much market for used churches.

Moreover, as Jesus himself pointed out, man does not live by bread alone. His spirit needs to be fed as well as his belly. And while there may be some people who do not need the uplifting effect of beauty to draw nigh to God, there undeniably are others whose ability to worship is enhanced by the soaring majesty of a Gothic arch, or the radiant splendor of a stained glass window, or the deep-voiced music of a great organ.

To love beauty is to love God, for beauty, however it is created and wherever it appears, is a sign of God, one of the hallmarks of His presence in the universe.

It is one thing to say that churches have a bad tendency to spend too much on bricks and mortar, and not enough on ministering to human need. Very frew churchmen would deny the essential truth of that allegation.

But does the solution lie in an attempt to liquidate the treasures of art and architecture already amassed —or in resolving to use future income in a more balanced and generous way?

Is austerity essential to realization of the church's true role as servant of mankind —or is there a legitimate basis for the claim, so glibly made on cornerstones, that a lovely church is erected "to the glory of God?"

These are good questions for any congregation to debate, openly and prayerfully. They deserve something better than simplistic answers.

Chaplins' Meeting Scheduled

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Sixty-five chaplains and national church executives working with military personnel will attend the Western Area Retreat for Lutheran Chaplains to be held Tuesday through Thursday, at St. Paulus Lutheran Church.

Lutheran chaplains stationed in the western states, including Alaska and Hawaii, aboard West Coast based ships, national church service executives from New York City, Minneapolis, Minn., and Washington, D.C., will participate in the three-day meeting.

The retreatmaster will be Rev. Paul Hansen, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church in Denver, Col., a youth and family life counselor. Hansen is the director of research for the Family Life Committee of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

He is also the coordinator and co-author of a six-volume family life study, has written numerous manuals and study guides on family life, and is a member of the Board of Directors of the National Council on Family Relations.

Speaking at five retreat sessions, Hansen, a former U.S. Army chaplain, will lead the chaplains in a discussion of "The Chaplain's Spiritual Equipment."

Other speakers will include Chaplain (Col) Victor H. Schroeder, 15th U.S. Air Force, March AFB, Riverside; Chaplain (CDR) Oliver H. Wentzel, U.S. Naval Shipyard, Bremerton, Wash.; and Chaplain (CDR) Geroge R. Brosius, USN (Ret.), of San Diego, the Western Area field service pastor for the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A.

Presiding at all retreat sessions will be Dr. Raymond C. Hohenstein, Washington, D.C., assistant executive secretary of The Lutheran Council's Division of Service to Military Personnel.

The meeting is one of five retreats for Lutheran active duty chaplains sponsored annually, stateside and overseas, by the Washington-based division of service to military personnel of LC-USA.

Singers will present portions of Palestrina's "Missa Brevis" tomorrow during the 9:15 a.m. service at St. Anselm's Parish in San Anselmo.

The group, under direction of Darrell Park, will also present an adoramus te and an Ave Marie.

Reform Judaism Seeking Return To Synagogue As Center Of Life

I-J Special Report

LOS ANGELES — Prepared to utilize radical experimentation, leaders of Reform Judaism have agreed to engage in a number of programs and field activities to return the synagogue as the center of Jewish communal life and a meaningful Jewish identity for its members.

At the concluding session of the 51st Biennial General Assembly in the Century Plaza Hotel the 3,000 delegates of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations mapped a two-year program to implement findings of a longrange study prior to their centennial convention in New York in 1973.

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, UAHC president, and Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, vice-president, will supervise the intensive assault upon synagogue shortcomings, coordinating national and regional resources of Reform Judaism's 98-year-old organization.

They will direct activites of a national task force that will go into the field of more than a million communicants to "listen to the grassroots" and sample meaningful modern applications of Reform Judaism and its related facilities among both clergy and layment, among distinguished theological and lay scholars.

Staff experts will traverse the entire field of UAHC structures — in major metropolitan centers as well as the hinterland — assessing, evaluating and lending professional assistance to immediate and urgent needs.

The two-year program, which Dr. Eisendrath has declared calls for "radical changes to achieve a resurgence" of Reform Judaism, will also serve as a transmission belt for successful approaches in some synagogues which have helped to pioneer significant changes to transform a large impersonal structure into an intimate, participatory community setting.

Such synagogues, it was indicated, have developed individual programs in various fields — adult education, worship, youth, social action, etc. — that activize major portions of the congregation in creative, involved activities on many levels.

Delegates acted on results of a UAHC longrange planning study by Prof. Leonard J. Fein, Brandeis University sociologist, and a social research firm, T. D. R. Associates of Boston, which concluded that the synagogue has become a peripheral "service station" providing members with counselling, religious education and, only minimally, fulfillment of spiritual needs.

Dr. Fein told delegates the survey demonstrates the need to end the "ideological disarray" among Reform Jews, declaring the wide ranging study shows that in overwhelming numbers they cannot define what Reform Judaism believes in relation to God, ritual, practice and tradition.

To create "a theology for the contemporary Jew," Dr. Eisendrath said, the UAHC Worship Department, in close cooperation with the Central Conference of American Rabbis will develop "not one but many kinds of worship."

Goals will be sought, not by only using distinguished scholars but by learning and probing the beliefs of rank and file members through community forums and study programs in areas everywhere.

Rabbi Daniel Davis, retired director of the New York Federation of Reform Synagogues, heads a newly created Committee on Smaller Congregations to help congregations that are "small in size, withering on the vine, isolated from central Jewish resources, deprived of rabbinic guidance and, worst of all, denuded of young people."

Rabbi Schindler said another major objective of Reform Judaism's synagogue problems will be to "break down the barriers between the pulpit and the pew, using techniques of group inter-action and communication."

An especially successful phase of the longrange research methodology will be continued and expanded — the holding of "games" or weekend workshops which help to provide a "sense of community" within the temple. These will be carefully supervised by Dr. Fein and other professionals.

The need to meet the crisis in interpersonal relationships within the synagogue was underscored by Dr. Eisendrath in his convention keynote sermon in which he called for creating of more "interest-centered" groups within the synagogue to "give value to individual identity within the values of a precious community identity."

"Our synagogues," he asserted, "must strive harder to counteract the paralysis of dehumanization and depersonalization which characterizes our age and corrodes much of the intimacy and comradeship that distinguished the historic house of prayer and assembly."

Choir Will Sing Twice At Seminary

Trouveres, a 16-voice mixed choral ensemble from California Baptist College in Riverside, will sing at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary Tuesday.

They will sing during the morning worship service to begin at 9:50 a.m. in John A. Broadus Chapel and will perform in concert in the Golden Gate Student Center, following the worship service. Speaker for the service will be Dr. C. Arthur Insko, professor of Christian ethics at the Seminary.

The Trouvere's appearance is part of a five-day tour which will include a performance in Sacramento at the 31st annual session of the Southern Baptist General Convention of California.

Under the direction of Dr. Curtis Cheek, head of the Cal Baptist music department, the select scholarship musicians provide a varied program of vocal chamber music, serious contemporary pieces, 16th and 17th century sacred music, and popular numbers.

Service For Skiers Once Again

Growing out of the successful responses last year, a "Skiers Only" worship service will be offered again by Lucas Valley Community Church on Thursday nights at 7:30 p.m.

The services feature folk singing, brief ski-related devotionals by the church's skiing pastor, Rev. Dale Nystrom, and hot spiced cider during the weekly 20 minute ski movies being provided by Modern Motion Pictures of San Francisco.

Starting with a celebration of the church's ski club, "The Great Life Ski Club," on Jan. 6 there will be orientation, the film, "The American Ski Technique," and light refreshments.

The services are non-sectarian, and again they are opened to the public of interested skiers. They will begin Jan. 6 and conclude March 23.

Classical Guitarist Will Lead Service

Larry Kriegbaum, a classical guitarist from Richmond, will lead the congregation of the First Baptist Church of Mill Valley in song at the 7 p.m. worship service tomorrow.

Rev. John A. MacDonald said the young singer-composer will perform some of his own works and also conduct a songfest. The service will be held in Spangler Hall of the church, 285 Miller Avenue.

'Jesus Cult' Arrives Ice Cream, Hot Dogs

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)— The "Jesus Cult" came to the town of Iraja with a thunderclap from the sky, an image of a bearded man on a cliff, ice cream cones and hot dogs.

Few hippies make it out to the working class Vista Alegre housing developing on the northern outskirts of Rio de Janeiro where the Cult of Jesus is for school girls, housewives, the poor and humble, the sick, the faithful, and just the curious.

For Iraja, Christ came Saturday, Oct. 16, with a loud crash of thunder that shook the neighborhood.

"I was at home Saturday and I heard the terrible roar myself," Mrs. Marili da Silva, 32, said as she lit candles at the base of the cliff.

On Sunday word spread throughout the neighborhood that the image of the face of Christ, roughly engraved on the wall of a sheer, 100-foot cliff behind the Vista Alegre superblock, could clearly be distinguished. It was about two feet square, and the face appeared draped in desert robes.

Word of the event spread quickly in the neighborhood.

A goat was slaughtered at the base of the cliff in homage.

Thousands of onlookers arrived daily to gaze at the shrine.

Discussions in the crowds frequently broke out as to whether a miracle had in fact taken place. The doubters were quickly drowned out by a chorus of the faithful.

Newspapers got word that a new spiritual cult was in the making in Iraja and spread the news. They carried headlines when water began to seep from the cliff. Worshippers and curiosity-seekers poured into Iraja from other neighborhoods in cabs, private cars and buses. With them came vendors of popcorn, soda pop and ice cream to nourish and refresh the impromptu pilgrims in the hot tropical sun. Boys sold candles at three for 10 cents.

Dozens of candles were burned at the foot of the cliff at all hours of the day and night. Cripples in wheelchairs made their way to the quarry in search of divine cure.

The Roman Catholic Church was quick to disapprove. It has been doing its best to fend off an upsurge of spiritism in Brazil during the past five years.

"We take Christ seriously, but we do not take apparitions on the wall seriously," commented Msgr. Ivo Lorsheiter, secretary general of the National Conference of Brazilian Bishops.

But the words had little effect on men like Esteven Pinto Ramos, 61, who spent an entire day at the base of the magic cliff, chipping off bits of stones and distributing them to pilgrims for tips in return.

What miracles can the enchanged rocks achieve, he was asked.

"Well, they say its good for the cough," he replied.

Missionaries Will Speak In Petaluma

Youthful missionaries will be guest speaker at the 7 p.m. service tomorrow at the Neighborhood Church of the Christian Missionary Alliance, Petaluma.

Speakers will include Donald Kiehl, who served in Gabon, Africa, and Lillian Ng, a student from Hong Kong who served in Taiwan. Both are members of the Alliance Youth Corps and are students at Simpson College, San Francisco. Both are committed to foreign missionary service after their schooling.

Carleton To Preach At Convention

Dr. W. A. Carleton, Distinguished Professor of Church History and former academic dean of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary will preach the annual sermon at the California Southern Baptist General Convention in Sacramento on Wednesday.

Carleton will speak in the morning session of the topic, "The Preacher's Task."

The convention will meet Tuesday through Thursday in Sacramento's Memorial Auditorium.

THANKSGIVING NOTICE DATE

Special Thanksgiving Day church notices are being sought for a special roundup to be carried in the Independent-Journal on Tuesday proceeding the holiday.

Deadline for the notices will be Friday to assure publication. They can be mailed to James E. Williams, church page editor.

Dr. Foy Valentine, of Nashville, Tenn. and head of the CLC will be speaker on the Golden Gate campus at 9:50 a.m., Thursday, in John A. Broadus Chapel.

Speaker at 9:50 a.m. on Friday, in the chapel, will be Dr. Baker J. Cauthen, of Richmond, Va., executive secretary of foreign missions for the 11.7-million member Southern Baptist Convention.

'Superstar' Will Be Given At Hub Church

A live and full-scale performance of the religious rock opera "Jesus Christ Superstar" will be presented in San Anselmo's First Presbyterian Church next Friday.

The 8 p.m. public performance is to be presented by a troupe from Old First Presbyterian Church in San Francisco, where it has been playing.

The event is the fourth in a continuing series of musical events this fall at the San Anselmo church on Kensington Road at Ross Avenue.

"Jesus Christ Superstar" is currently running on Broadway, and the record is near the top of best seller lists. It portrays in music the last week of Christ's ministry, following the week's events as written in the gospel of Matthew.

Scripture Reading

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Bible Society encourages wider reading of the Scriptures in three major ways: it publishes annually a daily Bible reading plan, promotes Worldwide Bible Reading Month, from Thanksgiving to Christmas, and endorses observance of National Bible Week, Nov. 21-28, and Bible Sunday, the Sunday before Thanksgiving.

Is Your Church in Need of Reformation?
Test it with these five theses:
T F The Bible is without error in everything it says.
T F God declared mankind not guilty because of Christ.
T F Jesus Christ is true God and true man.
T F Faith in Christ alone without works saves.
T F Religious fellowship requires full agreement in doctrine.
According to the Word of God, these statements are true. See John 10:35, Romans 5:18, Colossians 2:9, Ephesians 2:8, and Romans 16:17.
If any of the teachings of the Bible are not accepted as God's truth in your church and your protests prove useless, He advises you to find a church which holds Him and His Word pre-eminent.
We have such a church and invite you to share its blessings. Sunday service at present is at 7:30 p.m.

CHIT-CHAT — State Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael (left), and Gov. Ronald Reagan talk about a turn-of-the-century bicycle. Shortly after, Reagan signed into law legislation by Behr which lays the groundwork for a statewide network of bicycle paths.

Behr's Bicycle-Path Bill Inked By Reagan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan, with a backdrop provided by a turn-of-the century bicycle, today signed legislation which lays the groundwork for a statewide network of bicycle paths.

On hand for the bill-signing ceremony was the measure's author, Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, who said in a statement, "I hope the enactment of this bill into law will signal the beginning of a new era of interest in the bicycle as an alternative form of transpgrtation to the automobile."

Behr, an avid cyclist, said the bill declares that it is the policy of the state to foster and encourage the use of bicycles by Californians.

It also authorizes local governments to acquire land for bicycle paths and requires them to consider bicycle paths in their general plays.

Reagan and Behr joked about the antique bike before the bill-signing.

Referring to a bicycle accident in which Senate leader James Mills, D-San Diego, broke his collarbone, Reagan told Behr, "You better be careful on this (the bicycle) or you'll wind up president pro tem."

Behr replied, "That's a fate just this side of death."

The senator's legislation also prohibits the state and local governments from abandoning rights-of-way until it has been determined whether the land can be used as bicycle paths.

The bill would allow local agencies to require subdividers to provide bicycle paths and permits construction of paths on levees, canal and river banks and pipeline rights-of-way.

Employees Hit New City Hall

TORONTO (UPI)—According to a recent survey of indoor employees, Toronto's new City Hall is far less appealing inside than out.

In a Toronto Daily Star survey, many employees in the building said they suffered for the sake of the twin tower's noted appearance. For instance, they are forbidden to open curtains, because, as one city official said, "the place would look like a monster with some of its teeth out."

Employees at the city hall complained of a mysterious dust which wafts down from the ceilings during the night and clogs typewriters, of a "lousy" cafeteria and of clocks that don't agree on the time. One man said the building's air conditioning was responsible for his dandruff.

Buses May Need Fund Surpluses

Golden Gate Bridge District directors were told yesterday the agency may have to spend more than $3 million in surpluses to finance forth coming commute bus operations in the first fiscal year.

District staff, repeating predictions made Thursday to the district's transportation and finance-auditing committee, said operating expenses of the system, scheduled to go into operation early next year, would be roughly $5.8 million before depreciation if the proposed fares are adopted.

District staff has said right along that the agency, despite using more modern buses than Greyhound and offering better routes, would not be able to avoid operating the system in the red.

Directors yesterday said they hope to get an idea of just how deeply surpluses will be affected by the bus operation at a budget session on Nov. 23. At the same time, board members also will review a planned five-fare zone structure for the system.

The tentative bus budget figures were drawn up without any actual operating experience to supply data, the staff stressed.

The district's fleet of buses is expected to roll a total of 4,385,858 miles during its first fiscal year, at a cost of $1.32 per mile before depreciation.

One big question is that of driver's wages, equal to about 69.5 cents per mile, but still subject to negotiation. The labor issue, particularly involving protection of transferring Greyhound drivers' pension funds, has delayed start of the commute bus system past the Dec. 6 proposed date, probably to early January.

tem for the surplus funds are a five-year plan to spend $15.2 million on bridge repairs and improvements to approaches in the next five years, Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring pointed out to the board.

In addition, the Legislature has instructed the bridge district to draft rapid transit plans for presentation to Scaramento in 1973. Even if the district receives two-thirds of the planning costs from federal grants, the plans are expected to cost the district $800,000, Luehring warned.

The spending would drain the district's existing reserves to half a million dollars by the end of fiscal 1873-74, according to Robert W. Tough, deputy auditor-controller.

On the black-ink of the ledger, continuing bridge tolls at the present rates should generate surpluses of about $3 million a year.

"These figures would indicate we could fund the bus and ferry subsidies during this (five-year) period from bridge toll surpluses, but the trend would definitely indicate additional funds would be needed in succeeding years," Luehring and Tough explained.

They added that the bus and ferryboat depreciation probably could not be funded from the surplus.

Complicating the picture is the district's long-range commitement to provide rapid transit in the Golden Gate corridor. Assuming federal payment of two-thirds of the actual construction costs, the district may still need to lay out $88.5 million between fiscal 1973-4 and 1975-6.

Luehring and Tough predicted the district "must look to other sources in order to implement its longer-range program."

A Banner Year For The Bridge District

The Golden Gate Bridge District's 1970-71 annual report, released yesterday, concluded that the last fiscal year was a banner one for the agency.

The report noted that the last of the original construction bonds were paid off and that the district moved firmly into ferryboat and bus service.

Operating revenue reached a record $8,341,881 for the fiscal year, but expenses of $5,822,231 also set a record. As a result, according to the report, the surplus toll revenuc was $4,020,690, compared to $4,629,436 the preceding year.

Lowell Edington, president of the district board, said the fiscal year resulted in major strides toward reducing the glut of 92,000 vehicles that cross the span on an average day.

The Golden Gate Bridge board Also:

PRIVATE FIRM — By an 11-2 vote, confirmed the Marin Transit District agreement to subsidize the Marin Transit Systems Inc. after its routes are taken over by bridge district buses. The private, Marin City-based firm will be paid the difference between its fares and $15,000 a month for one year. It will test proposals for transporting senior citizens, welfare and health care recipients, and visitors within Point Reyes National Seashore.

LIGHTS — Heard Dist. Engr. Robert E. Shields report that a dozen new lighting fixtures are being tested on the span, preparatory to relighting the entire span.

FENCE — Referred to the building and operations committee plans for security fencing of the enlarged employee parking lot southwest of the span.

PAINTING — Heard from Shields that the long-range span repainting program approved two years ago is on schedule, and that the bridge has been found to be in good condition after rust removal.

TRAFFIC — Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring reported October traffic was 3.6 per cent above October 1970, with a total of 2,872,080 vehicles crossing the bridge. Ferryboat patronage was up 40 per cent over a year ago, with 64,014 passengers in October.

TOW TRUCKS — Referred to the district's attorney a California Highway Patrol request that bridge district tow trucks extend their service as far north as the Spencer Avenue overcrossing in Sausalito.

VISIT — Heard Luehring report that four congressmen and the administrator of the federal Urban Mass Transportation Commission will tour the bridge, ferry facilities and Larkspur ferry site beginning at 8:30 a.m. Nov. 20.

Novato Seeks A City Seal

The Novato City Council will consider adopting a city seal at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Novato Community House.

The council now has four designs to chose from. They were submited by Barbara Murphy, Betty Beebe, Carl Rangel and Eileen Morrison.

The city adopted a seal several years ago which split the center of Mount Burdell. The left side showed Indian teepees and a tomahawk, and the city hall and gavel on the right.

The seal was so unpopular that it was never used. The council recently passed an ordinance abolishing that seal and will now try to seek one that is more acceptable to the public.

Suicide Prevention Center "Line"

Call Four, Five, Four Four, Five, Two Four

By FRANK FARRARA

For some persons the line between life and death can be a telephone line ... a line to someone who will listen to their calls for help.

In Marin the line is open to an office in San Anselmo where the Marin Suicide Prevention Center stands ready to listen.

"Our first job is to save lives," said Richard H. Reubin, recently appointed executive director of the center.

"We often just talk and motivate them to get through the night," he said. "The phones are ringing, we're getting 30 to 40 calls a week and they're increasing."

THE SUICIDE rate in Marin, an affluent county considered by many one of the choice living areas in the state, is the second highest in California, Reubin reported.

Reubin believes that most suicidal individuals, even those who jump off the Golden Gate Bridge, aren't 100 per cent committed to killing themselves. Two who survived the bridge leap said later they were "relieved they didn't die," he said.

There is always some force toward life and "we work on the part on the side of life," he said. "We try to find the things that make a person want to go on living. Each individual has something that gives meaning to his life."

A slogan adorning the wall of the office is "Your Friend For Life," but Reubin indicated there might be a better one in the offing.

ONE OF the problems is that persons contemplating suicide give clues, but their family, friends and acquaintances aren't aware of them.

"Every suicide could be prevented if people were aware of the prodromal clues," he said.

Often people who have made suicide plans "go into a state of euphoria," he said. "Suicide isn't usually an impulse behavior. It is thought out and communicated to others, but people don't pick up the clues."

At the same time, Ruebin advised, the belief that a person who talks about suicide won't commit suicide is a myth. "That's false," he said. "He's a high risk and should be taken seriously."

POTENTIAL signs are marked changes in behavior, depression, apathy, suffering a significant loss of some kind, loss of appetite or sleep, giving away personal possessions, drawing a will or writing a suicide note.

There are comments such as "I just won't be able to make it through the day," he said.

There are persons who say, "I'm going to kill myself," but the people around them often would rather not recognize their serious intent and prefer to remain uninvolved, Reubin commented.

There is a reluctance to discuss suicide if a person is worried or "not talking," he said.

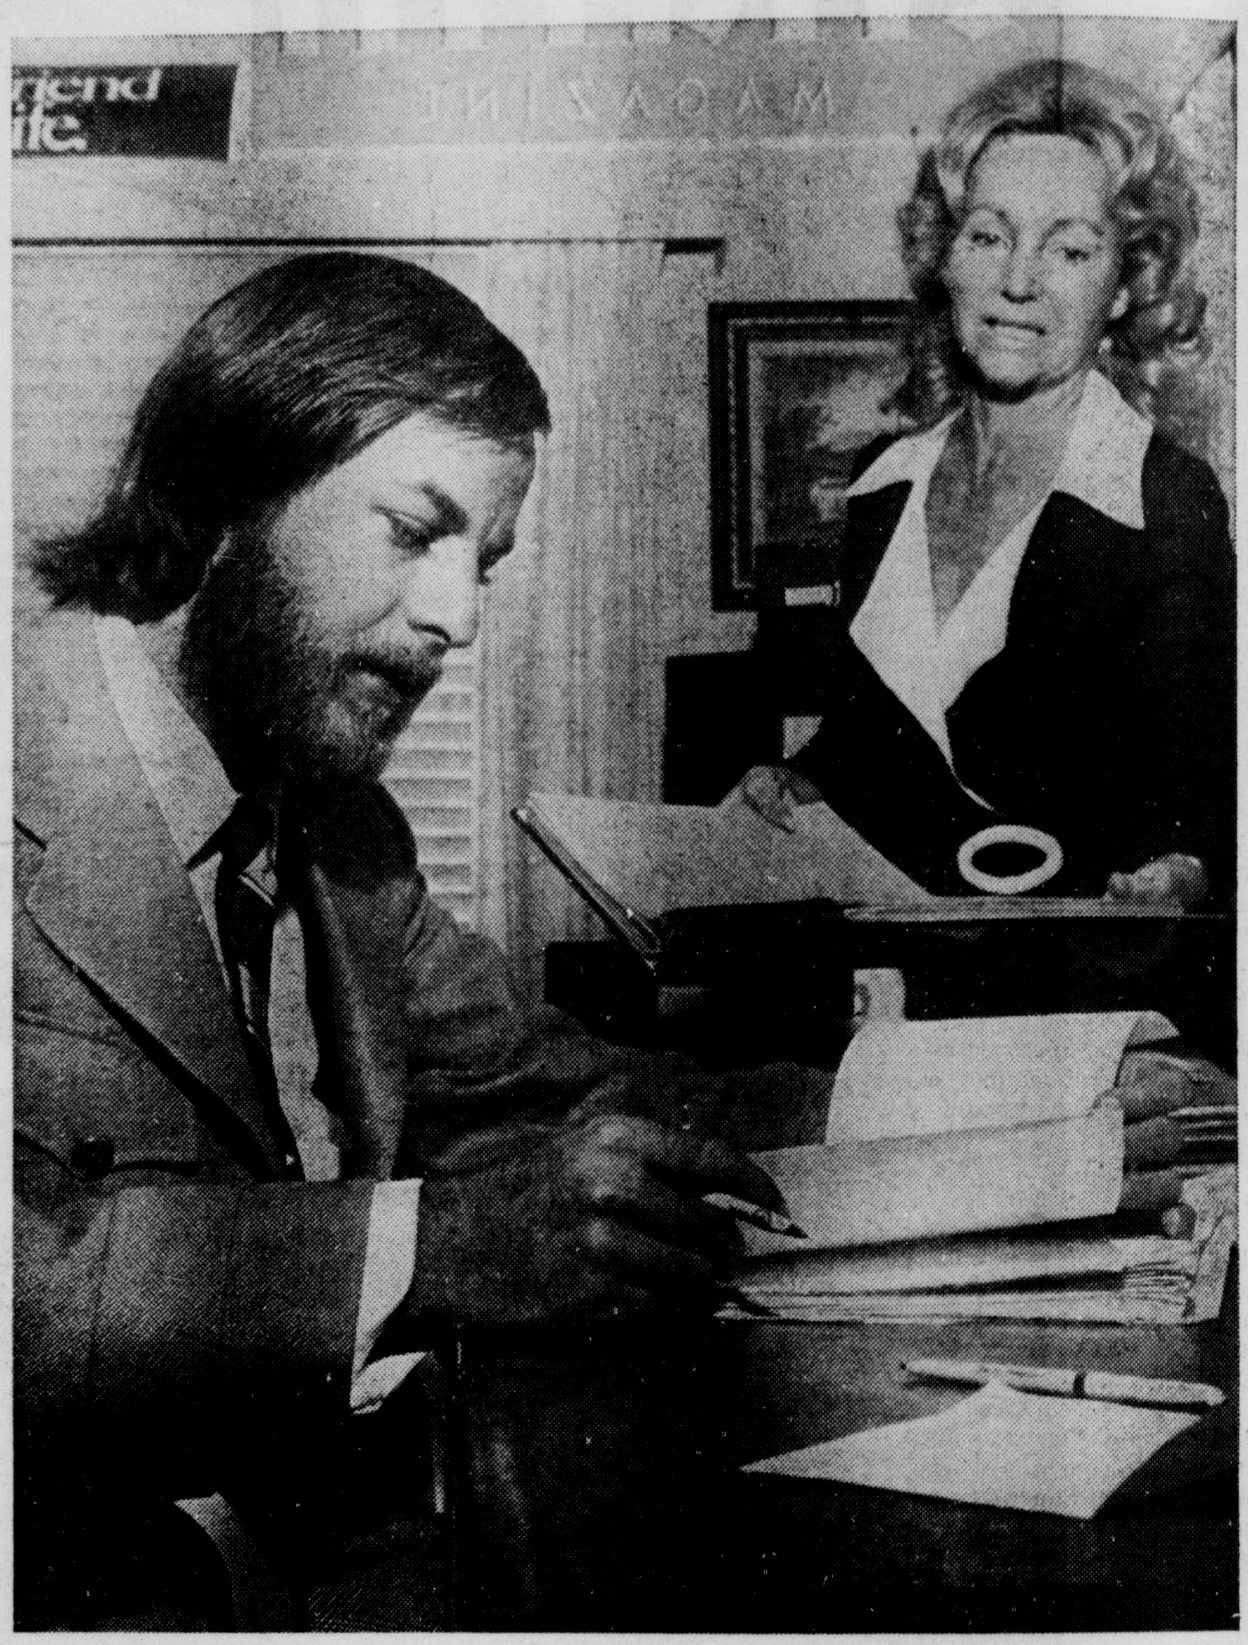
One of the center's goals is an educational program to remove the taboo suicide has . . . people are afraid to mention it," Reubin said. "Moreover they often fear triggering suicidal acts through the power of suggestion."

IT WOULD help to discuss the problem directly with the person contemplating suicide, Reubin advised.

The center operates 24 hours a day, every day of the year, with a part-time, paid secretary and "some 60 volunteers," each on duty at least four hours a week.

The center refers callers to other agencies such as the Community Mental Health Center, Marin Open House, etc., depending upon the type of problem and the best way to help the caller, Reubin said.

"Right now we don't have the staff, volunteers or time to see people in person," he said. "However, that is one of our long range goals.



RICHARD H. REUBIN, executive director of the Marin Suicide Prevention Center, settles down to some tasks at hand, with Jean Yount, a volunteer worker, assisting. Volunteer workers are vital to the center, and keep it operating 24 hours a day, every day.

REUBIN emphasized that all matters that come through the center are "completely confidential" and people shouldn't "worry that stories will be spread."

Police are notified only when it is a "matter of life and death" and emergency action is required," he said.

There are two incoming lines to the center and the number is four, five, four — four, five, two, four.

Anyone concerned about a friend can call and "we'll give counseling and advise, and probably suggest that we be permitted to call "the friend," he said.

REUBIN stressed that volunteers from the community are vital to the center, commenting: "It's the volunteers who make the center work."

Being a volunteer at the center "isn't the kind of work everyone can do, and we have extensive training and screening of our volunteers," he said. A 12-week training course is provided through the College of Marin and individuals who wish to volunteer can call the center any week day from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

As executive director, Reubin's job including screening, training, evaluating and supervising the volunteers in their task of counseling persons who are contemplating suicide.

"Part of a volunteer's job is to clarify what can be done" when they receive a call, Reubin explained. "They have to know how to evaluate and make appropriate referrals."

Reubin said among the long range goals of the center is to have a clinic with a professional staff and "expert public speakers" to inform the public.

ANOTHER goal is to undertake a study on suicide. Marin has a high rate of suicide, alcoholism and divorce, Reubin reported. A study could delve into whether the "same phenomen accounts for these."

He said the Golden Gate Bridge has become "world famous for suicide" and the publicity keeps it going as a place for suicide, a self-perpetuating chain of events and he wondered what the effect would be if the bridge "weren't romanticized."

Reubin, who once worked for the University of Hawaii's "Life Line," said the suicide rate was high in Hawaii, a place that is similarly "romanticized."

Marin County is one of the last counties in the Bay Area to have a suicide prevention center. "Previous calls from Marin were going to the San Francisco center," Reubin explained.

THE NEWLY organized center needs community financial support, a requirement for obtaining other funding such as grants, Reubin said.

"A sustaining membership is $100 and an associate membership, $10, but we'll accept any amount," he said. Donations may be sent to the Marin Suicide Prevention Center, P. O. Box 792, San Anselmo, 94960.

The center has had a series of fund raising efforts including a bake sale and white elephant sale and has received a "one-time" grant from the Marin County Board of Supervisors to keep it operating until it receives funding from another agency.

The San Rafael Junior Women's Club plans to place 200 contribution containers marked "HELP — Marin Suicide Prevention" in Terra Linda and San Rafael this month in the latest fund raising effort.

Reubin also said he would welcome professionals in the mental health field who want to volunteer to train lay volunteers.

The establishment of a center has been culmination of an effort that began in September, 1970, when the articles of incorporation were signed.

At that time, Deputy County Coroner Keith C. Craig, chairman of the ad joc committee to set up the suicide prevention program said the group hoped to open a center by Jan. 1, 1971.

WHEN IT was approved as a nonprofit corporation, the center elected a six-man board of trustees, headed by Kathleen Lyons of San Rafael as president, and a call was sent out for volunteers to man a center.

The next major step was to find quarters for the center, since an office at Northgate Industrial Park, donated by Harry Heifetz, was inadequate as a permanent location.

In January, the center gained permission from the Marin County Board of Supervisors to rent a portion of the county health clinic building at Fourth Street and Grand Avenue, San Rafael.

There were appeals for donations to purchase emergency telephones and recording equipment, and about two dozen volunteers had completed their training, but operations were delayed by lack of money.

CRAIG said the organization had written to about eight different foundations throughout the United States, but requests were being turned down, and the main source of revenue was individual membership contributions of small sums.

The center obtained office space in San Anselmo and volunteers began manning telephones on July 1.

Then the Marin Mental Health Advisory Committee and the Marin Health Facilities Planning Council endorsed the center's operation; endorsements required by the Marin County Board of Supervisors before it would act on a request for $6,000 to finance the center until Jan. 1, 1971 and permit hiring a professional director.

Craig said the center would not become eligible for financial support from the United Bay Area Crusade until it had a paid director.

IN AUGUST the supervisors voted to grant the center $6,000 and in September the center board hired Ruebin, 25, who had worked for the Los Angeles Suicide Prevention Center, the University of California at Los Angeles's "Help Line" and the University of Hawaii's "Life Line."

The training of volunteers paid off in September when a typist in the county auditor-controller's office, who had received special training for the center, saved the life of a woman.

They typist, Penny Curtis received a call at work from a woman complaining about a bill from the county for emergency medical services she had received at Marin General Hospital.

FROM THE tone of the conversation and the desperation in the caller's voice, Mrs. Curtis recognized the potential of suicide.

Acting on a hunch, Mrs. Curtis called the woman back and discovered she had taken at least 15 pnehobarbital pills. A police officer was sent to the apartment while Mrs. Curtis kept the woman talking.

When the police arrived, the woman was still talking and police put her in touch with doctors.

Mrs. Curtis said later she would not have recognized the danger without the training she had received, and even if she had, she would not have known what to do.

A FUND RAISING effort in the offing, Mrs. James Myers, vice president of the San Rafael Junior Womens Club, is ready with containers which will be placed in Terra Linda and San Rafael this month as a club project to aid the center.

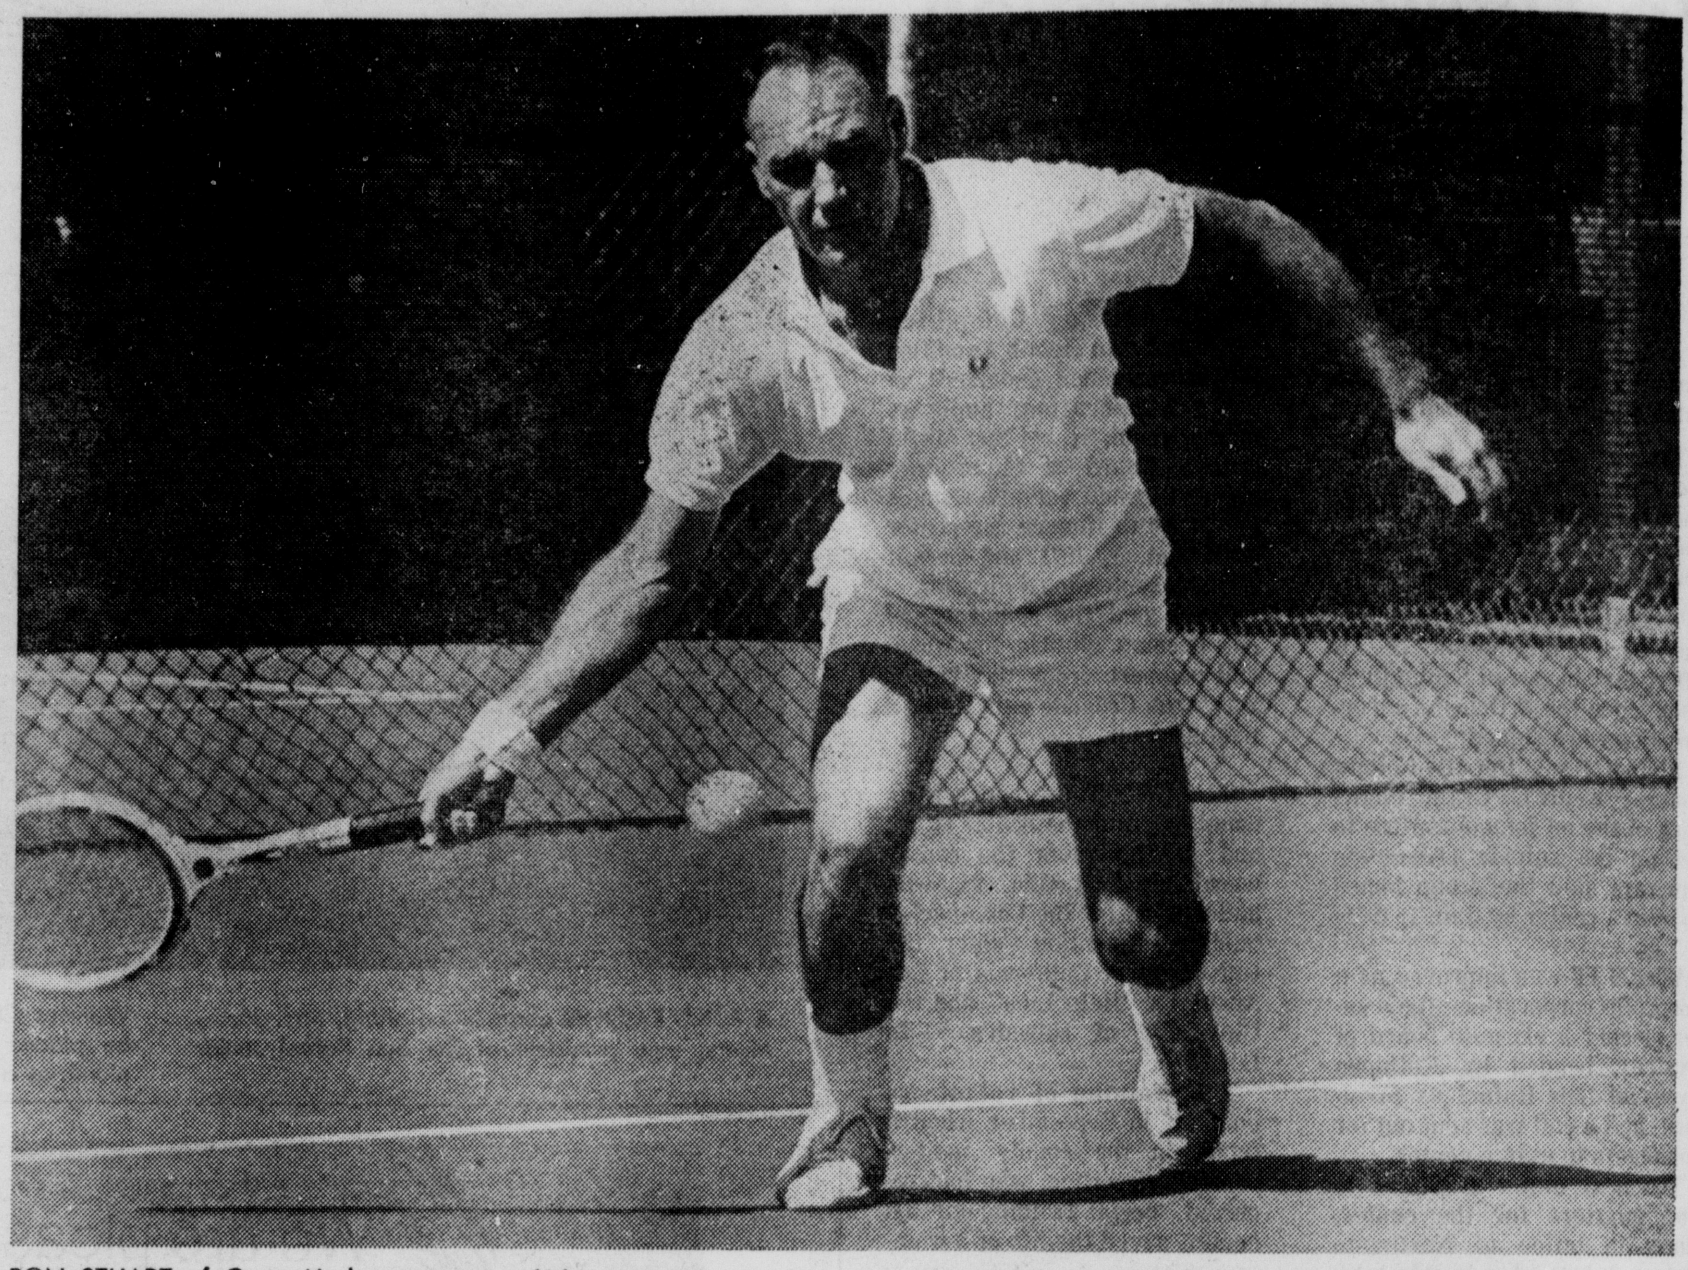
Tennis Perfectly Suited To Marin

Tourneys, Players Abound



RON STUART of Corte Madera was one of the competitors in the 12th annual National Men's 35 tennis championships at the Mill Valley Tennis Club last year. Marin, with its fine weather and host of tennis enthusiasts, has been the scene of many tournaments for players of all ages.

By DAVID EINSTEIN

Suppose you tried to invent a sport perfectly suited to Marin County.

It would have to be something that could compete successfully for the leisure time of our affluent society. Also, it should take advantage of our magnificent weather. And finally, it ought to appeal to all kinds of people, including women and children.

That's quite an order, but don't bother racking your brain to find such a pastime. The game of tennis fills the bill.

TODAY thousands of Marin residents play the game. They play for exercise, for competition, and just for the fun of it in private clubs, at schools and on public courts.

On the competitive level, Marin has become one of the hottest spots in Northern California, with four top tournaments hosted by local clubs. And we have given our share of talent to the tennis world, including Mike Machette of Belvedere, a member of the U.S. Junior David Cup team, and Sharon Walsh of San Rafael, U.S. Junior Women's champion and the junior champion at the 1970 All-England Championships at Wimbledon, England.

ALL THIS becomes more impressive when you consider that tennis did not really catch on in Marin until about a decade ago.

Marin was first introduced to tennis officially in 1901, with establishment of the Lagunitas Country Club in Ross. It stood alone until 1929, when the Mill Valley Tennis Club was formed.

Yet Marin still was a long way from being ready for tennis, and vice versa. It wasn't until after World War II that the game really began to snowball into national popularity. And it wasn't until the late '50s that Marin was settled down enough to embrace it.

ONCE it started, however, growth of the sport in Marin was phenomenal. In 1957 the Belvedere Tennis Club opened its doors. In 1960 it was the San Rafael Racquet Club. A year later, the Tiburon Peninsula Club opened.

The Tiburon Club, with a membership of 500 families, and the racquet club, with 400, are the largest tennis plants in the country, each boasting 10 courts. Lagunitas, which has intentionally kept its membership down, has six courts, while Mill Valley, with 260 families, and Belvedere, with 150, have five courts apiece.

Other private clubs in Marin include the San Marin Recreation Club in Novato and the Harbor Point Beach Club in Mill Valley. Two other clubs, one in Fairfax and one in Scott Valley, are in the planning stage.

HOW DO Marin's private clubs compare with facilities elsewhere? According to Barry MacKay, they measure up quite well. MacKay, a former Davis Cupper and touring professional who now lives in Ross, said, "I think there are a half-dozen real good club layouts in Marin. The clubs themselves are way above average in relation to clubs all over the country."

Unfortunately, the success of the private clubs has not been carried over into the public sphere, where municipal courts have not been built at a rate commensurate with the need for them. In fact, almost all new courts in the last decade have been built at schools, and not by cities.

BUT A court, and the schools have helped make tennis available to more people. The newest large-scale facility, the complex at College of Marin, has gone far to alleviate the problem.

Another solution, which has been proposed by several leading exponents of tennis in Marin, is to have a public tennis center and program financed by the county. Hal Wagner, a teaching pro at the racquet club for the last decade and at Mill Valley for 14 years before that, said, "In several years we'll have a crop of junior players who will make it necessary for the county to take a long look at the possibility of building a public tennis center. There could be some big tennis complex on county property."

MACKAY spoke of a similar need. "I think there could be a better and more organized junior program for the public — on public courts and maybe at the clubs, too," he said.

Meanwhile, schools and park and recreation departments throughout the county, organize and run public summer tennis programs each year. Coincidentally, the San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department has just finished its courts at Boyd Park.

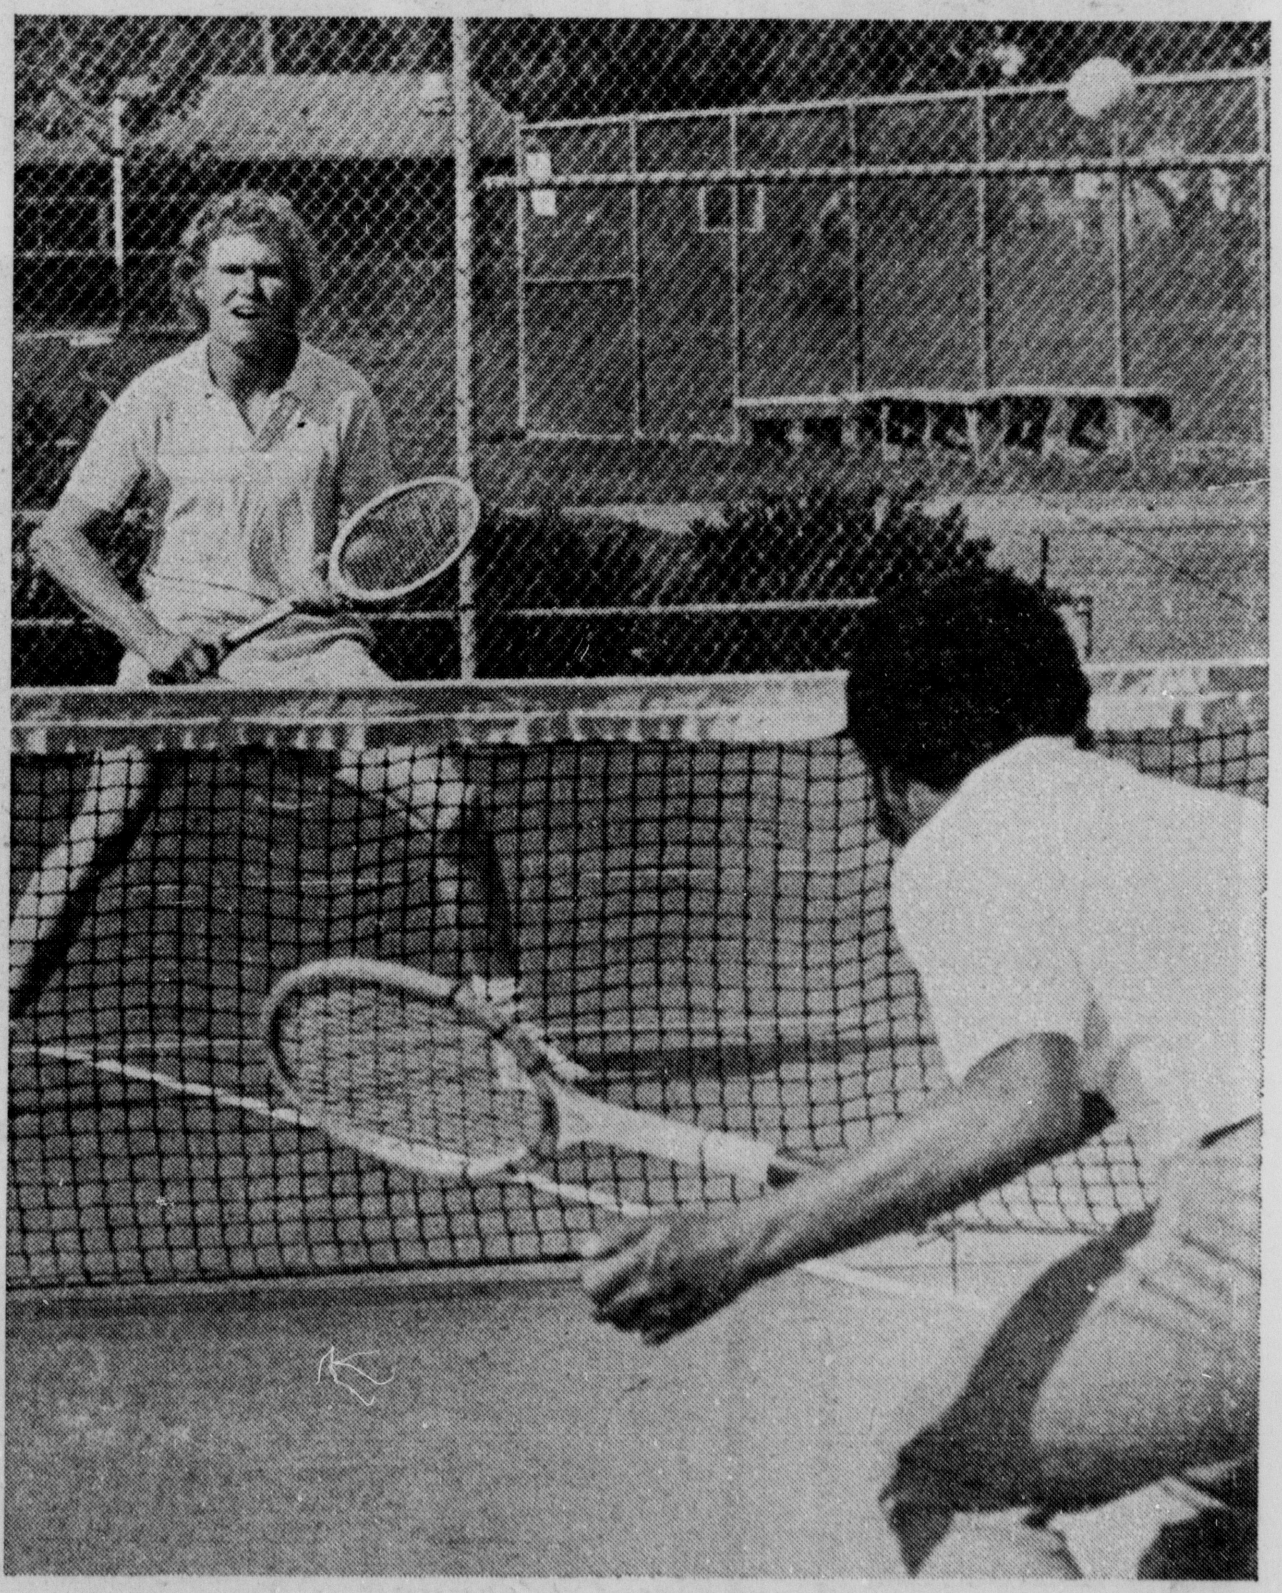
One school, Redwood High of Larkspur, has become a legendary tennis power in Northern California. Last year the Giants, under coach Glen Dickey, reached a milestone unparalleled in Marin sports history when they won their 50th straight Marin County Athletic League match.

MOST of Redwood's talent comes from the Tiburon Peninsula, which is producing junior champions at a fantastic rate. This year 18 junior players from Marin have Northern California Tennis Association rankings, and 12 of them are from Tiburon.

Junior tennis long has been a focal point for the sport nationally, and Marin long has been a center for junior competition. Two prestigious tournaments are held here each year — the nine-year-old Belvedere Junior Tourney, and the 13-year-old Mill Valley Junior Hardcourts.

ON THE adult level, the Mill Valley club has for 13 years hosted the National Men's 35 Hardcourt Championships, and the Tiburon Peninsula Club is the annual site of the Bay Counties Tournament.

All four tournaments draw entries from throughout Northern California, and in the case of the Mill Valley nationals, competitors have come as far away as the East Coast.



COLLEGE COMPETITION last March found Tim Morgan, left, of the College of Marin, playing against Shiraz Alikhan of Skyline College at the College of Marin courts which have proved to be an often used recreational resource for the community.

CHIT-CHIT — State Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael (left), and Gov. Ronald Reagan talk about a turn-of-the-century bicycle. Shortly after, Reagan signed into law legislation by Behr which lays the groundwork for a statewide network of bicycle paths.

Behr's Bicycle-Path Bill Inked By Reagan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan, with a backdrop provided by a turn-of-the century bicycle, today signed legislation which lays the groundwork for a statewide network of bicycle paths.

On hand for the bill-signing ceremony was the measure's author, Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, who said in a statement, "I hope the enactment of this bill into law will signal the beginning of a new era of interest in the bicycle as an alternative form of transpgrtation to the automobile."

Behr, an avid cyclist, said the bill declares that it is the policy of the state to foster and encourage the use of bicycles by Californians.

It also authorizes local governments to acquire land for bicycle paths and requires them to consider bicycle paths in their general plays.

Reagan and Behr joked about the antique bike before the bill-signing.

Referring to a bicycle accident in which Senate leader James Mills, D-San Diego, broke his collarbone, Reagan told Behr, "You better be careful on this (the bicycle) or you'll wind up president pro tem."

Behr replied, "That's a fate just this side of death."

The senator's legislation also prohibits the state and local governments from abandoning rights-of-way until it has been determined whether the land can be used as bicycle paths.

The bill would allow local agencies to require subdividers to provide bicycle paths and permits construction of paths on levees, canal and river banks and pipeline rights-of-way.

Employees Hit New City Hall

TORONTO (UPI)—According to a recent survey of indoor employees, Toronto's new City Hall is far less appealing inside than out.

In a Toronto Daily Star survey, many employees in the building said they suffered for the sake of the twin tower's noted appearance. For instance, they are forbidden to open curtains, because, as one city official said, "the place would look like a monster with some of its teeth out."

Employees at the city hall complained of a mysterious dust which wafts down from the ceilings during the night and clogs typewriters, of a "lousy" cafeteria and of clocks that don't agree on the time. One man said the building's air conditioning was responsible for his dandruff.

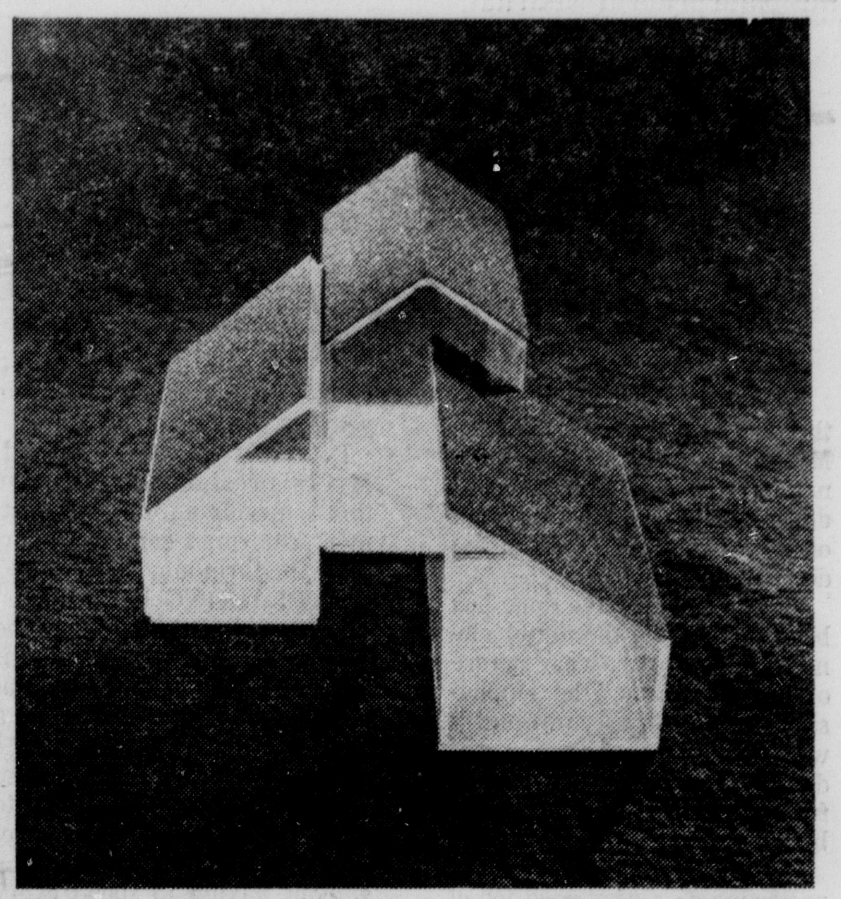
A SEA CAPTAIN'S home from the World War I era has been given new life by architect Eugene A. Wedell of Sausalito, revamped on a 30-foot wide lot in Sausalito. Although it is small, Wedell said the house at 109 Third Street has a spacious appearance inside.

THE INTERIOR of Eugene Wedell's house features space sharing of the entry, living, dining and kitchen areas, yet each space is expressed in a different way and functions individually, according to Wedell.



ONE OF the arrangements possible under the room module system developed by the Wedell Group of Sausalito is displayed in the above model. The system utilized an exposed timber and plywood sandwich construction technique, and the room units can be arranged in a variety of conventional or unconventional ways.

Old, New In Homes

Sausalito architect Eugene A. Wedell, a member of the Wedell Group which has developed innovative low cost housing, lives in an half-century-old home.

His home "started from a World War I era sea captain's house and the new addition takes its gambrel roof shape and exterior materials from the original house," Wedell reported.

"The interiors are clad in one by four cedar siding and the floors are walnut veneer," he said.

THE HOUSE "built largely by myself and my friends over a period of yeard" is on a 30-foot lot in Sausalito and although small, looks spacious inside, Wedell reported.

"The overall aspect of the house is one of respect for the old house with a new life."

While maintaining respect for the old, Wedell also is concentrating on new, low cost housing.

BETWEEN 1968 and 1970 the Wedell Group developed a room module system using exposed timber and plywood sandwich construction techniques and has constructed two prototypes in Sausalito.

The room units consist of a two-story, gable-shaped trussed living unit and story and one-half and shed-shaped bedroom and bath units that can be arranged in a variety of ways.

John H. Myers—A Man Of Music

Led College Of Marin Into Musical Bloom

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

"I was in the right place at the right time," says John H. Myers, as part of the explanation of his outstanding record during his 11 years as chairman of the College of Marin Music department.

"If the work I have done has been productive, the major element is due to the very nature of Marin County," he emphasized. "It is a community where there has been a great deal of sympathy and support for and participating in the arts by residents.

"The fine public school music programs do a very good job of preparing students at lower levels so that at the college level we have a large number of well trained, talented and interested students. The department is a reflection of that.

WHAT HAS happened in the past 11 years has happened to meet a need that exists in the county," he declared.

When Myers, who had been head of the music department of Eldorado High School in Placerville, came to the College of Marin in 1960, the only performing groups were a small a cappella choir and small orchestra, and he handled the whole program himself.

The staff now includes six full-time instructors, four part-time ones and 48 different music courses. Performing groups are now a 60 piece symphony and 80-piece concert band, both directed by Myers; a small madrigal group, a collegiate chorale and community chorus, which when combined number about 200 voices; an opera workshop, a chamber music group and a jazz ensemble.

Not a large man, Myers is nevertheless forceful and speaks with the same focused intensity and energy one sees in his conducting.

"OURS is one of the larger music departments in all of the junior colleges in California," Myers says, "in terms of curricula, staff and, in my opinion, quality. I am fiercely proud of this department. I think we have one of the finest junior college departments I know of."

In fact, the reputation of the department, which offers a music major, has acquired such prestige, he noted, that some very talented students, who normally would enter a conservatory or university, now choose to take their first two years at the College of Marin.

In view of this record, Myers's resignation effective this semester as music department chairman came as a surprise in Marin music circles.

EXPLAINING his reasons, Myers said, "I've headed the department for 11 years, and it has been one hell of a lot of hard work. I felt I needed a change. The pressures have been very great, and I also wanted to be able again to devote an adequate amount of time to teaching and conducting without having to spend every night and weekend working. I felt it was time to turn over the job to someone else who might have some fresh ideas and institute some changes helpful to the department.

"The present chairman, Scott Merrick, before coming here was the music department head at Contra Costa Junior College and is well qualified, and I am working under his guidance with pleasure."

Myers's present title is instructor of music, and he teaches introduction to classical music and elementary musicianship, a pre-theory course for prospective music majors. He says he is especially delighted to be able to devote more time to conducting the community orchestra and band.

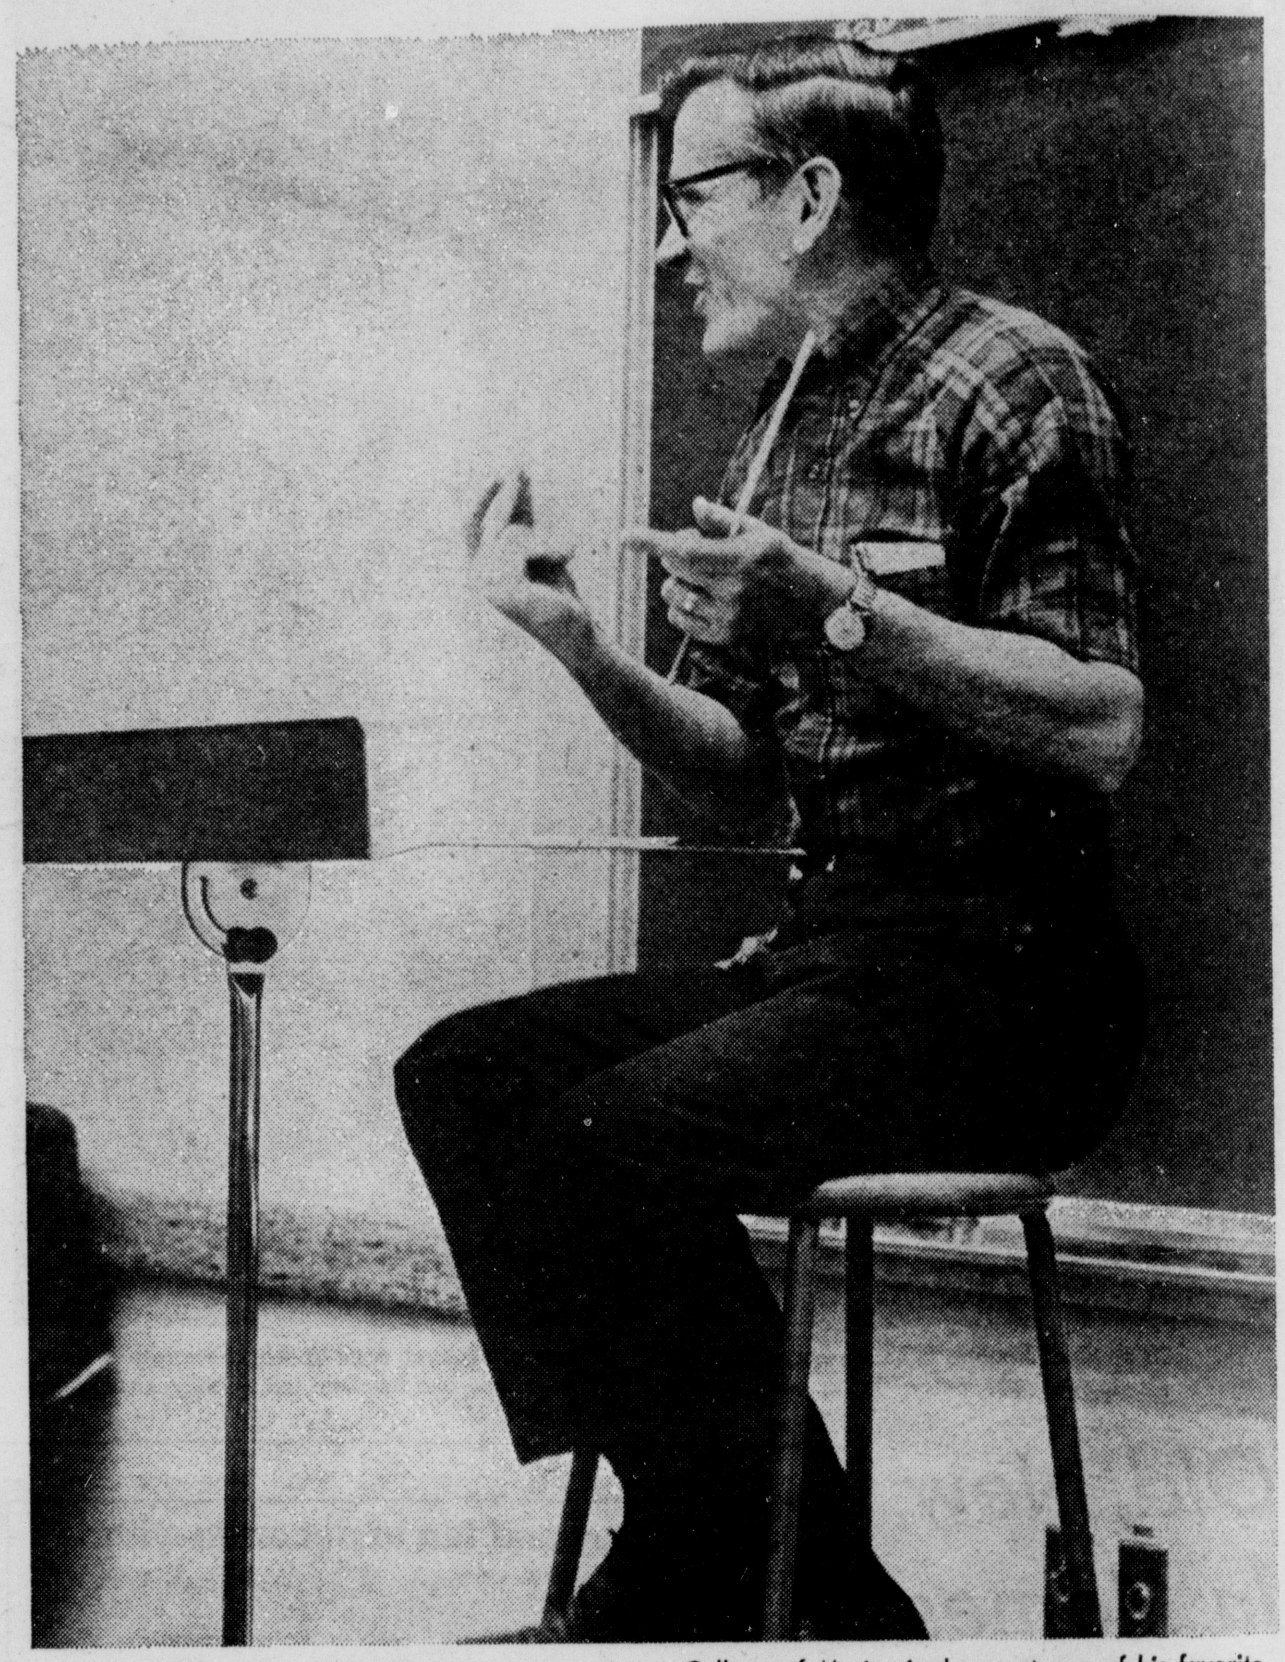
MUSIC has been a part of the former music chairman's life ever since he was born in Chicago in 1924.

Both of his parents, as well as his brother and sister, have been involved in music, he said, and he studied violin and voice as a boy. He earned his bachelor of music education and master of music degrees at Indiana University, where he got his first taste of conducting as student conductor of the University's symphonic band and conductor of the ROTC marching band.

While attending the University he specialized in percussion instruments, for percussion had been his major interest since high school.

It is not surprising, therefore, that some of the outstanding numbers in the College of Marin's band and orchestra concerts have featured percussion.

"I did my master's recital on tympani," he recalls. "I can and have played all the instruments in the band and orchestra, but my performing skills are rusty now," he confesses.



WITH APPROPRIATE GESTURES, John H. Myers, former chairman of the music department at the College of Marin, is shown at one of his favorite tasks, conducting the college's community band, a job he still has.

MYERS has studied under Ernst Hoffman, former conductor of the Houston Symphony and Breslau Opera and with William Schaefer, conductor of the University of Southern California Symphony band. While working toward a doctorate of music at that University he assisted with operations of the famed Trojan marching band, was arranger for concert band music and a tenor soloist with several Southern California choral groups.

His first job was as instrumental music teacher at Livingston elementary school in Livingston, Calif., four years. His second position was head of the music department in Eldorado High School.

A perfectionist totally devoted to very high standards of musical achievement, Myers is aware that he is known as a "tough prof" and makes no apology for his reputation.

"MUSIC is a very stringent discipline," he argues. "The kind of music we pursue here in study and performance is the kind of musical activity which does demand a great deal of participants. It is no accident that we have the fine performing groups that we have. This stems from having a great many talented students and also from teachers and directors who set very high standards and demand students achieve them.

"One of the interesting things I find about music performance is the search for perfection which can never be attained."

Conductors, he points out, are rarely popular. "Musicians may not always want to work very hard, but they have to be made to work hard. You have to have subordination of individual ideas to a common one that everyone is striving for in large ensembles, and in order to mold people, individual psyches sometimes have to be stepped on."

Questioned as to what he feels has been his most important contribution during his chairmanship of the department — apart from building it to its present stature — Myers replied without hesitancy, "I would say the band and the orchestra, and as one single accomplishment, the institution of the concerto concerts."

THE CONCERTO concert is one in which several students play the various movements of concertos instead of one soloist performing in all movements.

"This has been one of the bright spots in my life," Myers said enthusiastically. The concerto concert has been a fantastic music education experience.

"Playing under this plan gives seven or eight young people their first experience with playing in public with orchestral accompaniment. The orchestra loves it, and I have found it a very rewarding conducting experience that has helped me to be a better conductor."

Myers is also proud of the opportunities offered in the department's adult education program. Junior college is not really the correct term for the College of Marin, he points out. It is one of the California Community Colleges. "That is the legal, official name," he declares, "and we do serve the community.

"AMONG our day credit students are a great number of returning adults who come back to broaden their education, including housewives. We have had women who have got music degrees, he says.

He added, "Four of our major performing ensembles — orchestra, band, community chorus and opera workshop — are scheduled at night and include a great many adults. This provides the opportunity for those with musical skills to continue playing their instruments and singing for the rest of their lives. The College of Marin is one of the few places where they can do this."

The former music chairman's views on music as a way of earning a living and on future trends in music were of exceptional interest.

Convinced of the practicality of a musical career, Myers hastened to point out under what circumstances he believes in this practicality.

"In one sense employment opportunities for people with musical training are better than ever," he notes, "but in another sense they are not. If a student is prepared to consider going into fields other than performance, opportunities are better than they have ever been."

HE SAYS the field of teaching — from music in public elementary and high schools through college — will be good, though it is temporarily bad at the present time.

The door is open, he says, in the retail and general merchandising end of music and anything related to the recording industry.

"The guy running the corner music store and the publishing company like Carl Fischer prefer someone with a musical background," he observed.

"I heard the owner of a chain of recording studios say that if he had the choice between hiring a fine technician who knew nothing about music and a person with a good musical background, he would choose the latter."

He continued, "Other fields open are those of music librarians — there is a certified music librarian now in the big city libraries that have music departments — and the whole new area of music therapy.

"PERFORMANCE is another matter," he admits. "In popular music dance bands are practically a thing of the past — even famous musicians can't work —" he says, "and in classical music, performing in such groups as symphony orchestras is restricted. There are about 1,200 symphony orchestras in the country — most are community orchestras — but we probably have no more major professional orchestras than we had 20 or 30 years ago. And the average salary is miserably low."

Why the College of Marin music department, with its progressive principles and up-to-date equipment does not have facilities for teaching and producing electronic music was another point of interest.

"Electronic music means investment in tools, staff and space that are very expensive," Myers says. "We have thought about it, but the current tight money situation precludes moving in that direction."

HE IS not convinced, furthermore, that electronic music is the music of the future.

"My personal opinion is — and I may be wrong —" he conceded, "is that this is not the music of the future, but I do think it has made a contribution and will continue to make a contribution in new sounds and the manipulative possibilities of tape and other electronic techniques that can be incorporated into music.

"I do think there is a main stream in music, though I'm not sure we can say where we are going. I don't think electronic music is going to supplant the type of music we have been accustomed to. People want to produce music themselves."

SO DEDICATED to music is John Myers that he finds little time for much of anything else. When he can find the time, he says he enjoys fishing, camping, hiking, and, of course, adding to his record collection.

He has one son, Russell, who is in his second year at the College of Marin.

"He has studied and played the flute for a number of years and plays rather well for fun," his father said. "No, I've never pushed him in music," he smiled.

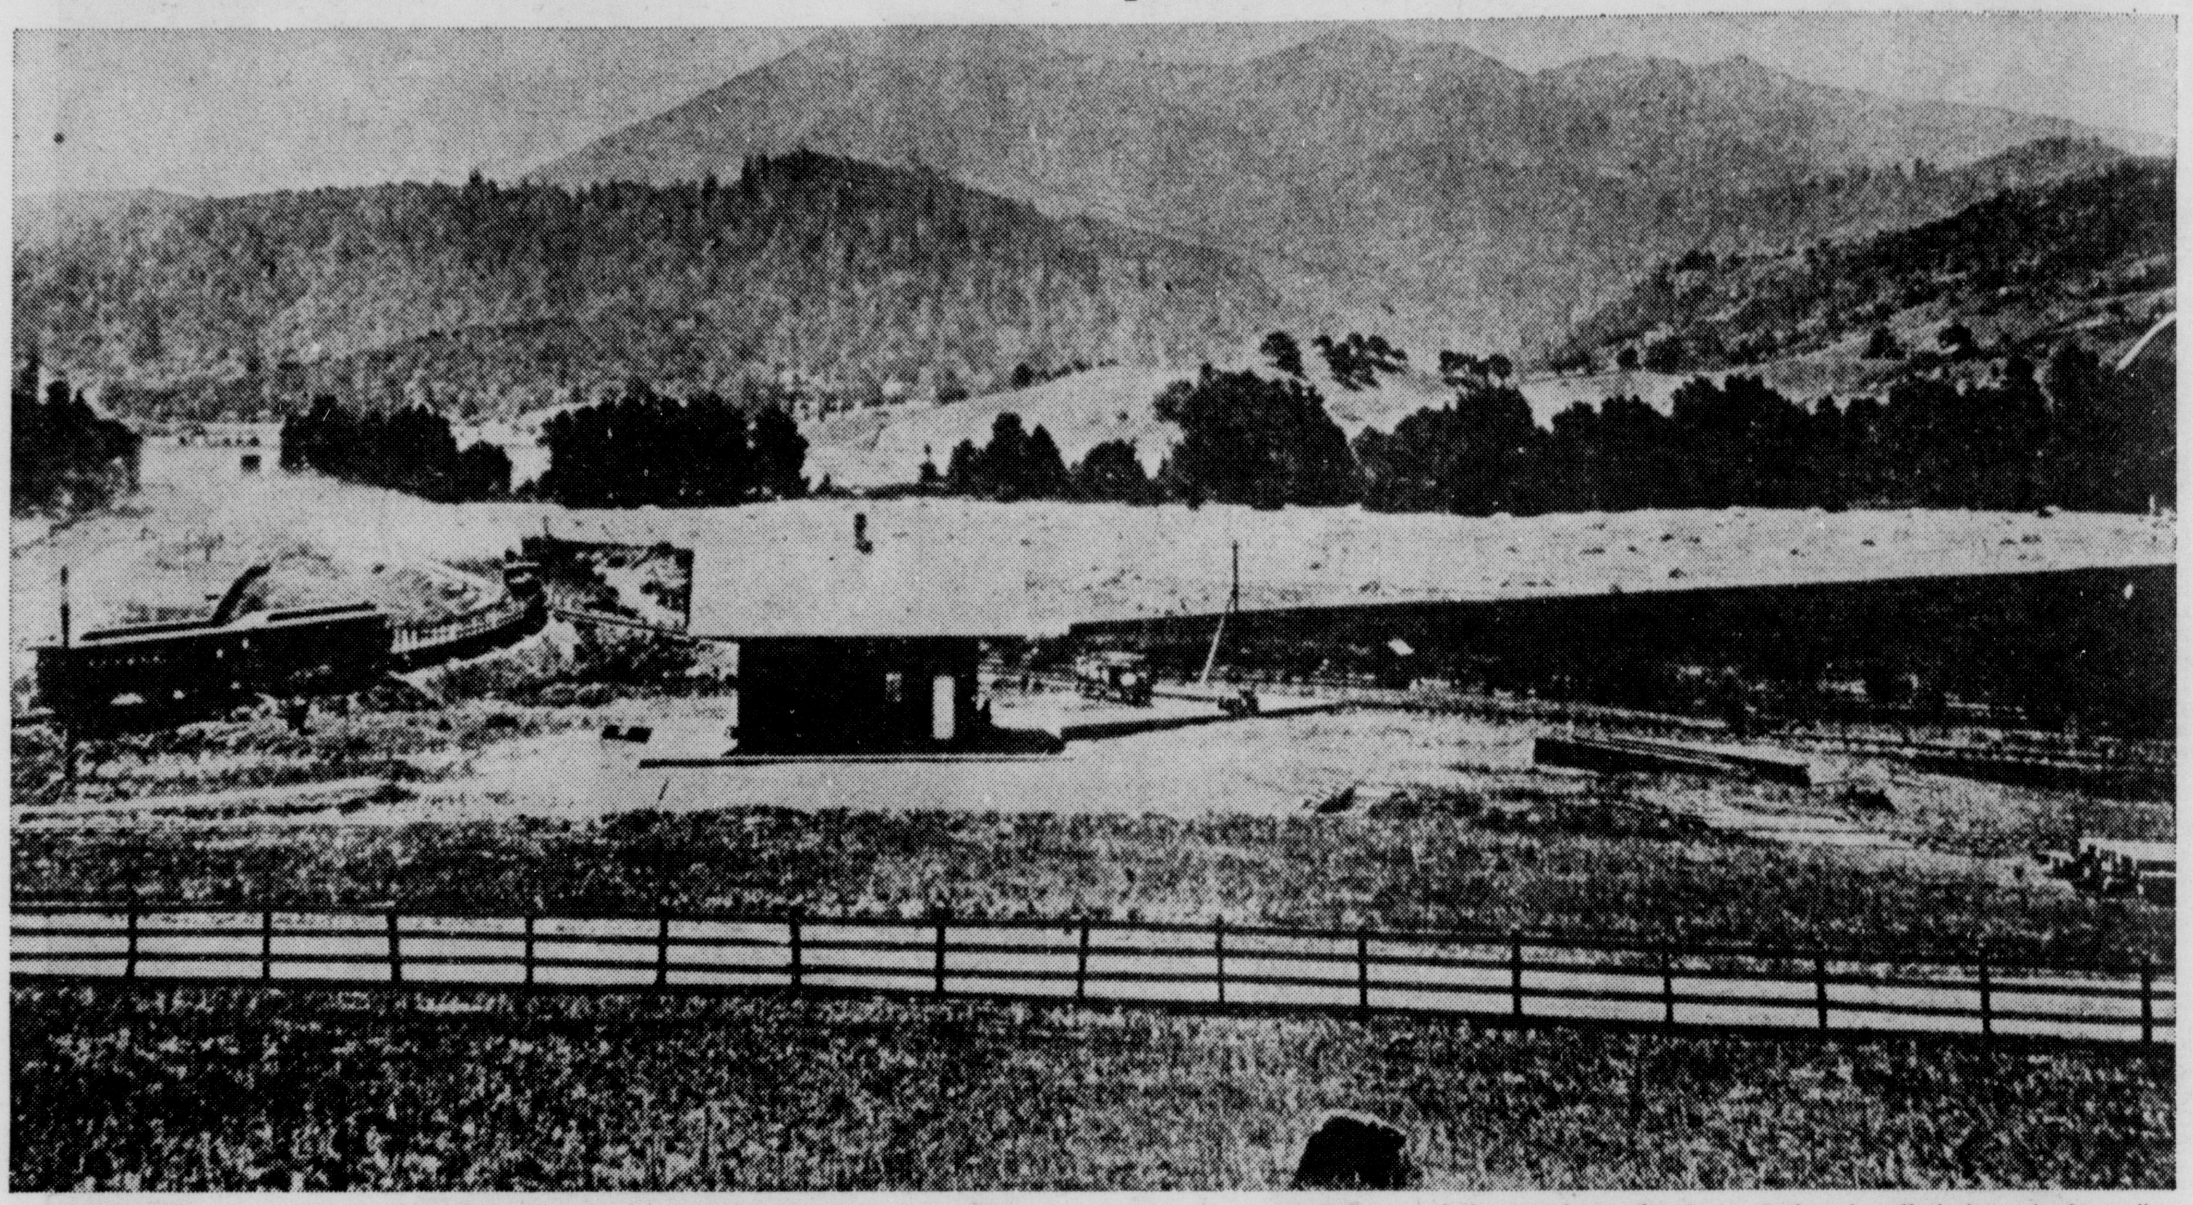
A "State Of The City Report" On San A



ROSS VALLEY in the early 1890s was a wide open area with the railroad fork in the foreground marking the area of San Anselmo now known as the Hub, with the Ross hills in the background. Engines of the North Pacific Coast Railroad puffed through the valley many years to be succeeded by electric rail trains.

SAN ANSELMO Avenue wasn't packed with pedestrians when this photo was taken, but as the main business street of the community it is often a scene of heavy traffic. In recent year, the Red Hill Shopping Center has served as another major shopping area of the city.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The real reason "All in the Family" has been so popular on CBS is not its so-called daring in having as "hero" a bigot who tosses off ethnic labels with biased abandon. Basically, it is simply a slightly updated version —and you could find some bigotry in the program I'm about to mention if you reflect — of Jackie Gleason's "The Honeymooners." And, if you care to go back even farther, "The Bickersons" program of radio days. As the French so aptly put it —the more things change, the more they are the same. The old formula of loudmouthed, dominant male winding up with egg on his face more often than not.

Universal Pictures will produe a two-hour television version of "The Royal Family" with the legendary Lynn Fontanne heading an all-star cast, not yet defined. The show will be filmed in Hollywood early next year, but the outlet and time have not been determined. This, of course, is the notable 1927 Broadway play by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber about a famous theatrical dynasty that, obviously, had the Barrymore clan as prototype.

The Jenny Sullivan seen Oct. 28 on ABC's "Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law" episode is the daughter of veteran star Barry Sullivan, who also happened to be on that particular show.

Joe Namath, a pro football quarterback of note when he isn't sidelined with injuries, as at present, gets another television shot with a syndicated series. Stadium Productions has put him back on the air with a weekly half-hour involving interviews with guests from the sports world and other milieus.

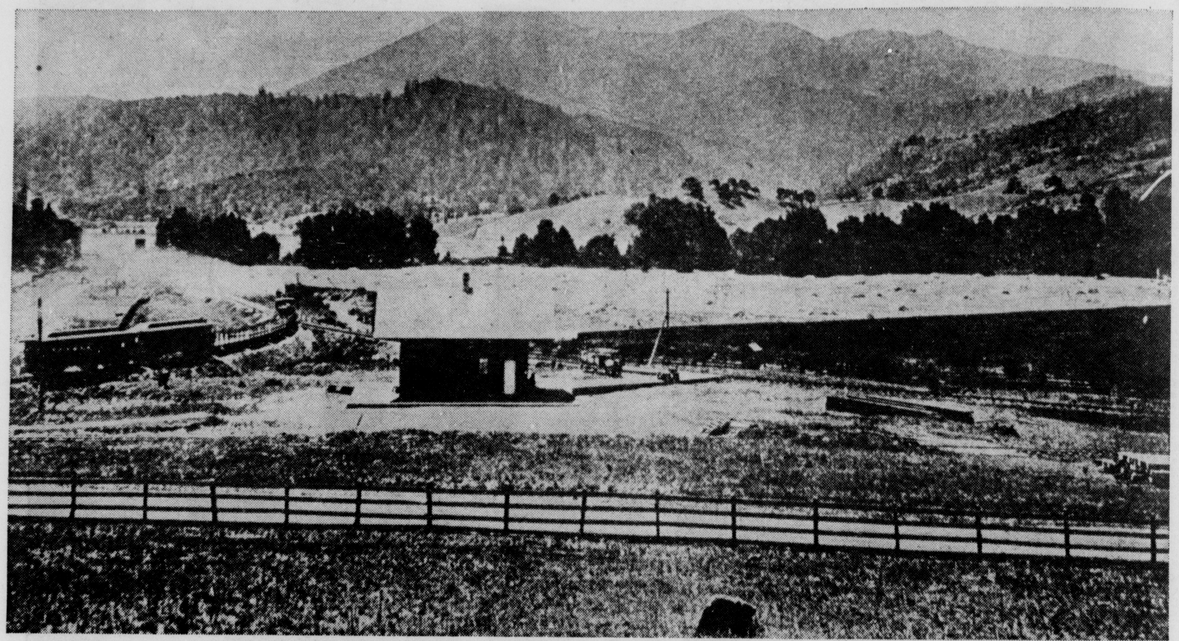
A "State Of The City Report" On San Anselmo



ROSS VALLEY in the early 1890s was a wide open area with the railroad fork in the foreground marking the area of San Anselmo now known as the Hub, with the Ross hills in the background. Engines of the North Pacific Coast Railroad puffed through the valley many years to be succeeded by electric rail trains.

SAN ANSELMO Avenue wasn't packed with pedestrians when this photo was taken, but as the main business street of the community it is often a scene of heavy traffic. In recent year, the Red Hill Shopping Center has served as another major shopping area of the city.

(Editor's Note: The Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is running a series of "state of our city" reports on Marin's municipalities, prepared by officials of those cities. This week's report on San Anselmo was prepared by Mayor Kenneth L. Anderson.)

By KENNETH L. ANDERSON

San Anselmo is attempting, under increasingly difficult conditions, to face up to not only today's problems, but also our inheritance of yesterday's problems — the unrepaired streets, undeveloped parks and inadequate storm drains.

Fortunately citizen involvement is strong, with a variety of ages and philosophies making their contribution. There's more awareness now, more sensitivity to long range planning and, of course, more conflict of opinions. But the city is very much alive and well in terms of citizen participation.

THE HUB intersection is finally intelligible; the Robson estate is a city-owned park; there are two new tot lots; the library now has a reciprocal agreement with the county library, plus membership in the North Bay Cooperative Library system.

This year's budget contains matching funds for a H.U.D. grant for parks development; and there's an appropriation to study the potential advantages of combining certain city services in the Ross Valley.

There are citizen committees on housing and ecology; we have a new sign ordinance; and San Anselmo is the first city in California to become mundialized.

NEEDLESS to say, not everyone will consider the above as "progress;" but after several decades of standing, San Anselmo has begun to face up to its municipal responsibilities.

Meeting these responsibilities today requires planning and action that goes beyond the city limits. It takes an awareness by the citizens of just what local government is and should be, and how — or even if — it is going to survive in the increasingly complex web of state and federal taxation and control.

The federal and state governments take a bigger and bigger portion of the available tax revenue, and both governments are mandating more and more requirements on local government without giving local government direct access to needed additional revenue.

THE CITIES are just about at the end of their ability to tax and to provide the normally expected city services. The reason for this is the cities' overwhelming dependence on the property tax. People say 'taxes are too high', and immediately protest to their city council, without stopping to compute what a relatively small percent their city asks for out of the citizen's total tax bill — federal, state and local.

This fear of higher and higher taxes has a real effect on city councils and city budgets. In San Anselmo, for example, we need to resurface at least five miles of city streets every year just to keep even. We aren't doing it.

In this year's budget we deleted two new pickup trucks which would have replaced two 1956 trucks which should have been replaced some years ago. We gave no salary increase to our employees for the first time in many years. We cut one of the recreation programs.

LOCAL citizens are being short-changed — or, more accurately, they are short-changing themselves because we have not made it plain enough to our state and federal legislators that we want a healthy and effective local government.

State and federal legislation continually dictates more and more programs, all of which cost money, without giving the cities access to adequate revenue. Such programs as mandated general plans, the updating thereof, housing elements, open space elements and liberalized retirement benefits for municipal employees are all commendable, but are achieved primarily by cutting back on traditional city services.

I AM not suggesting that municipal government should take over what are properly state and federal functions. I am trying to tell people as plainly as possible that your local government may very well disappear in your lifetime if you don't support it, and if you don't tell your federal and state legislators where you want the lines drawn — what the federal government should do, what the state government should do and what should be the functions of local government.

THE TOWER at the San Francisco Theological Seminary is a landmark in San Anselmo and a link to the city's past, mindful of a spot of serenity in a city beset with the financial problems of modern life, as set forth in Mayor Anderson's report.

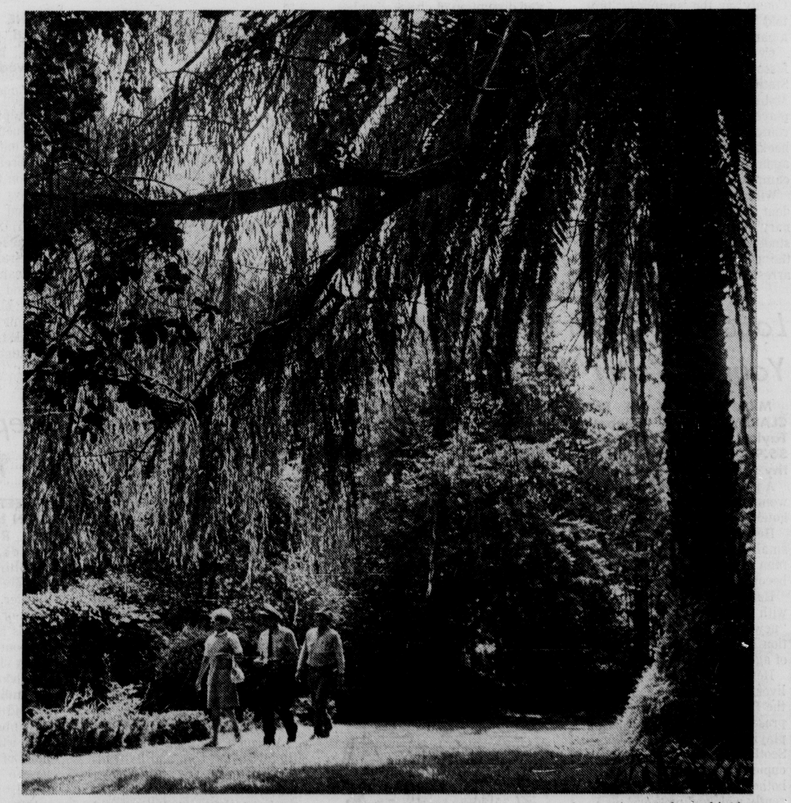
OPEN SPACE is a rapidly disappearing and increasingly valuable asset in populated eastern Marin and the city of San Anselmo, in the heart of the urban area, is retaining some of it at the Sorich Ranch. The park area will serve as a reminder to future generations of Marin's naturally beautiful terrain.



THE FORMER ROBSON estate has become a city-owned park, marking continuing efforts by the city council to provide recreational areas for residents in face of budget restrictions and many demands on city funds. The Robson and surrounding grounds are suited to a variety of uses.

Grim Life In Prison Camp Through Eyes Of A Child

A CHILD IN PRISON CAMP by Shizuye Takashima; Tundra Books, 69 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Wat Takeshita.

Artist-author Takashima uses illustrations and a minimum of words to describe the mass evacuation of 22,000 Japanese from Canada's west coast in 1942, right after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Through the eyes of a child (the author was 13 at the time), she recalls her fear and bewilderment as her family and all Japanese Canadians were ousted from Vancouver and herded into camps 700 miles inland where they were forced to stay as virtual prisoners for three years, the first year without electricity or running water.

This is not a detailed and ponderous documentation of what Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson later described as "a black mark against Canada's traditional fairness . . ." Writing with the simple brush strokes of the Oriental artist, the author skips along in child-like simplicity from episode to episode, giving the reader a series of vignettes, which, when tied together, depict the anger and anxieties of a people imprisoned for no crime other than the poor choice of ancestors.

Each vignette is a poignant reminder of how the stoic Japanese bowed to authority, yet emerged with dignity and sanity unimpaired through three years of forced exile.

She tells it simply, without anger or bitterness.

The Canadian evacuation, on a smaller scale, was identical to the evacuation of 110,000 Japanese from the United States west coast.

The main difference was that in Canada, the camp residents could visit neighboring towns, although the Caucasians were not always pleasant. In the United States, the detention camps were planted in the middle of the desert or wasteland and sealed off by barbed wire and gun towers.

In either case, here is a chapter in history which both the perpetrators and the victims would prefer to forget.

ARCHDUCHESS Maria Theresa, painted before her accession to the throne of Austria at the age of twenty-three, is one of the fascinating characters from the famed family, whose history is recounted in "The Hapsburgs" by Edward Crankshaw, a Viking Studio Boo, $16.95.

Faculty Member Tells Of Strife On Campus

HOW TO KILL A COLLEGE by Cy Epstein; Sherbourne Press, 201 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"How To Kill a College" is a story of the troubles at Fullerton State College in Orange County in the spring of 1970, told by one who was there and a participant.

Cy Epstein was assistant professor of English at Fullerton State and adviser to the Student Mobilization Committee, which played a central part in the confusing events that followed heckling of Gov. Ronald Reagan during his appearance on campus on Feb. 9, 1970.

William B. Langsdorf, president of the college, had disciplinary charges filed against two students as result of heckling of the governor. Fullerton police arrested the same two students on disturbance charges. Campus rebels, advised and led by Prof. Stuart Silvers of the philosophy department, made this the issue for major protest which escalated in predictable fashion, with "pigs on campus," destruction of property, and disruption of classes.

After students occupied a building following the Cambodia invasion, President Langsdorf dropped his more-or-less hard line to allow them to remain. This brought more property destruction and more disruption.

Epstein feels it was all wrong, but his suggestions as to how such violence should be avoided are rather vauge — as is his own role in the proceedings, although he writes in the first person and it appears that he participated in many of the events.

Lonely Woman Finds Young Writer Adrift

MRS. PALFREY AT THE CLAREMONT by Elizabeth Taylor; Viking, 178 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Dorothy Gardiner.

A poignant tale of a lonely old woman who moves to a London hotel.

Here she is confronted by a small group of women and one man — who like herself — have become outcasts.

Here Mrs. Palfrey is faced with the problem of being the "new girl" in the tight, tradition bound society of the group of aged and lonely people.

Her grandson, Desmond, who lives in London and works at the British Museum ignores her presence in the city. Her golf playing married daughter in Scotland is too busy and preoccupied with her own life to bother with her aging and recently widowed mother.

Using irony, pathos, humor and vivid description, Elizabeth Taylor exposes the sadness of growing old.

Mrs. Palfrey finds a friend, Ludo, a hungry, aspiring young writer, who like herself, has been sent adrift.

His mother is too busy with her lover to spend time with her lonely son.

The inter-relationship between the old woman and the young man is the core of the story.

Surprises are in store for the reader in this book that could be enjoyed by all ages.

Inflation Not Easy To Stifle

THE IMMORALITY OF INFLATION By Charles E. Williams; Theo. Gaus' Sons., Inc., 244 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Gordon Parr.

The evils of inflation are by now pretty well known so Williams risks flogging a dead horse once again — except that the horse refuses to die as Mr. Nixon is finding out.

That inflation steals from savings accounts and lessens the effect of a salary increase in commonly recognized but the idea that government actions may have played a major role in this loss is emphasized by the author.

Beginning with an indictment of the Federal Reserve System, "that engine of inflation," Williams reminds us that no president since Herbert Hoover has had the courage to effectively control inflation.

An important part of his remedy is a return to the gold standard which supposedly forces participating nations to be fiscally responsible. History demonstrates, however, that whenever a country faced serious losses of gold the standard was simply abandoned and so much for the gold standard.

Although the book is at least timely — the U.S. and its trading partners are suffering a new wave of inflation and currency realignments — it would have more impact if Williams sounded less like Elmer Gantry and more like a schooled economist.

Dynasty Of Habsburgs Through The Centuries

THE HABSBURGS by Edward Crankshaw; Viking, 264 pages, $16.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

From the time that Count Rudolph of Habsburg was crowned king of the Germans in 1273 until World War I brought the breakup of imperial dynasties on the continent, there was always a Habsburg (more often spelled Hapsburg) in power in Austria.

The fortunes of this dynasty are traced — mostly through the wars in which it participated and the marriages it made with other royal families to cement its power — in Edward Crankshaw's "The Habsburgs," subtitled "Portrait of a Dynasty."

Much of the history of Europe in those centuries is here, for the Habsburgs were always at or near the center of the power struggles. Yet, as their story is told by Crankshaw, they appear a rather unimpressive lot, with a few exceptions — especially Maria Theresa. Crankshaw suggests that the secret of their long success was their uncanny ability to survive.

Crankshaw, a London Observer foreign correspondent, tells the story in enough detail but not too much. Richly illustrated, "The Habsburgs" is at the same time a "gift style" book and a worthwhile chronicle of a family whose part in history eclipsed its members' interest as individuals.

Depressing Tale Set In Tennessee Valley

MEET ME IN THE GREEN GLEN by Robert Penn Warren; Random House, 376 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Shirley Graves.

There is sex and there is murder, but this is not a love story or a mystery thriller.

It is a rather depressing novel about a "heroine" who never really had a chance. In her childhood she was repressed by an ambitious mother who then pushed her into marriage with an unbelievably crude older man who, unfortunately, owned most of the run-down west Tennessee valley in which they lived, which impressed her mother.

He in turn pushed her into a sanitorium with a breakdown. Twelve years later he had become a helpless invalid and Cassie was released to care for him. Now she is 42 years old and has not yet had any fun out of life.

As the book opens, down the road comes Angelo: young, virile, and looking for a place to stay. He finds it.

The author writes with great detail and understanding about his characters' thoughts and fellings, their reasons for their actions, their fantasies. You anticipate the next moves as you come to know Cassie and Angelo, living in that wreck of a house; and Murray, who left their valley and became a big important lawyer in the big City, but who returns often enough to complicate things. From a slow beginning they all rush toward the only possible ending.

Television Writer Moves To Wyoming

NEW LEASE ON LIFE by Otis Carney; Random House, 177 pages, $5.95.

By DON KEOWN

More and more Americans are finding the pollution, noise, congestion and especially the intense competitive pressures of urban life intolerable and are fleeing to rural refuges in Australia, Canada, Europe and the few remaining quiet and isolated pockets in their own land.

Otis Carney, successful author and television script writer, is one such.

He, his wife, and their three sons eventually abandoned a glamorous Benedict Canyon home and Hollywood existence for the rough but satisfying life of the rancher in remote Wyoming where the snows pile high, the neighbors are distant, the bear still prowls and the elk and moose feed in comparative peace.

Carney, who has not abandoned the writing profession even as he has taken up ranching, has written the story of the decision and the adjustment in his "New Lease on Life" which the dustjacket described as "The story of a city family who quit the rat race and moved to a ranch in Wyoming."

It was no abrupt transformation, but instead on that was undertaken in steps.

Despite Carney's professional achievements and the cultural and social advantages that attended their Southern California residence, the Carneys felt themselves vaguely dissatisfied and unfulfilled. Smog and traffic were moving up their canyon. The social whirl seemed more often a treadmill. Commercialism too often overruled creativity in Carney's work.

Their "revolt" began in a minor way with the leasing for a couple of summers of a small Utah "spread" where the urban family began to acquire a feel for the land.

Then came the acquisition of a 2,600-acre ranch in Wyoming — nearest town, Cora, population 3. For a time the Carneys divided their year between Hollywood and Wyoming. Then finally, after much soul-searching, the home in Benedict Canyon was sold—to actress Ann-Margret and husband Roger Smith. The Carneys have traded conveniences and ego satisfactions for a rougher way of life they find more satisfying. They have experienced no regret.

"Sense of worth, this was the poison in the blood," Carney reflects on his earlier life. "Indeed, maybe it's the sickness of our times, at least in many who were raised and trained as I. We've been nurtured on the creed that only by doing can we have fulfillment. Money, power, fame, get to the top: then you have self-esteem because you're the mirror of what society adulates. But fail to make it . . . just 'be' not 'do' . . . just be committing daily to your life in all its aspects, accepting your failures and your blessings and continuing to commit, regardless of outcome: this is not the coin of success."

And of his new life: "You have come finally to see how small and insignificant you truly are; and the moment you can admit and breathe that, that is the moment you begin a new life. Stop caring about doing what the world says. Be. Commit to being with all the ardor of your soul."

In himself, says Carney, the change has brought about "a kind of what-the-hell-fling-the-chips creative freedom you've never known before."

The frustrations which our culture imposes upon its creative artists was exemplified for Carney by the distortions and compromises imposed upon "The Monroes" television series that he created hopefully as the realization of a long cherished dream to present the Old West on TV with authenticity and honesty. By the time the networks had finished with it, the series was a far cry from what Carney had proposed. But, ironically, with all those alterations, it was still one of the best presentations of life on the American frontier yet achieved on television. And, predictably, it failed commercially.

In moving to Wyoming, Carney has not escaped all such frustrations. To a degree, civilization's stupidities have followed him. There was, for instance, a plan to make of the Green River — running through his ranch — a "wild river" that would not only have required the condemnation of embankment from the owners, but also the construction of a paved road, and, of all things, an amusement park where Carney now grazes heifers.

The ranchers had the support of the state of Wyoming in defeating that proposal, only then to discover that their ally, the state, had a plan of its own — for a dam that would flood their lands. That idiocy is still the subject of combat and controversy.

Still, the Carneys have found in Wyoming a peace and a sense of identity that was unavailable to them in their previous homes in California and the East. Unfortunately, such a move is not the solution for most of the other millions suffering a similar malaise. A mass migration would simply transfer the urbanization and its attendant problems to those now uncongested regions. Besides, it is not the upper class and upper middle class that suffers most from the injuries of city and suburban congestion and compression. The poor, the working people and the lower middle class endure far greater hardships and disillusionment. And they lack the means or opportunity simply to shift their bases and thus escape the oppressions of society. For them the only solution, the only hope, is an improvement in the urban environment where they must continue their now too-drab day-to-day existence.

It is fun to read about how one family like the Carneys thwarted these pressures. But the remote mountains of Wyoming are not where the real battles must be fought. And not where the war for a better America must be won.

AN ACCOUNT of man's attempts to explore, conquer and conserve the Sierra Nevada, one of America's mightiest mountain ranges, is told in "Sierra Album" by Paul C. Johnson, (Doubleday, $12.95), which is illustrated with more than 270 photographs and maps including the above photograph of pioneers courtesy of Yosemite Park and Curry Company.

BRAZ WALKER of Waco, Tex., is paralyzed from the neck down and dependent upon a mechanical breathing apparatus for the oxygen that keeps him alive.

Nevertheless, he has made himself one of the world's leading authorities on catfishes, and is the senior contributing editor to The Aquarium magazine. He does his own typing — with a tongue-operated electric typewriter, and does his own photography as well, using his mouth to trip the camera's shutter.

"Tropical Fish Identifier," just published by Sterling Publishing Co., provides an example of his skills. Color photos disclose the beauty and the distinctive markings of 120 species. And Walker's manuscript provides all the other necessary information, not only for making identifications, but for going into the hobby of raising and breeding these exotic creatures as well.

At $3.50, it is a book that the hobbyist, beginner or expert, will regard as essential to his avocation.

And it is an impressive demonstration of one man's refusal to bow to a seemingly insurmountable handicap.

ONE OF THE more unusual books to appear in the do-it-yourself field of late is Leigh P. Beadle's "Brew It Yourself," $1.95 paperback, $4.95 hardcover, and published by Noonday Press, 19 Union Square West, New York.

It is offered as "A Complete Guide to the Brewing of Beer, Ale, Mead and Wine," with instruction on how to concoct your own beverages without any great investment in equipment or ingredients, and without too much fuss. There are a number of beer recipes. And along with the products covered in the subtitle there is also a chapter on making of old-fashioned cider.

But it should be duly noted that the production of distilled spirits and beer outside a registered distillery or brewery is a violation of federal law. And that while home winemaking is permitted, it requires prior registration with the Internal Revenue Service.

"THE SUN Is Going Down for All of Us" is a small book, a compilation made by Jane Wilkie of the indictments that can properly be leveled against man of the crimes he has committed against his environment. Several color photographs show the beauty before the soiling. The book has been published by Random House on its Stanyan lists and is priced at $3. It really adds nothing new to what the aware already know — it just serves to underline the gravity of the situation.

Sleuths & Suspense

FISHERMAN'S LUCK by Tom Pace; Harper & Row, 246 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

While Tom Pace's "Fisherman's Luck" does no great damage to publisher Harper & Row's well-earned reputation for superior suspense fiction, it certainly contributes nothing to that luster.

Ben Garden, chief of police in a Florida coastal tourist and fishing city, must deal with a clique-ridden city council and with his own troubled fiancee even as he attempts to solve the slaying of a mate on one of the fishing boats. Politics and power behind the scenes are aligned against him. And at one point Garden finds himself without a job, but he still presses on, his morale now boosted by a pretty girl named Angela.

Writer John D. MacDonald praises this book as "a gem," and Pace's earlier novels have been lauded for their toughness and fast-action. But "Fisherman's Luck" seems to us totally devoid of subtlety, so that the characters emerge as one-dimensional, the plot as simplistic and the dialogue as predictable and recitative.

Norway Rates High In Natural Views

By MURRAY J. BROWN

VOSS, Norway (UPI) — With its fjords, mountains, glaciers, waterfalls and other natural wonders, Norway has to rate high among the most beautiful countries of Europe, if not the world.

I sampled some of its scenic spectaculars on a two-day tour from Oslo into the picture-post-card country of western Norway.

Voss lies in the heart of the fjord district, about two hours from Bergen and five hours from Oslo by train. A popular year-round resort with top-rated hotels, it is also accessible by road during the summer months and serves as a major base for sightseeing tours of the area. It's one of Norway's outstanding ski centers the rest of the year.

AMERICAN football buffs should know that Knute Rockne of Notre Dame gridiron fame was born here.

The train ride from Oslo was in itself a memorable experience. It was a comfortable, enjoyable trip mostly through virtually-unspoiled country — snow-topped mountains, blue-hued glaciers, frozen lakes, heavy forests — and once in a while a solitary hut in the distance and a hamlet nestling close to the rail line.

The Bergen-Oslo electrified railway is the only permanent year-round land link between eastern and western Norway — a brochure notes there are about 200 tunnels, 18 miles of snowsheds and 300 bridges along its 300-mile route. Oslo and Norway also are linked, however, by excellent air services, both being major terminals for Scandinavian Airlines Systems (SAS).

HIGHLIGHTS of the Voss include the Church of St. Michael, built in the 13th Century and the oldest stone church in Norway. The octagonal spire is built of heavy timbers joined by wooden pegs, the walls are up to 7½ feet thick and the interior is a virtual treasure trove of ancient church art and other religious artifacts.

Voss also boasts the Finneloft, built 700 yaars ago and the oldest wooden building in the country, and the crudely-fashioned stone Cross of St. Olav, believed erected in the 11th century when the people of Voss adopted Christianity.

A favorite winter resort for Americans and Europeans, Voss has the longest downhill ski slope in Norway and excellent cross-country trails. There are cable cars and chair lifts and other facilities for skiiers and snow bunnies. In the summer, there are hiking, fishing, hunting, sightseeing and other activities.

FOR a side trip we took a bus to Gudvangen to catch the steamer for a ride through an arm of the Sogne Fjord, which cuts up to 110 miles inland from the sea on the west coast.

At Gudvangen, we boarded the fjord steamer for the voyage to Flam. The ferry glided smoothly through the narrow waterway, flanked by almost-bare cliffs which rise almost straight out of the water. Scores of waterfalls tumbled down the sides of mountains still wearing wreathes of snow.

The ferry stopped at several fjordside villages to load or disembark passengers, frieght and mail. In most cases, it is their only link with the outside world.

The final leg of the tour was by train from Flam. Going up it takes 45 minutes to cover the 12 miles to Myrdal — it takes longer going down because of the almost constant braking necessary during the descent from about 2,800 feet to near sea level. The track winds back and forth through the valley, through tunnels cut inside living rock.

FREQUENT halts are made to allow closeup views of the spectacular scenery, including the breathtaking Kjosfossen waterfall, which is hundreds of yards across and plunges straight down for more than 225 feet.

Train connections to Bergen and Oslo, or stops in between, are made at Mydral.

High Level Eating

If you like to eat on a high level, Germany is the place for you. It has more tower restaurants than any country in the world, claims the German Tourist Information Office.

SKIING IN NORWAY lures thousands each year as the winter beauty covers the hills and the views are spectacular, such as the above view from Geilo, a popular resort along the Oslo-Bergen railroad. American tourists often make a skiing trip to Norway a part of their European travels, and take in the country's other attractions during their stay.

YANKEE WEEKEND

The 18th season of Yankee Winter Weekend packages, featured on the weekends of January 7, 8 through March 24, 25 inclusive, will be held this year in Sturbridge, Massachusetts and headquartered at the over-200-year Publick House.

The Publick House, founded in 1771 by Colonel Ebenezer Crafts, catered to 18th century travelers on the Old Colonial Post Road, offering them food, drink and overnight accommodations. It does the same for space-age travellers of the 20th century.

Parts of the original Publick House are still around. It's the section that includes the Tap and Pineapple rooms, the front desk and sitting rooms and guest rooms directly above.

Rooms 1A-1B is the Lafayette Suite, said to have been occupied by the famous general. In other words, "Lafayette slept here."

WASHINGTON NEED NOT BE AN EXPENSIVE CITY

Most tourists come to the Nation's Capital with no advance knowledge of local motel and hotel rates, and many fail to stay overnight because they fear rates are "too high."

But Washington D.C. can be one of the world's least expensive tourist cities. Accommodations are available for every pocketbook, and the city has a wealth of free and low-cost sightseeing attractions.

Forty-four area hotels offer 25 per cent discounts on weekends, with advance reservations. And that traditional European institution, "the small hotel," thrives in the Capital.

Single-room rates start at $5 a day in one small hotel near downtown, and several others in downtown proper rent rooms in the $6 to $10 range. A $20 bill will get you a suite in more than one downtown hotel.

These inexpensive hotels are in many of Washington's best areas, including Foggy Bottom, noted as the home of the State Department, and on Capitol Hill. Indeed, many frequent Washington visitors prefer the small hotels because of their personalized informal services.

And the cost-conscious tourist has many choices among activities. He can visit the Capitol, the White House, the National Archives, the Washington Monument, the Jefferson Memorial, the Lincoln Memorial, the National Gallery of Art, the Museum of History and Technology, the Museum of Natural History, the Museum of Arts and Industries, the National Portrait Gallery, the Washington Cathedral, the Freer Art Gallery, the Supreme Court, the library of Congress, the National Zoo and all the federal office buildings for a total cost of one dime.

That's how much it costs to ride the elevator to the top of the Washington Monument.

All prospective tourists should write the Washington Convention and Visitors Bureau, 1129 20th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., 20036, requesting a brochure on Washington room rates and a map.

The tourist should then decide what area best suits his purposes, and how much he wants to spend for accommodations, then make reservations prior to leaving home.

El Salvador Artisans Fashion Miniatures

The Travel Pages

The day begins in Ilobasco, a village of 4,000 inhabitants in El Salvador, Central America. The men take their cartloads of wood, coffee, and pottery to their destinations.

The women set up their stalls in the market place to sell their wares — pineapples, eggs, chickens, trays, pottery, yards of material.

A woman stops by a stone wall to rest with a load of wood and her pet dog.

A LITTLE boy rushes to market with two pigs on leashes and his schoolbooks tucked under his arm. A woman fetches water from a well. And a senora is making guacamole while her young son busily grinds corn for tortillas.

Another typical day in a typical Salvadorean town — except for one incredible thing. In Ilobasco all these commonplace everyday events are being captured in tiny, thumbnail-sized clay miniatures — the famous Ilobasco "munecas."

Every day, minute little scenes of amazing detail and expression are hand-molded and preserved by the town artisans.

FAMOUS throughout Central America, these intriguing miniatures are products of a very unique assembly line.

One home, or several, acts as the assembly plant, with each family member doing his special part. The division of labor is decided by ability. The grandfather may design and mold the scene. One child may cut the tiny bits of cloth that form the clothing for the mini-figures. Another child may carry the figres to the ovens for firing. An older child may paint the figures.

At one time practically the entire town was engaged in making these miniatures, passing the skill from generation to generation, but now only a handful of these "miniature" experts remain.

THESE experts in the art of miniature, each using his own secret method of manufacture, mix the clay with the resinous extract of the escobillo plant to improve the clay's malleability, and then proceed to manipulate the clay into the desired tiny shapes.

Each miniature is carefully worked, then baked either in earth ovens, on stones on the ground, or in home kilns. After being fired, the figurines are painted with one or more coats of gold and colored enamel. Sometimes the tiny figures are adorned with bits of cloth typical of that woven and worn by the local Indians.

A specialty of Ilobasco's is the Nativity Scene. Long before the Christmas season, the miniaturists busy themselves with the production of creches the size of walnut shells. Included in these manger scenes are the Holy Family and the animals and fowl actually mentioned in the Bible.

These creches are quite popular in the market places of El Salvaedor's principal cities, where the Ilobascans set up booths every Christmas.

THE VILLAGERS of Ilobasco prefer to represent the Nativity Scene in their own homes in their own unique way. The "Nacimiento," or scene of the Nativity, may occupy the entire floor of an Ilobascan home.

Mountains, rivers, trails, villages, farms with cattle, groups of Indians, and the manger scene itself are all represented — in miniature, naturally. Sometimes, even mechanical contraptions are included, such as a train (of course there were trains in Biblical times!) or a waterfall or stream. Sometimes refreshments are served to those visiting the different "nacimientos."

In addition to their miniature work, Ilobascans are renowned throughout the Latin countries for their other, more conventional, ceramics, such as lamps, ashtrays, statuettes, bowls, toys, and the like.

THE ILOBASCAN ability with clay seems to be inherent. Indeed, for centuries Ilobasco has been a potter's paradise, most likely because of the superb clay deposits found scattered throughout the surrounding countryside.

Pre-Columbian figurines are constantly being turned up in the fields around Ilobasco. And of course "copies" of these figures abound, produced by the descendants of the original craftsmen, using the same techniques and materials.

But the piece de resistance of Ilobasco remains those tiny representations of everyday life in this delightful town, one hour's drive from San Salvador.

The drive to Ilobasco from San Salvador (about 55 miles) is a pleasant one through coffee fields and grazing land — a pastoral and lush green scene. Once in Ilobasco one strolls down the various streets crisscrossing the town and surveys the Ilobasco ware set up in front of the houses.

ALL MANNER of ceramics, including the miniature figures, are found easily in any part of town. Ilobasco was originally located about four miles from its present location, but about 100 years ago the statue of San Miguel, Ilobasco's patron saint, mysteriously disappeared on two occasions, then was found — both times in the same locations. The town saw this as a sign and moved to the spot en masse. It's been there ever since.

For further information on Ilobasco or El Salvador, contact the El Salvador Tourist Information Office, 703 Market Street, Suite 1502, San Francisco, California 94103.

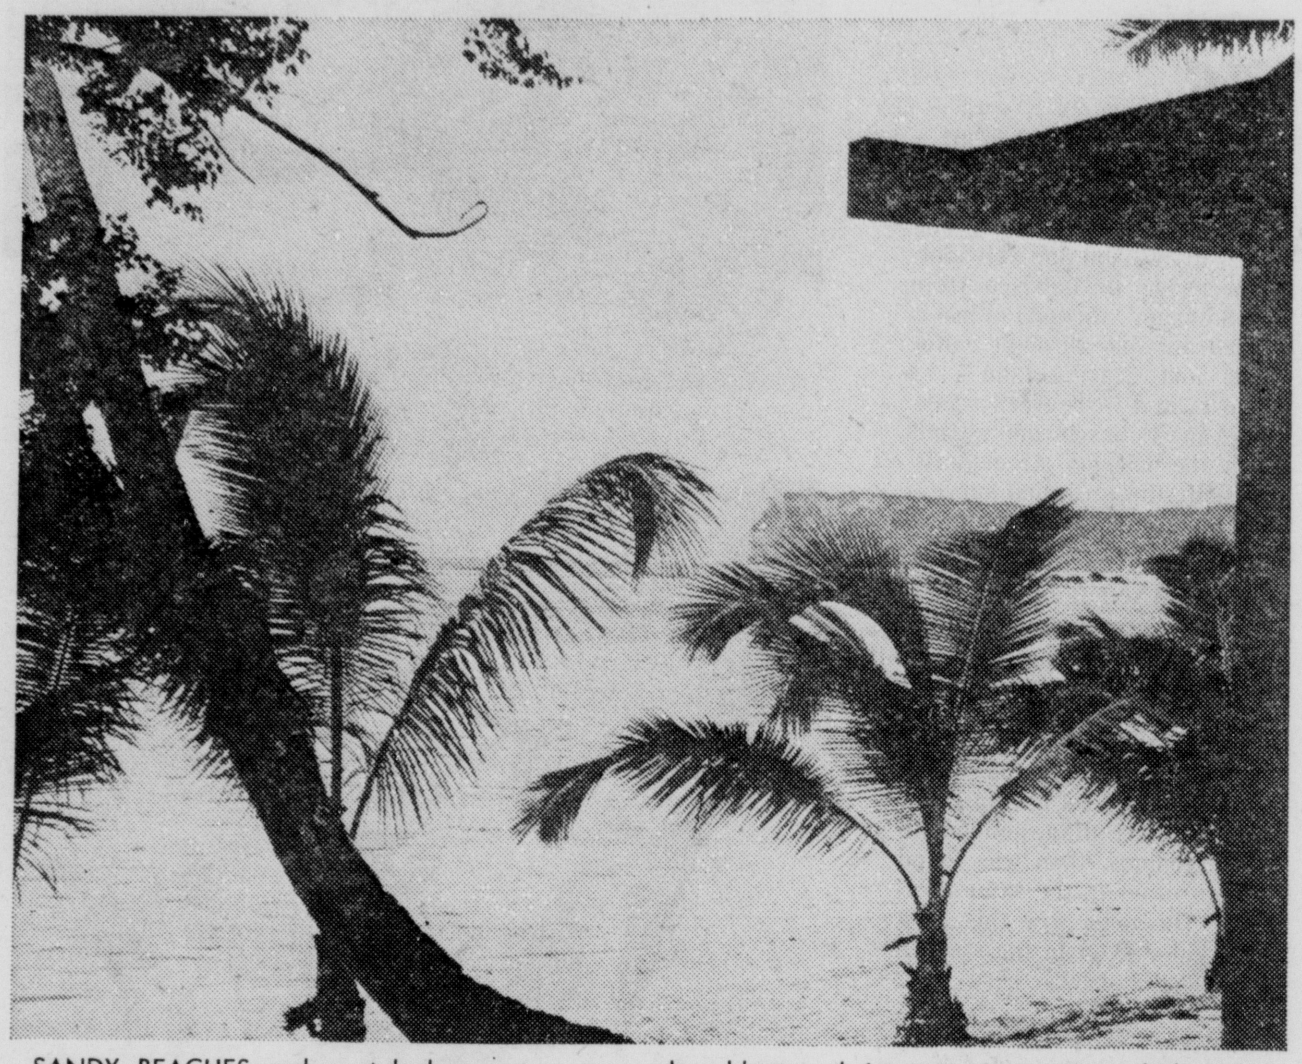
Guam A Rising Tourist Attraction



SANDY BEACHES and crystal clear waters are key attractions for visitors to Guam, scene of World War II battles and military outpost which has blossomed into a resort area, which is a favorite of honeymooners from Japan. Tourism is increasing on the Pacific Island, which has an historic past in world events.

World War II Site Now Honeymoon Spot

AGANA, Guam — This 212 square-mile island, shaped like an hourglass and sitting atop the equator, on the far side of the International Date Line in the middle of the Pacific some 6,000 miles from San Francisco, likes to boast that it is "where America's day begins."

This isn't true, of course. Wake Island, another U.S. possession, is further west and is the first U.S. territory to greet a new day's sun. Guam's 102,000 residents, including a major military colony, like to ignore this bit of geography, however, as they push ahead with one of the fastest growing tourist developments in the Pacific.

"IT'S A growing, exotic resort," reports the travel experts for Continental Airlines. "In 1966, only 11,500 people visited the island. This year, the total will be more than 75,000."

The big attractions on Guam, which is also being promoted as a gateway to all of Micronesia, are low prices, duty-free shops, beautiful beaches, perpetual sunshine, uncrowded roads, dramatic scenery with perpendicular cliffs plunging into the sea, technicolor sunsets and pastel dawns. Already, the island is rivaling Mt. Fuji as a top spot for Japanese honeymooners.

Tumon Beach, a plam-tree shaded one-mile stretch of sand just outside Agana, is the site for several new and modern resort hotels, including the recently-opened Guam Continental TraveLodge, which has 200 rooms. There are now over 1,000 tourist rooms on Guam, representing an investment of more than $25 million.

A GOOD round-the-island highway, some 50 miles long, is made for sightseeing. There are some interesting beaches and cliffs north of Agana, the capital city which sits in the middle of the 30-mile long island, but most of the attractions are to the south, where most of the history and legend is concentrated.

Among them are the invasion beaches of World War II, which U.S. troops crossed in 1944 to retake the island from the Japanese, 1,334-feet high Mt. Lamlam, and the spot where Magellan landed when he and his starving crew first stumbled on the island in 1521.

Everywhere on Guam there are superb swimming beaches and history. The Chamarros, who are of Polynesian stock, were the island's original settlers. Brown-skinned, dark-haired, tall and heavily-built, they came in the prehistoric migrations from Southeast Asia.

IT WASN'T until 44 years after Magellan chanced upon the island that Spain claimed it formally, and it was a Jesuit priest who game the name "Marianas," to Guam and the surrounding islands in honor of Mariana of Austria, Queen Regent of Spain.

Agana — pronounced ah-Gawn-ya — which was almost completely destroyed in the 1944 fighting now has all the makings of a modern American town, with first-class shops, new government buildings, homes, churches, parks and hotels. The Plaza, at its center, is the site of the Guam Cathedral, Congress Building, and Guam Museum. Good taxi and car rental services are available in this city where gusto and progress compete with a languid atmosphere.

Like Hawaii's "Aloha," Guam has its "Hafa Adai," which conveys a warm hello and a hurry-back-soon farewell.

Equally popular is the phrase "Na bonita Guam!" It means "Guam is beautiful."

Floating Dollar Impact Slighter Than Expected

By ROBERT GRIFFIN
Staff Vice President-
Marketing Development
Pan American World Airways

The impact on tourism of President Nixon's recent action setting the United States dollar afloat in relation to foreign currencies has been much less than some observers anticipated.

The fluctuation has been downward to date, but generally in very small percentages, thereby only slightly affecting the cost of foreign travel to American tourists. In fact, the fluctuation has generally been less than the usual difference between hotel and bank exchange rates overseas.

IN ENGLAND, for example, the pound is now worth $2.46, up only six cents from the exchange rate before the President's action. This means that a room at a first-class hotel that previously cost the equivalent of $20 would now be priced at $20.50, an increase of 2.5 percent.

Elsewhere in Western Europe, currencies have experienced revaluations ranging from almost no increase to about four percent, with West Germany the only exception. The West German mark has recently been trading at 7.2 percent above its rate of a year ago.

In the Orient, the Japanese yen is the only currency that has experienced strong upward price pressure. The U.S. dollar purchased about 360 yen' in August; during the past few weeks the range has been 330 to 340 yen to the dollar, an increase of six to nine percent.

OTHER PACIFIC currencies have had more modest changes in value, with maximum increases of about four percent. For instance, a dinner for two with floor show at the Savoy Club in Hong Kong, which would have cost $18 before, now costs about $18.65.

Overall, the currency situation has not caused any serious problems for Americans traveling abroad. There is no problem exchanging dollars into foreign currencies, and most revaluations have had minimal impact on the dollar.

The traveler and his wife who take a three-week trip and spend an average of $50 a day will find their bill for the whole trip to be only $20 to $35 higher because of the President's actions.

OFFSETTING the loss in the value of the dollar are the lower airfares available to Europe in the off-season. A round-trip excursion fare between New York and London (17 - 28 days) costs $322 now, compared to $382 in the peak summer months — a savings of $60.

COCKNEY MARKET COLORFUL

LONDON — Search the city maps and you will never find it. Neither will you spot it spelled out on a street sign. The place? Petticoat Lane, London's most famous Sunday morning street market.

A taxi driver can take you there, a Londoner will direct you forth-with and buses pass within yards of it. But the lane is now Middlesex Street, renamed in the early 19th century when the flourishing market and spread of population enveloped the once remote land.

SEVERAL centuries ago, the winding country lane meandered through meadows and fields where wallowing pigs caused it to be known as Hogs Lane. However, by 1598, where the area had grown and prospered, well-to-do residents in the neat cottages gave the garden-lined lane its more delicate name, Petticoat.

The open market here goes back three centureis when traders settled along the lane and sold their wares in the open air, according to National Airlines which provides daily flights between California and London through Miami.

THE REAL fascination of today's Petticoat Lane lies in its unique personality, for this is a Cockney's market. There can be no better place to pick up a few pointers on the art of selling junk or jewelry, trash or treasures, than from these English countrymen with their particular brand of humor and individual use of the language.

Scots Dedicate Plaque Honoring Grant Visit

TAYPORT, Scotland (UPI) — Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, who ended the Civil War by defeating General Robert E. Lee, felt that his world tour in 1877 would not be complete without a view of the Tay railway bridge then under construction.

Now the Scots have decided to preserve the record of the occasion by unveiling a commemorative plaque on the site of Tayport railway station, and with extraordinary hush the unveiling ceremony was carried out before a few Scots by Carl Bartch, the U.S. Consul General, who is based in Edinburgh.

AS THE station has gone, the plaque has been placed on the gable end of a row of council houses!

The plaque states: "This plaque erected on the site of Tayport Railway Station, commemorates the visit on September 1, 1877 by General Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States of America, 1869 to 1877. He then embarked from Tayport Harbour to view the first Tay rail bridge."

Whether he like what he saw is unrecorded, but on Dec. 28, 1879 — two years later — the bridge fell down as a train was crossing, with heavy loss of life, one of the biggest of all Scottish railway disasters. The present bridge built to the west of the old one was opened on June 20, 1887.

"THERE is no record of this famous man's visit to the burgh so we decided to do something about it," said the local Town Clerk, Harry Wilson.

"We have decided to call the local council housing estate President Grant Place. This should attract many American tourists."

Take A Look At Rose Garden

When you consider that Californians can enjoy blooming roses into late fall — and even at Christmastime, in certain areas — it comes as an eye-opener that the bare root planting season is drawing near.

Many nurseries will offer bare root roses in time for Christmas giving — especially the newer introductions and All-American Selections — and as the new year arrives, the planting season takes off in full stride.

IF YOU plan to replace certain of the older roses in your garden, or plant the new-for-1972 choices, now is the time to start preparing. The two All-Americans — Portrait, a radiant pink, and Apollo, a sunny yellow with crimson shadings — plus a bumper crop of other outstanding varieties, await your planting pleasure.

First, survey your present collection of roses. It's a rare instance that a gardener isn't enticed or attracted to a newer rose, which shows more glamour than one which has been performing in the garden for a span of years.

Now is the time to dig the older variety, and work the soil so the ground will be ready to accept a new plant around the first of the year.

AFTER pulling out a rose, remove some of the soil that exists in the original planting area and add new soil from another part of the garden. Work like amounts of peat moss or organic material into the soil — your nurseryman can recommend the proper material to impart the slightly acid condition a rose like. Do this when the soil isn't soggy or else the soil will tend to compact.

If the soil is loose now, you may wish to set a quantity of it aside — in boxes or cans — and store it in a dry location. This assures you of workable soil when it comes time to plant — and to fill-in around the bare roots.

FINALLY, check with your local nurseryman to determine the new varieties he will be offering. Inquire if it is necessary to order plants now to make sure you get the varieties you want, come January or February.

With all the exciting and breathtaking introductions soon to be gracing the garden scene, it would be a shame to miss out on a newcomer because the supply was limited, and it was an early sellout.

OLD SMOOTHIE, a red hybrid tea rose with long stems, is one of the choices awaiting gardeners who are preparing for planting this winter. However, many are attacted to a newer rose which has more glamour than one which has been a fixture in a garden for years.

Winter Garden Can Have Color

If the fall clean-up was done properly, the gardener should be faced with some bare spots in the garden. Bloomed-out annuals have been removed, certain Perennials have been cut back; summer and fall-blooming bulbs are dormant or have been lifted.

There is no lack of color to fill the bare spots. Color that brightens the winter garden in spectacular fashion.

The answer is simple: Use bedding plants. Several bedders will bloom in mid-winter and others will get your garden off to a fast start in late February or March — which is really winter, too, if you go by the calendar.

FOR EARLIEST and bright, bright blooms, set out plenty of Calendulas. The intense shadings of hybrid blooms come in lemon, cream, gold, orange and fiery persimmon and the best part is that Calendulas require little attention and repay you with a long succession of color into early summer.

Pansies and Violas are other quick-to-bloom winter annuals and also provide long-lasting beauty. If you keep picking the bright, cheery flowers, new blooms will keep appearing through spring and into summer. These are ideal over newly-planted bulbs since they not only give color now, but bloom with — and after — bulbs.

Another choice for winter cheer is the Fairy Primrose — which is a border and edging plant without many rivals. Line a shaded walk with these light and airy favorites and enjoy their lasting spikes of lavender, white or pink through the cool season.

THE CALIFORNIA gardener has a wide and varied choice of blooming bedders for early spring bloom. Nurseries also have supplies of Iceland Poppies, Stocks and Snapdragons. Snaps are available in dwarf varieties, as intermediate-growers and as tall growers, which increases their potentiol for use throughout the garden.

Too, you may find Cinerarias, English Daisies, Pinks and Alyssum — both annual and perennial — and others your nurseryman knows will perform well in your area's winter climate. Let him guide you in selecting several bedders to brighten your garden and life.

Lawn Mower Needs Winter Checkup

After the final grass cutting of the season, it's a strong temptation to shove the lawn mower in the corner of the garage and forget it until next spring.

According to Champion Spark Plug Company, you'll save yourself possible trouble and expense if you spend a few minutes preparing the power mower for its winter's hibernation.

The firm offers the following tips:

1. MAKE sure all the fuel is drained from the gas tank, fuel lines and carburetor. To do this, let the engine run at idle until all fuel is gone.
2. Remove the spark plug and check its condition. If you've had a season's or more use out of the plug, it probably needs replacement. With plugs of lesser usage, clean off any deposits and file the electrodes so they are flat and have sharp edges.

Also, regap the plug to manufacturer's specifications. Inspect the spark plug well for any debris. And before re-installing the plug pour several teaspoonsful of oil into the cylinder. Then turn the engine over a few times to distribute the oil on cylinder wall and piston.

3. REMOVE and clean the air cleaner screen. If your mower has a steel mesh type of cleaner, wash it out in solvent (not gasoline) and apply a fresh coat of oil. For the oil bath type cleaner, pour out the old oil, clean the parts and put in new oil. In mowers with disposable paper filters, you'll probably need a new filter since this type is not cleanable.
4. Check V-belts for wear or cracks. (Inspect the underside as well as the visible portion.)
5. Clean the muffler thoroughly. Do so, by removing it and soaking the threads with penetrating oil. Tap out excessive accumulations of carbon. Then, after removing the carbon buildup from the engine's exhaust port, reattach the muffler.
6. Check all nuts, bolts and connections for tightness.
7. CHECK the choke valve operation. When the throttle lever is in the start position, the choke valve should be closed completely.
8. Clean the colling fins, particularly with a two-cycle engine.
9. Apply a light coat of lubricants with an oil-soaked rag. Then cover the machine and store it in a dry, well-ventilated area. Be sure to retard the throttle all the way to prevent accidental starting.

Growing Hybrid Vegetables A Saver

Growing hybrid varieties of vegetables will save you cash for you'll produce sturdier plants, more disease-resistant in many cases and obtain greater yield (so you can use less space) as well as larger leaves, fruits or roots.

If you're unfamiliar with hybrids, it's time you knew about them.

They're the progeny of two different varieties, each selected as a parent for one or more outstanding characteristics that, combined, will mean a better plant for you, the gardener.

AFTER PLANTS of both parents have been grown, pollinated with their own pollen generation after generation to accentuate those important characters, and resulting seed has been harvested and replanted all those years, the result is an "inbred" line of plants — scrawny and unbeautiful, but bearing the characters for which they were selected.

When inbred plants are crossed, that is the pollen from the flowers of one parent has been brushed by hand on the pistils of blossoms of the other, plants grown from the resulting seeds will display "hybrid vigor."

That's what you get in the hybrid seeds you buy for only a few cents more per packet than those of ordinary varieties. You also get the desirable characteristics for which the plant breeder has gone through the long, expensive process outlined above.

THERE are hybrids of both flowers and vegetables. Most corn varieties available are hybrids; those mammoth petunias and marigolds are hybrids.

Look in the catalogs or on the seed packets for the designation F1. This is shorthand for "first filial," a first generation hybrid from those inbred parent plants. Those varieties are your "best buy."

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week.

✔ For portable displays, try planting Daffodils and Tulips in pots or other distinctive containers.

✔ This is the time to give the garden a Fall cleanup spray. Your nurseryman can recommend the proper plant protection chemicals to use. A follow-up spraying to control Peach Leaf Curl should be made in late winter or early spring — as the buds begin to swell.

✔ Cool season vegetables should be set out at the earliest date. A few may be available this month in nurseries as pre-started seedlings.

✔ Fall feeding keeps many lawns greener over the winter than gardeners seem to realize. Feed regularly.

AN ANIMATED DISPLAY at Christmas season is an eye catcher, such as the choir boy and girl shown above. The upper part of the figures move back and forth while candle flames twinkle on and off, through the power from a small pack or two regular flashlight batteries, and a loudspeaker with music coming forth can round out the effect.

Moving Christmas Figures

By STEVE ELLINGSON

One of the nicest things about Christmas is what happens to the imagination. Many people who are never motivated to create at other times of the year become aware that there's a bit of artist in every one of us.

For a change this Christmas why not make an animated yard display? The choir boy and girl shown here are certainly eyecatchers. The upper part of the figures move back and forth realistically while the candle flames twinkle on and off.

The secret lies in a small power pack which operates on just two ordinary flashlight batteries. These drive the motion mechanism and light the candles.

BOTH figures are easily made from hardboard. Here's what you do — glue the full-size patterns on the wood. When the glue is dry, you paint right on the patterns by the new popular paint-by-numbers method.

After that you need only install the power pack on the back side, insert two flashlight batteries and your display is ready for action. Add a loud speaker and you'll have a crowd watching as the singers bow to each other and to those who pass by.

IF YOUR local merchant doesn't carry the power pack units, the pattern tells where they may be ordered. This is an inexpensive project.

To obtain the full-size choir boy and girl patterns number 429430, send $2 to: Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent Journal Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Ca. 91409

Other patterns you might enjoy are: Number 486 Paint-by-numbers Christmas tree, $2; number C-4 Paint-by-numbers Santa, deer & sleigh display, $2; or number C-5 Paint-by-numbers train display, $3.

Don't Take Chances With Extension Cord

The extension cord is a mediocre object — forgotten, mistreated, overloaded with work, and used long after its time of retirement. It is also a powerful object, capable of destroying life and property. Given the proper attention, however, it is safe and useful.

According to Underwriters' Laboratories, one of the most important rules is to match the extension cord with the same size and type cord supplied with the appliance.

Remember that special cords are necessary for large appliances, such as clothes dryers and air conditioners, and should not be operated with ordinary extension cords.

SECONDLY, an extension cord should never be overloaded. By adding up the number of watts plugged into the extension, safety of the electric load can be determined. Check each appliance for the number of watts it uses, then, if you must use an extension, make sure it can safely handle the load.

Periodic examination of all extension cords in use can eliminate a potential fire hazard. Check all screw connections, which should be tight with all wire strands held firmly under the screws. Inspect the cord for breaks, which often occur near the plug, look for frayed and broken insulation, and replace rather than patch defective cords.

PLACEMENT of extension cords is also an important factor. Cords that are near a source of heat; cords that are supported on nails; or cords that are placed under rugs, through doorways, or across walkways and tables are dangerous. Only cords marked "water-resistant" or "oil--proof" should be near oil or moisture.

Finally, all extension cords should bear an important sign of confidence: the mark of Underwriters' Laboratories, a not-for-profit testing organization dedicated to product safety.

Sundeck Brightens Addition To Home

Handyman's Pages

A room added to a house brings a bonus of brightness when it is oriented to a deck or patio, blending the indoor area with outdoor living.

One such remodeling observed recently also gained character and warmth with the strong use of western wood on ceilings and walls, accented by exposed framing and beams.

THE MASTER bedroom added to the house opens onto an enclosed sundeck, with screens in the summer replaced by windows to keep out the winter rains of the San Francisco Peninsula.

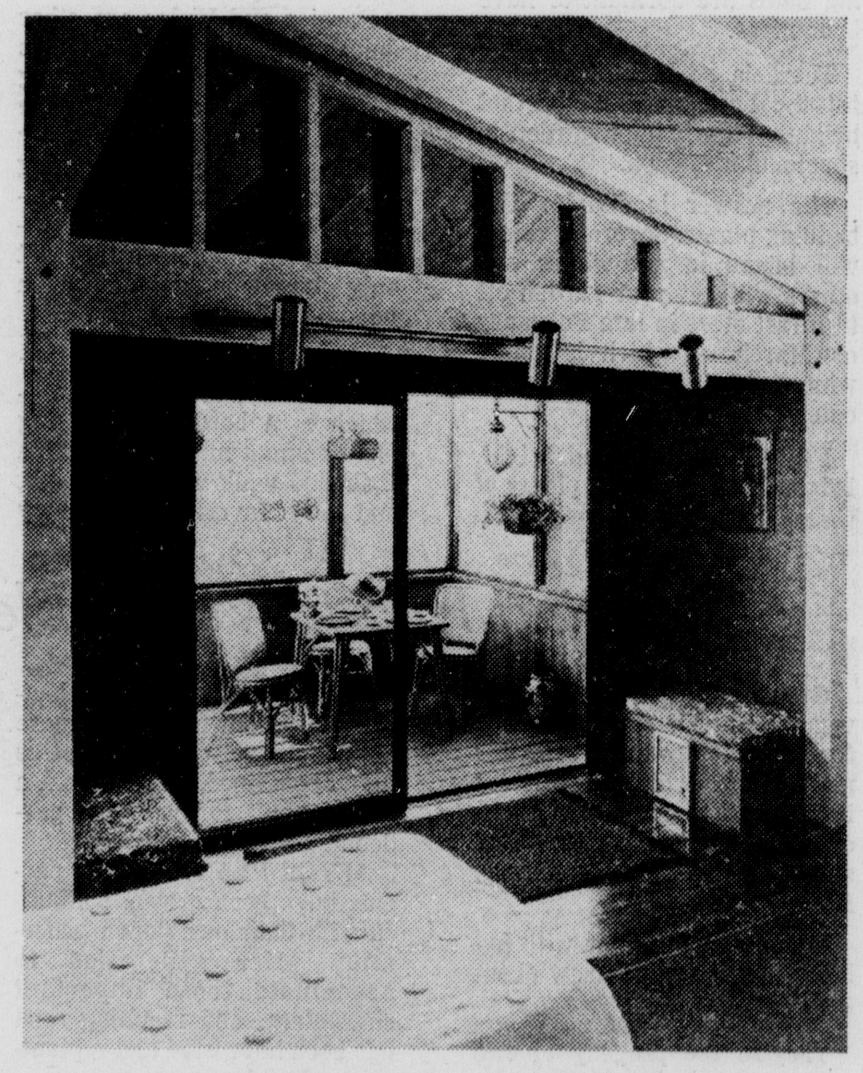
The sundeck is a charming spot for late breakfasts on weekends or a second cup of coffee while reading the morning newspaper. Combined with wood screens, such a deck could be added decoratively to the front of many houses, extending the living area onto growing and displaying shade-marginally used yard space.

The sundeck is a natural place for growing and displaying shade-loving plants. The deck of slightly spaced two by four-inch Douglas fir laid flat makes maintenance easy if water or dirt is spilled while tending plants.

WOOD-FRAMED sliding glass doors open the bedroom wall wide to the deck, with draperies for privacy. The doors are flanked inside by box seats, one for storage, the other enclosing an electric heater.

The six by six-inch posts and two by twelve-inch beams lend rustic strength to the room, complemented by the open ceiling with four by six-inch Douglas fir rafters.

The ceiling is faced with one by six-inch bleached western hemlock boards. Diagonally placed hemlock boards are used on the upper portion of the end walls, behind exposed two by four-inch fir studs.



AN ENCLOSED SUNDECK brightens a bedroom which was added in remodeling with exposed framing of Douglas fir beams. One box in the bedroom encloses a heater and the other is for storage.

Shelves For Laundry

A utility room with plenty of built-ins to hold and hide supplies is a desirable thing, but where space is lacking, some simple shelving will erase the clutter curse.

It's an easy matter to run two shelves along the wall above the appliances. The top one should be large enough to store the bigger packages of soap powders and bleach.

THE LOWER one can have less height and still take care ofmeasuring cups, starch, blueing and the like.

Twelve-inch boards may be installed on wall brackets or adjustable standards and brackets. To add doors, use ready-made louvers or hinge lengths of matching boards cut to fit the shelf height.

Work Your Worries Away By Building Workbench

By DONALD R. BRANN

Get the workbench habit, use your hands to save your heart! That is one good method that provides direction for today's tension. When worries build up, let the steam escape through a convenient and practical outlet. The workbench habit actually permits you to put worry to work.

A new book tells you "How to Build Workbenches." Reading it provides instant escape. Building any one of the four different workbenches offered provides great relaxation.

This book simplifies building a regulation size 6 foot workbench, a child's size version, and most important for apartment dwellers — a versatile foldaway bench. The foldaway bench is ideal for small space . . . for the gardener, for those who sew, for the model train railroader. There is also a table top of workbench measuring 7 inches by 28 inches that is clamped to the kitchen table.

STEP-BY-STEP directions plus detailed illustrations simplify construction. All materials required are readily available at your local lumber yard.

For help in every problem that concerns your home, make your lumber dealer your friend. Those who are new at woodworking, have much to gain. Your dealer is always glad to explain any step that confuses you. Never hesitate to ask his advice.

The book offered below lists all the tools and materials you will need, and also contains valuable construction hints, like dipping screws into glue before driving.

A SPECIAL treat for the youngster in your life — whether it is your son, grandson, nephew, or just a dear friend — is to make him his own workbench. Directions and illustrations included in this book simplify building a child's size bench.

Many men have found that constructing one workbench starts them on the road to added income. When acquaintances see and admire yours, orders often develop for more workbenches. What started out as a hobby can lead to a second income.

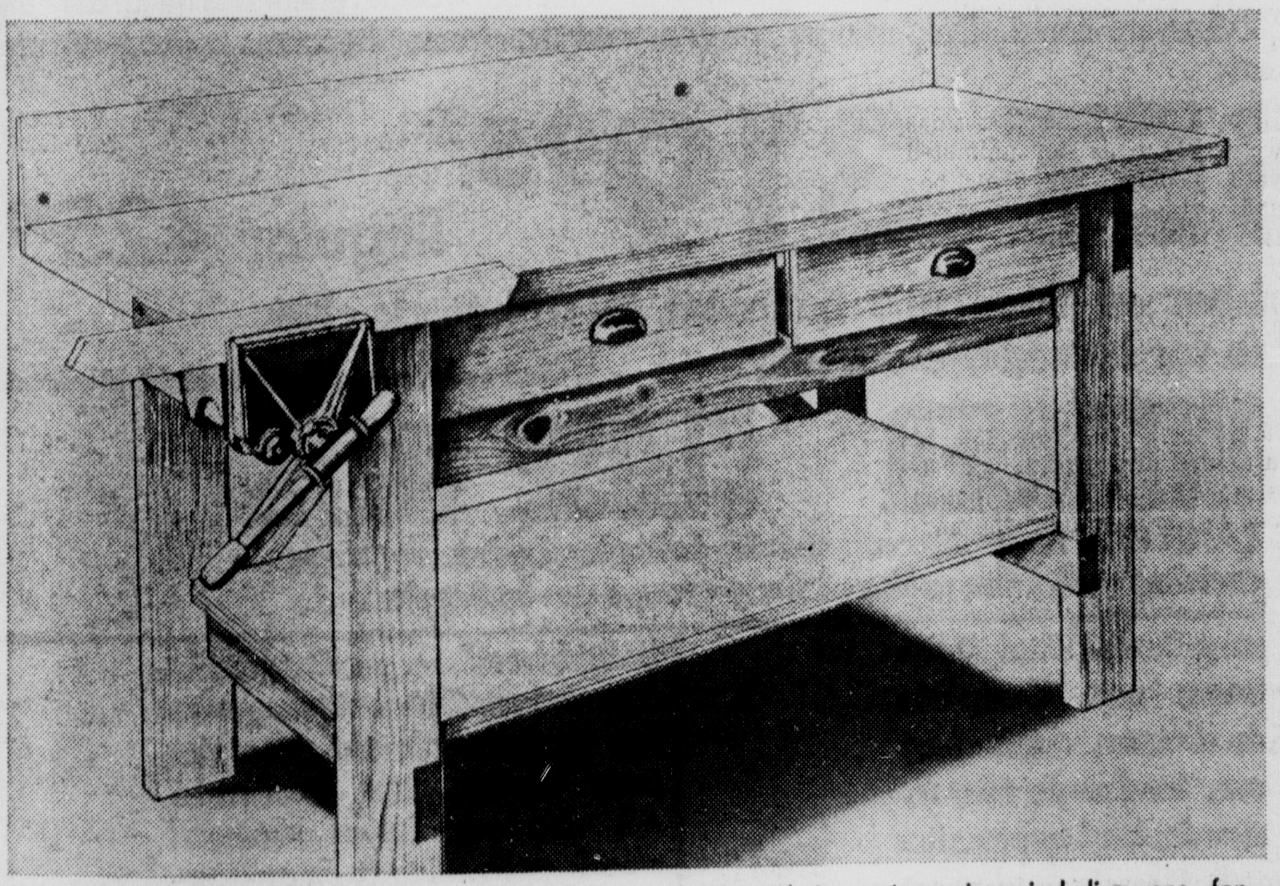
The woman in the family would dearly love a workbench of her won. Good for painting and collage, ceramics and jewelry making, the workbench is also ideally suited for sewing. The large surface acts as a layout table for fabrics and patterns.

A BENCH can be many things to many people. To the homeowner, a workbench is the center for home repairs and improvements. To the lady of the house, it is a sewing center or art workshop; to the hobbyist, it has unlimited uses; and to junior, it is a place of pride where he can be like Dad.

Step-by-step directions assume the reader has never attempted building a workbench. Every step is explained in language anyone can understand. While directions suggest building the bench 6 feet in length, any other size can be constructed.

Easy to follow assembly illustrations simplify building a six-foot workbench with two big drawers, a large lumber shelf, plus many other features. A novel feature is a four-foot long vise extending across its full width. Its sturdy construction insures years of hard use. All lumber specified is readily available.

Send $1 for Workbench Book Number 672 to Independent-Journal P.O. Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y. 10510.



A STURDY WORKBENCH is the center for home repairs and improvements or relaxing headquarters for the hobbyist. Workbenches can be constructed in various sizes including one for children, who want to have one of their own and tackle jobs, or one for women who want to practice their handicrafts.

Packing Cartons Can Be Closets

Wardrobe and utility packing cartons, like those used by millions of families that move each year, can provide handy storage and complement the decor of any home.

You don't have to be moving to get your money's worth. Wardrobe cartons can be used as "extra closets" in the bedroom, family room, basement — wherever. They're ideal for many uses such as the seasonal storage of clothing, or as closet space for overnight, weekend and vacation guests. A fold-down flap allows easy access for hanging clothes.

WITH contact paper, fabrics, paints or other covering, wardrobe and utility cartons make attractive decorator items. You can be your own creative interior decorator. Select covering in soft pastels or wild psychedelic colors.

Possibilities are unlimited. For example, a few brass upholstery tacks and a brightly-colored plaid bedspread can turn an "extra closet" into a unique complement to home or apartment decor. Colorful beach towels and dress material can be used, too.

INTERESTING design and form patterns can be achieved by decorating and stacking utility cartons in various ways. Visitors might never guess these attractive pieces are actually storage places for books, toys and any number of other items.

Both wardrobe and utility cartons are durable and collapsible for easy storage when not in use.

These cartons — like the professional movers use — are available at low cost from truck and trailer rental companies.

HOW NICE it is to find a chest sufficiently compact in size to neatly contain all the things that men use, including storage bins for shirts and sweaters. There are a variety of cabinets designed for men, including the one above by Hickory.

In Your Home: Chests Are Neat

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

Advice to women who wish to be liberated from household monotony: Find the man of the house a superorganizing chest that will house his haberdashery. And do it in such style that he'll never, but never, drop a pair of socks on the floor or toss a tie over a chair back.

And if you want true freedom, why not find a similar storage system for your own needs? Demand equal rights for your wardrobe!

There are a variety of handsome cabinets designed with the man in mind. Many have mirrors and built-in lighting as part of their refinements. Some provide bulk storage bins for shirts and sweaters, trays for decorative accessories and jewelry. Others include hardware for ties and belts.

BUT ALL chests designed specifically for men have one thing in common: They're built high enough so that most of the storage areas can be reached without bending.

I don't know why ladies' storage pieces are cut at lower levels. Very few women have the time to sit down leisurely to dress or apply make-up. Almost all of us stand at the bathroom or dressing room mirror and sit on the edge of the bed while dressing. We still have to bend over to search for hosiery, handkerchiefs, scarves, embellishments.

SO I'D say men and women alike would vote for the gentleman's chest illustrated today. It even has an ample area where a portable television set could be placed. Or if one wanted a permanent installation of a television set, a small hole could probably be drilled to allow an exit for the electrical connection and antenna. The height is 54 inches, so decorative accessories or a small lamp could sit atop the unit.

THERE'S a timeless look about this cabinet by Hickory. It combines a traditional wood quality with hard-edge contemporary design. So it's truly a no-period or an every-period piece of furniture.

The wood is particularly interesting. Crafted in elm solids and fine veneers, it has a rich and mellow look. The veneers are made of an unusual wood called Paldao. This well-defined grain has strong dark and light contrasts and Paldao veneer comes from the East Indies, the Philippines and Indochina. The vertical graining on this cabinet and others in the collection is due to the use of a 7-ply construction, rather than a standard 5-ply.

But there are dozens of well-engineered gentlemen's chests on the market. In recent years the emphasis has been on the word armoire, but you'll frequently find that today's armoire is merely another good version of the gentleman's chest delineated in a sturdy wood.

John Payne in "Hold Back the Night" (1956)

KIRK DOUGLAS portrays Lomax, a gunman, and Joanna Barnes plays Lola, a dancehall girl, in the western, "The War Wagon." The movie will be shown tonight at 9 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The real reason "All in the Family" has been so popular on CBS is not its so-called daring in having as "hero" a bigot who tosses off ethnic labels with biased abandon. Basically, it is simply a slightly updated version —and you could find some bigotry in the program I'm about to mention if you reflect — of Jackie Gleason's "The Honeymooners." And, if you care to go back even farther, "The Bickersons" program of radio days. As the French so aptly put it —the more things change, the more they are the same. The old formula of loudmouthed, dominant male winding up with egg on his face more often than not.

Universal Pictures will produe a two-hour television version of "The Royal Family" with the legendary Lynn Fontanne heading an all-star cast, not yet defined. The show will be filmed in Hollywood early next year, but the outlet and time have not been determined. This, of course, is the notable 1927 Broadway play by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber about a famous theatrical dynasty that, obviously, had the Barrymore clan as prototype.

The Jenny Sullivan seen Oct. 28 on ABC's "Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law" episode is the daughter of veteran star Barry Sullivan, who also happened to be on that particular show.

Joe Namath, a pro football quarterback of note when he isn't sidelined with injuries, as at present, gets another television shot with a syndicated series. Stadium Productions has put him back on the air with a weekly half-hour involving interviews with guests from the sports world and other milieus.

Sergio Mendes —"Brasil 77"

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sergio Mendes has enjoyed a successful past and at present is looking toward the future.

Mendes made his first impression in 1965 and during the following year established himself with a group which he called "Brasil 66." Since then, Mendes ignored the flipping of the calendar pages and retained the "Brasil 66" appellation.

BUT MENDES does not want to live in the past so he has revamped his band to fit a new five-year plan which he calls "Brasil 77."

He is getting away from, but not entirely discarding, the bossa nova beat in favor of new rhythms with a doppling here and there of rock chords and jazz beats without losing the essential Brazilian flavor.

Mendes' first album in his search for a different sound is "Pais Tropical" A&M SP-4315. It consists of a pleasant mixture of South and North American music.

SERGIO puts the harpsichord to meaningful use on the title number, "Pais Tropical," and there is a jazz-swing emergence of sound on "After Midnight."

SOUND Track — "Rainbow Bridge" Reprise 2040 is a momentous playback of the music from that movie if only because it features the late Jimi Hendrix on vocals and guitar. Highlights are "Dolly Dagger," "Earth Blues," "Room Full of Mirrors" and "Look Over Yonder."

Encore — Devotees of the flamenco guitar won't argue with you if you say that Sabicas is its greatest practitioner. Those who play the flamenco guitar either for fun or money particularly are partisan toward Sabicas, who, fortunately, has made some exquisite recordings. Some of his best are included on "Sixteen Immortal Performances, Flamenco Guitar" by Sabicas.

COPPER DAY ENDING

Like old copper tarnished pennies
The topaz-hued horizons stare mildly,
And signal me the close of day—
The eye of the sky winks wildly.

But warm as the rippling wheat
In an open Kansas field,
The sun god Sol recedes from sight—
To coal black darkness we must yield.

Nixon Speeds The Pullback

But He Warns Hanoi On Final Settlement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon Friday ordered a speedup in U.S. troop withdrawals from Vietnam that will remove 45,000 more men in December and January. But he warned Hanoi some American forces will stay in Indochina until there is a negotiated settlement.

"If we do not get a negotiated settlement, then it is necessary to maintain a residual force," Nixon said.

He said there was "no reason for encouragement" that he could speak about publicly that American prisoners of war might be released. But he promised the United States would "never give up" on the issue.

Congressional critics of Nixon's war policies expressed dissatisfaction with the statement a residual force would stay in Vietnam. Communist negotiators at the Paris talks have set complete American withdrawal as the price for releasing U.S. prisoners.

"I'm sorry about it," Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said of Nixon's statement. Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, said he was disappointed because there was "no indication of any termination of the war."

And Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said a residual force could serve as a "trip wire" that could keep American forces involved indefinitely.

It was Nixon's sixth troop withdrawal announcement. He said an additional 25,000 men would leave Vietnam in December and 20,000 in January, dropping the U.S. force in Vietnam to 139,000 men. The current withdrawal phase, which continues through November, will bring the level down to 184,000, from a high of 543,000 men in April, 1969.

The current phase has withdrawn an average of 14,300 men a month.

Nixon said he would make another troop withdrawal announcement by Feb. 1.

The President said U.S. air power would continue to be used in support of the South Vietnamese until there is a negotiated settlement or "until the South Vietnamese have de-

How Police Broke Open The Trident Robbery Case

By GEORGE NEVIN

Sausalito police yesterday credited aid from law enforcement agencies all over the state, a stubborn detective and a Sausalito resident who couldn't sleep with providing clues which led to the arrest of two men in connection with the Oct. 25 amphibious robbery of the Trident restaurant.

The men, believed to be part of a statewide safecracking ring, were captured in the East Bay and San Diego County in coordinated raids early yesterday. At least two more persons are being sought.

Sausalito Police Chief James D. Wright said he and another officer, along with state and federal agents, raided the home of William Ettleman, about 48, in El Cajon, San Diego County, while another team was entering the home of Edward Walter Devancy, 32, in the Contra Costa County community of Alamo.

Ettleman, who complained of chest pains to arresting officers, was being held under guard in University Hospital in San Diego today. Devaney was returned to Marin County Jail yesterday where he was held on $150,000 bail on suspicion of robbery and burglary to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Wright said three weapons matching the description of those used in the robbery were found in the Alamo home, along with torches, a hoist, and a set of walkie-talkies, all believed to have been used in the crime.

Wright said he did not know if

Phase Two Machinery Set To Go

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government regulations for the Phase II economic program that starts at midnight today will allow 4.3 million federal employes —military and civilian —to collect $5 billion in pay increase by the middle of next year.

The Cost of Living Council made the ruling Friday. It also waived its requirement that the government be notified in advance for pay raises in industries falling due by Jan. 1 under existing contracts.

This provision will benefit the United Auto Workers, among others.

Shortly before the council issued its rulings, President Nixon told a news conference he believed the rate of inflation would be cut in half during 1972. He predicted Phase II, which follows the end of his 90-day wage-price-rents freeze today, will succeed with continued "enormous public support."

The Price Commission has set an average nationwide ceiling of 2.5 per cent a year for price increases, while the Pay Board —the other agency created to supervise Phase II —has established a guideline of 5.5 per cent for annual pay raises.

Nixon again predicted 1972 will be a "good year" for the economy. He conceded there possibly would be "some bulge" in the rate of inflation as the freeze is lifted but argued that Pay Board and Price Commission decisions had been "very sound" and would make Phase II as much of a success as the freeze had been.

Barrows Asks Relaxation In Civic Center Security

County Administrator John F. Barrows recommended yesterday that security measures at the Marin Civic Center be relaxed.

His recommendation, contained in a four-page document, will be considered Tuesday by the board of supervisors.

"If there is to be a reduction in the level of building security it would be appropriate to relax restrictions on the administration wing and retain a higher level of security for the Hall of Justice. . ." he said in his report.

His recommendation calls for elimination of entrance checkpoints at the Administration Building to normal hours (from early morning to as late in the evening as public meetings are being conducted), and to keep the Hall of Justice hours as they are (8 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays).

"If your board were to adopt this schedule, eight deputy sheriff positions, related to the three public entrance checkpoints, could be eliminated," Barrows said.

Savings to the county as a result of the slackened security would be about $32,000 for the rest of the fiscal year.

However, Barrow's letter noted opposition to any security reduction from Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos, "who believes that only by the screening, patroling and closing of the building on off-hours have we prevented further violence to the building or employees."

Barrows further said that continuing "our present level of security after Miss (Angela) Davis leaves would undermine the county's assertion that some of the security is attributable to her trial and presence."

(The Davis trial has been ordered moved to Santa Clara

Social Security Hike Delay Attempt Fails

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate rejected today a proposal to delay for one year the $3 billion increasein social security taxes which is to take effect Jan. 1.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Wis., sponsor of the proposal, argued that the social security tax increase would just about wipe out for most low income families the effect of the 1972 income tax cuts approved by the Senate Friday. That cut is to be achieved — if the House goes along — by increasing the income tax personal exemption to $800 for income earned in 1972 and future years. This was more than President Nixon advocated as a spur to the economy.

Opponents of Mondale's amendment to the tax bill said it would nearly exhaust the surplus in the social security trust fund and make it difficult for the Senate to vote higher social security benefits early next year.

The Mondale proposal was killed by a 41-25 vote. Mondale said his purpose was to defer the social security tax increase in order to stimulate the economy by putting more money in consumers' pockets.

That increase would raise taxes for workers who earn more than $7,800 a year by a maximum of $62.40. Their employers would have to pay an equal amount.

The increase is achieved by applying the Social Security tax to the first $9,000 of earnings instead of the first $7,800.

The higher personal exemption voted Friday will mean a $50 tax cut for an average family of four which has $12,000 in taxable income left after exemptions and deductions are subtracted from gross income.

For families with larger incomes, the saving would be larger. For poorer families, the saving would be less.

As the bill now stands, still subject to amendments, the personal exemption, now $650, would rise to $675 for 1971

It's Official: Santa Clara Gets Angela

By MARY LEYDECKER

Angela Davis must go to Santa Clara County for her murder-kidnaping-conspiracy trial, a judge ruled yesterday in Marin Superior Court.

After two days of testimony, Judge Richard E. Arnason said that, although evidence had been presented that "Santa Clara County is not totally free from bias and prejudice," he had heard nothing to indicate Miss Davis could not get a fair trial there.

The testimony, which he described as having a "certain vagueness," did not meet legal requirements of "establishing a reasonable likelihood" that she cannot get a fair trial in Santa Clara County, he said.

Arnason shifted the case to Santa Clara County last week after ruling that a "resonable likelihood" had been established that Miss Davis could not get a fair trial in Marin.

Miss Davis's lawyers protested the switch, holding out for their original request for San Francisco. They claimed residents of Santa Clara County were equally or more prejudiced than Marinites against blacks, communists and militants.

Several witnesses from the peninsula county testified about discrimination in housing, racial polarization and concern over costs of the trial. A copy of the San Jose Mercury with a two-inch-high headline saying "Angela Expensive" was shown in court yesterday.

Arnason yesterday ordered the case transferred in 10 days. It was unknown whether the trial will be scheduled in San

Property Owners Chief Lashes Conservationists

By DAVID DIETZ

The new president of the Marin Property Owners Association lashed out at conservationists in general and proposals for restricted use of Point Reyes National Seashore in particular yesterday at the group's annual meeting. (See other story, page 7.)

Novato businessman Richard P. Nave viewed conservationists as "annointed. . .lobbyists who believe God sent them on earth to tell the rest of us how to live," and criticized their appeals for up to a 33,000-acre wilderness area in the 57,000-acre national seashore.

It and other proposed use restrictions, he said, meant "no family fun" and that the "park is to be preserved for wood ticks" and hikers "with the class ring, club shirt, $40 boots and mahogany backpacks."

"Did you ever try to put your grandmother in a pack?" he asked. "I can't."

Nave — whose luncheon audience at Dominic's Harbor Restaurant in San Rafael included a leading Marin conservationist, Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael — endorsed the present National Park Service master plan, which calls for a wilderness area of 5,150 acres in the Bear Valley-Mount Wittenberg area. And he demanded a balance of uses to insure maximum public enjoyment.

The seashore was provided at high cost to taxpayers, Nave said, and belonged to "all the people of the United States," not simply limited-interest groups.

Proposals to limit auto access to the seashore and to remove cars from the park altogether are unrealistic, Nave said. While other forms of transportation may minimize traffic impact, he said, it's time "that some planners realized that pogo sticks, unicycles, rocket sleds and skunk trains are not going to replace the auto."

Amid concern over the environmental impact of a proposed east-west parkway near the headlands, Nave called for an "excellent highway" to feed the seashore.

Nave, whose family owns and operates Nave Lanes and Nave Shopping Center, later switched his attack from conservation-

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Suez Could Reopen

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Egypt can clean up the Suez Canal and reopen it to international shipping at any time as long as Israel is not required "to do anything," Israeli Deputy Premier Yigal Allon said today.

Allon was interviewed on Israel Broadcasting's English language program "This Week" about reports from Washington that Israel will let Egypt clear the canal, closed and clogged by disabled ships since 1967.

Allon's remarks came as the semiofficial newspaper Al Ahram said in Cairo that Egypt will urge the United Nations to impose economic and arms sanctions against Israel if it refuses to withdraw from occupied Arab lands.

Israel has indicated it is willing to pull back in some areas but insisted on retaining strategic positions such as the Golan Heights in Syria and the old city of Jerusalem.

Prisoners Riot

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI)— Several hundred inmates rioted at the state reformatory Friday, causing extensive damage and injuring at least six prison staff employes, officials said.

"We have no idea what caused the uprising," said Brown County Sheriff Norb Froelich who was called along with 80 of his deputies to help quell the violence.

"All we know is that it started in the mess hall and there is severe damage to some physical areas inside the prison," he said.

One report said some prisoners blamed the outbreak on rumors circulating through the prison that guards were beating inmates. Prison officials would not comment on the report.

The trouble broke out about 4:45 p.m. and lasted about 1 12 hours.

Indira Returns

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi today returned from a three-week tour of Western capitals and said a peaceful solution to the tensions between India and Pakistan "is exercising my mind and also the minds of world leaders."

The prime minister said her trip to six Western nations, including the United States, had resulted in a better understanding abroad of the situation in East Pakistan. But she could not say how long it would be before some solution was found.

Alioto's Trial

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto Friday completed three days of testimony at trial of a $2.3 million civil lawsuit against him and will return Monday for at least several days more.

Alioto's free-wheeling answers — which several times strayed far enough from the questions to cover subjects his attorneys had tried unsuccessfully to introduce earlier — appeared occasionally to annoy Judge Donald L. Gaines. Gaines told Alioto Friday, "When I get lawyers on the stand I always have problems and you're no exception."

In the suit the State of Washington and 12 publicly owned utilities seek refund of a $2.3 million fee they paid Alioto for serving as their attorney in antitrust suits in the 1960s before he became mayor.

Machinegun Death

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Police sought help from abroad today trying to discover why a young Dutch sailor was machine-gunned to death as he sat in a Belfast dentist's waiting room.

A spokesman for the Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC), Northern Ireland's police force, said Interpol, the International Police Organization, had been called into the investigation.

The death of the 18-year-old Dutch sailor brought to 126 the number of persons to die this year in Northern Ireland bloodshed where the IRA and minority Roman Catholics have been battling protestants and the army over religious and secular issues.

Chinese Thank-Yous

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — It's been business before pleasure for the new Communist Chinese delegation to the United Nations.

Since their arrival Thursday they have been busy paying thank you calls on delegations who led the battle to get them into the United Nations and to U.N. officials.

Their first courtesy call, shortly after their arrival, was on the Albanian delegation to the United Nations. The Albanians sponsored the resolution that put Communist China in the world body.

The Chinese also have called on the Romanians, the Yugoslavs and the Nepalese, to name just a few. The calls were continuing over the weekend until all of the "friendly missions" have been visited.

Troops Flee

PHNOM PENH (UPI) —Four understrength battalions of Cambodian troops abandoned the besieged town of Rom long about 60 miles north of Phnom Penh today while Communist guerrillas attacked the outskirts of the capital, cutting commercial communications with the outside world.

Phnom Penh was cut off from outside commerical contact for more than 12 hours by heavy fighting at Kambaul, 12 miles southwest of the capital, where the post and telegraph international transmitters are located.

Cambodian high command spokesman Lt. Col. Am Rong said the village of Rom long was abandoned by government forces engaged in an 18-day battle against the Communists. About 1,000 Cambodian troops—some 40 of them wounded —had been fighting to hold the village while a 20,000-man support column tried to link up with their embattled comrades.

A RECORD ABUILDING

Those two fellows peeking through the window in the background probably are a little envious of the fellow in the foreground. He's barber Guy Mudd of St. Louis and, after already setting speed and endurance haircutting standards, wants to set "a new and different kind of record." So, Mudd is shaving the legs of women — lots of them. He figures that even if only 100 girls show up, he'll have his record. He uses an electric shaver to avoid nicks.

Israel, Egypt Huddle Now A Must: Rogers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State William P Rogers for the first time has publicly called for Egypt and Israel to engage in "negotiations in close proximity" to promote a Middle East peace settlement.

"The practical fact is that the discussions between the parties have reached the stage where differences are difficult to rectify by means of negotiations at a distance," Rogers said Friday. "What is required are negotiations in close proximity so that the parties can exchange thoughts quickly."

In an address to the 62nd national convention of Sigma Delta Chi, a journalistic fraternity, Rogers also disclosed that the Nixon administration "was apprehensive that war could break out between India and Pakistan in the next few days."

Officials were following with great care intelligence reports from the subcontinent telling of border clashes between Indian and Pakistani forces along the border of Tripura state where it joins East Pakistan.

Rogers, it was understood, during the last few weeks has made an effort behind the scenes to get Egypt and Israel into closer contact, possibly by setting up his right-hand man, Joseph J. Sisco in a New York hotel to shuttle between delegations.

The Egyptian government was understood to favor the proposal, but the Israeli government has yet to transmit its reaction for such intensified exchanges.

Instead, the Israeli government has asked the United States to clarify its position on the possible shipment of Phantom F4 fighter-bombers which it has requested. Israel also reportedly wants clarification of the six points which Secretary of State Rogers outlined at the United Nations for a Mideast settlement.

Coral Sea On Its Way To Vietnam

ALAMEDA, Calif. (UPI) — The aircraft carrier Coral Sea sailed for Vietnam Friday with only a few men missing despite a campaign by antiwar groups and radicals to persuade her 4,300 crewmen to jump ship.

A Navy spokesman said only 35 men were absent which "is not unusual for a ship the size of the Coral Sea." He said half the number had been listed as missing before the sailing.

A "stop the Coral Sea" demonstration, in which protestors in cars were supposed to cause a traffic jam in front of the Alameda Naval Station to prevent sailors from boarding the ship, was thwarted by Navy police.

They waved the surprised demonstrators onto the base, over a circuitious route, and out another gate.

Another disruption, in which protestors were to leave junked cars in a highway tunnel connecting Alameda with Oakland, appeared at first to have slowed traffic in the tunnel. But it later turned out that the tieup was caused by a government vehicle which had broken down.

And a much-publicized program by 10 Bay Area churches to offer "sanctuary" to deserters, which was supported by the radical-dominated City Council in nearby Berkeley, was also unsuccessful.

Antiwar groups running the "sanctuaries" waited all morning for sailors to show up, and finally announced at noon that one had.

Fairfax Rezoning On Agenda

The Marin County Planning Commission, meeting Monday at 9 a.m. in its Civic Center chambers, again will consider rezoning an area north of Fairfax to reduce development density allowed under present zoning.

The rezoning, covering the area north of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard from Oak Manor to White's Hill, would cut potential development to about one-eighth the density allowed under the Fairfax area general plan.

Rezoning previously was approved by the commission on Sept. 27, but rejected by the board of supervisors which requested additional study.

On other matters, the commission is expected to consider a master plan change to the Roundtree townhouse development in Marinwood to allow construction of a single-family home, and is expected to consider a rezoning application to change the designation of a parcel of property near Mill Valley from single-family to multiple residential zoning.

Yuen Enters Innocent Pleas

DOWNIEVILLE (UPI) — Carter Paul Yuen, a 21-year-old San Francisco student, has entered dual pleas of innocent and innocent by reason of insanity to charges of murdering three hunting companions Sept. 25 in the gold country.

Sierra County Superior Court Judge John F. Keene ordered a psychiatric examination of the Chinatown resident after Yuen's brief court appearance Friday.

The judge set March 20 for the trial of Yuen, a San Francisco State College student. He has been indicted for murder in the gunshot slayings of three fellow deer hunters.

Flood Crews Win Creek Access

Marin County and Army Corps of Engineers survey crews won the right yesterday to enter private property along Corte Madera Creek in Ross to complete flood control work through the town.

Judge Thomas F. Keating of Marin Superior Court ruled that the crews may have access to 14 parcels of land whose owners refused to cooperated in extension of the flood control project from below Lagunitas Bridge to Sir Francis Drake Boulevard at the San Anselmo line.

The judge ruled, however, that the crews must give 48 hours posted notice or, in an emergency, a 16-hour personal notice, before they enter the properties.

Keating also ordered the flood control district to deposit $100 per parcel, or $1,400, with the court to be paid to residents if their property is damaged by the crews.

Flood control work to the Lagunitas Bridge area was completed recently, with the project to resume in the spring.

Legal Aid Unit Faces Shutdown

A growing deficit ranging into thousands of dollars may force shutdown of the Legal Aid Society of Marin, the organization has announced.

In a letter to the Marin County Board of Supervisors requesting a $5,000 contribution, the organization said it has incurred a deficit of "as much as $8,000."

"The deficit has been caused by inflationary rental increases and unexpected overhead resulting from an unusually large volume of cases handled," the society said.

A spokesman for the organization told the Independent-Journal that unless funds are found, it may have to close its doors by the end of the year. The group had an operating budget for 1971 of $63,000.

Attorney Alvin H. Goldstein Jr., chairman of the society's board of directors, said the federal Office of Economic Opportunity, which finances the society, has refused to cover added costs of operation because of Marin County's affluence.

Goldstein said that the county bar association and United Bay Area Crusade also were being approached.

The supervisors will consider the funding request during their Tuesday meeting at Civic Center.

The society, which provides legal counsel to the poor, handles about 2,500 cases per year in Marin.

During the 16 years Justice John M. Harlan served on the Supreme Court he never granted a single interview.

$12,700 Added To Sturla Fund

A Petaluma radio action to raise funds for injured teenager Robbie Sturla ended yesterday, raising a grand total of $12,780.

Sturla, 15, has been paralyzed since Sept. 14 when he was injured in a practice football game at St. Vincent's High School, Petaluma. He is a patient at Santa Clara Rehabiliation Center, San Jose, where treatment costs may run as high as $6,000 per month.

Yesterday, the auction's final day on radio station KTOB was extended from the normal one hour to more than three so that all donated items could be sold. The one-day sale brought $3,930 to bring the three-week auction total to $12,780.

"It was simply a fantastic response," said Michael Gonzalez, athletic director at the high school. "We had secretly hoped for $7,500, but this is just amazing."

Total donations for Sturla are nearing $20,000, according to Gonzalez.

Hijacker Poleaxed; 6-Hour Ordeal Ends

CALGARY, Alta. (UPI)—A masked hijacker carrying more than 40 pounds of dynamite was knocked unconscious today by an Air Canada crewman wielding a fire ax. The crewman's actions 3,000 feet in the air ended a bizarre six-hour hijacking which skipped back and forth over the U.S.-Canadian border.

The hijacker, reported in fair condition today with a possible skull fracture, was putting on a parachute to bail out of the DC8 over Calgary when he was struck by the ax.

The hijacker, carrying a shotgun in addition to the dynamite, took control Friday night of the Calgery to Montreal flight carrying 123 persons. Claiming to be a member of the Irish Republican Army, the man demanded $1.5 million and a free passage to Ireland.

After landing in Great Falls, Mont., the man accepted $50,000 ransom. The plane took off, landed again at Great Falls, and the man let the passengers go unharmed. But he ordered the plane with its five-member crew to take off again. Indecision on the part of the hijacker led the plane back and forth across the border before he apparently decided to jump.

"The guy had a parachute and demanded to be allowed to jump out at 3,000 feet and said if the crew would not open the emergency window, he would blow off the tail of the plane," an Air Canada official said.

The official said that as the hijacker was preparing to jump, the pilot, Capt. Vernon Ehman, 42, "went into a back cabin with him and the guy put down his gun to put on the parachute.

"As he did that, the pilot jumped him and a purser came up behind him and let him have it with a fire ax. The captain held him as the purser hit him."

Flight 812 made its first landing at Great Falls after the hijacker had taken over 40 miles west of Winnepeg, Man. There it was refueled and the $50,000 was handed to the hijacker by a policewoman. The money was later recovered.

The plane then took off for a scheduled stop in Regina, Sask., to let the 114 passengers aboard disembark. The plane did not land in Regina, however, but turned back and set down in Great Falls again where the passengers and three of the nine crew members were set free.

On its second takeoff from Great Falls, Air Canada officials said the hijacker wanted to be taken to New York City before proceeding to Ireland.

County, although defense attorneys want it held in San Francisco.)

Barrows, who said government would function better and the Civic Center would be a better place to work if the checkpoints were eliminated, posed two questions for the supervisors: Will elimination of security checkpoints generate a serious threat to lives and property in the Civic Center? And should the present level of building security be considered as normal, with no real hope of returning to previous conditions?

Among other "pertinent considerations," he listed insurance rates, the forthcoming trial of six San Quentin Prison inmates involved in the August escape attempt, public and employee irritation over the constant checks upon entering the buildings, weekend closure of the buildings as a hindrance to employees and weekend closing of the main branch of the county library.

He also said the proposed reduction of security is opposed by all superior court judges.

ists to the proposed countywide master plan, saying the proposal would "bankrupt us all."

The plan would restrict development largely to the county's eastern corridor, envisioning extensive blocks of open space.

"Who's going to pay for it?" Nave asked. He observed that the plan, which recently underwent a series of public hearings, would "confiscate property through zoning" and cautioned his audience that "many of you would find yourselves in the park business without compensation."

The plan, he said, is "doomed to failure."

Nave took over the presidency from Rex Silvernale of San Rafael, who bowed out with a reminder to the association to exert its muscle since members represented more than half the county's assessed valuation.

Other new officers are Bill Colbert, Walter F. Freitas, Carlos Gonzalez and Boyd Stewart, vice-presidents; Alfred Grossi, secretary, and David G. Stephens, treasurer.

Fifty-nine directors also were chosen.

TRIDENT

published reports linking the pair to the Mafia are correct. He conceded, however, that the Justice Department's Organized Crime Unit had assisted in the investigation.

Three armed men garbed in wetsuits and SCUBA gear entered the Trident in the early morning hours of Oct. 25, handcuffed two cleaning men and then opened a safe with blowtorches.

The men communicated with one or more lookouts with walkie-talkies during the two-hour operation. They left with about $30,000 in weekend receipts after failing to open a second safe containing coins.

According to the chief, the "pieces began falling together" last week after a Sausalito resident called with a tip. Wright said the man, an insomniac, had been awake on the morning of Oct. 25 and had seen a 27-foot cabin cruiser lying off the Trident. He was able to supply officers with an identifying number, and the yellow-and-white-striped vessel was traced to Robert Tegay of San Francisco.

Wright said the boat — its name was unknown by the chief — was found docked at San Francisco's Marina Green and Tegay gave police permission to search it. On board they found two acetylne welding tanks.

Tegay told officers he had loaned the boat to Devaney on the night in question.

Wright said the two cleaning men who were handcuffed at the robbery scene identified Ettleman and Devaney through photographs.

Evidence supplied by other police departments and state and federal investigators showed where the two men lived, and warrants for their arrests were obtained Thursday afternoon, Wright said.

The chief said much of the credit in solving the case was due to "two persistent detectives," from his department, especially William Palmini, who, he said, put in 140 hours on the case.

Wright said officers were tipped off to the identities of the criminals early in the investigation through the method in which they opened the safe. The fact that they used torches and "lots of water" as a coolant suggested that they were responsible, he said.

Both Devaney and Ettleman have prior records for safe burglary, Wright said, and both have cases pending in San Diego County in connection with a market safe robbery there.

The chief didn't know how many men may be involved in the safecracking ring and had no comment on whether other arrests were immiment.

ECONOMY

said Friday large industries could raise prices to cover the pay increases coming due in the next few weeks without notifying the Price Commission in advance for its approval.

However, the council said, the price increases still would be subject to the general 2.5 per cent yardstick.

Government officials pointed out federal employes a'so were exempted during World War II and the Korean conflict.

The 2.9 million member military force will get an almost immediate $2.4 billion pay raise of about 15 per cent —nearly three times the Pay Board's guidelines. Congress voted the raise in an effort to attract an all-volunteer armed force by mid-1973, which would allow termination of the draft.

The 1.4 million civilian federal employes won't get their raises until next July 1. The civilian raises were due Jan. 1, but were pushed back six months by Nixon.

Civilian raises will total $2.6 billion and represent a 5.5 per cent increase, matching the Pay Board guidelines.

The council also:

—Exempted workers making less than the federal minimum wage or $1.60 an hour from long-term economic controls.

—Ruled life insurance and annuity premiums but not health and accident insurance would be exempt from controls.

While civilian federal pay raises will be delayed until mid-1972, in-grade, merit and longevity increases will be allowed to take effect immediately.

Weapon Withdrawal Plea Made By Sato

TOKYO (UPI) —Prime Minister Eisaku Sato has asked Treasury Secretary John B. Connally for U.S. assurances nuclear weapons will be withdrawn from Okinawa, Japanese government sources said today.

Connally, who left for the United States today, said he would carry the request to President Nixon.

Mariner Nears Its Mars Rendezvous

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — American's Mariner 9 spacecraft raced toward an unprecedented orbit around Mars and its raging dust storm late today, followed by two larger Russian probes expected to try to land later this month.

The U.S. planetary explorer took a final series of approach pictures from 130,000 to 70,000 miles out before preparing for the critical braking maneuver designed to place it in an orbit lasting decades.

Mariner 9's small rocket motor was programmed to fire at 7:17 A.M. EST for 15 minutes — 20 seconds to slow it from 10,917 miles per hour to 8,322 MPH — enough to place the spacecraft in the grip of Mortian gravity.

If the motor fails to fire for at least 12 minutes, Mariner 9 will whip around the planet and soar into an eternal orbit around the sun.

The 2,193-pound spacecraft accelerated rapidly toward Mars on the last leg of its curving 248-million mile, 167-day journey.

It was the most accurate interplanetary course ever followed by an American spacecraft. The two Russian craft, each weighing more than 10,000 pounds, are expected to reach Mars later this month, possibly next weekend. Dr. Carl Sagan, a noted Cornell University astronomer and member of the Mariner scientific team, said Friday night he understood in talks with Soviet scientists the two spacecraft were equipped to enter Mars' thin atmosphere and attempt a landing.

Sagan also said the Russians told him the two landers will carry a flammable material designed to be triggered on radio command to destroy any earth germs in the spacecraft after the instruments complete their Martian studies.

One of Mars, most tantalizing questions is whether it harbors some primitive form of life. Mariner 9's orbital studies may be able to tell more about the possibilities of life existing there, but the satellite will not be able to detect living things. Sagan said he understood the Russian probes do not carry biological instruments.

Mariner 9 radioed back its second series of scientific approach pictures Friday night. They showed that the dust storm under way since September, was still obscuring most features on the red planet.

The photographs displayed Mars as it appeared from 325,000 to 160,000 miles away and a portion of the south polar cap of dry ice appeared in some shots. For the first time, the edge of the frost cap seemed to be irregular rather than circular. Some of the pictures also had a large dark spot which rotated with the planet and scientists said this might be a high point near an area called Nix Olympica on Mars. There was speculation that a mountain might be piercing the dust clouds or disturbing wind patterns to open up the dusty haze.

Mariner 9's planned orbit will take it within 750 miles of Mars every 12 hours to give the spacecraft's twin cameras and other instruments a detailed view of the Martian surface. Mariner is designed to operate for a minimum of 90 days and map 70 per cent of Mars.

NIXON

veloped the capability to handle the situation themselves." He repeated earlier statements that the American offensive role in Vietnam has been concluded and that U.S. troops are now in defensive positions.

On other subjects Nixon said:

—There is a possibility of "some bulge" in the inflation rate when the wage-price freeze ends at midnight, but he described decisions of both the pay board and price commission as "very sound" and "very realistic." He said he believed the target of holding wage increases to 5.5 per cent is an achievable goal and that inflation will be cut in half by the end of next year.

—Persons with investments in the stock market should not sell. "I strongly advise anybody who invests to invest on the long term, not the short term." He predicted again that 1972 "will be a very good year" and that there will be a new prosperity based on more jobs in peacetime production.

—Progress will be made toward an agreement in the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) with the Soviet Union. But he said it was "highly improbable" that the talks will reach complete accord on restricting offensive and defensive weapons by the end of this year.

—Reported a "conscious decision" had been made not to send combat troops or military advisors into Cambodia for fear of falling into a Vietnam-style trap. He said "Cambodia is the Nixon doctrine in its purest form."

Nixon said future troop withdrawals would be announced at shorter intervals.

"As we get closer to the end, if we are going to maintain any negotiating leverage, the withdrawal periods will be somewhat shorter," Nixon said.

Nixon cautioned it would "not be well" to speculate about what effect his visits to Peking and Moscow would have on Vietnamese Communist negotiators.

But, he added, "we have not given up on the negotiating front."

Jose or Palo Alto, but Santa Clara County officials seemed to be leaning toward the latter because there are no jail facilities for women in San Jose.

Miss Davis's chief attorney, Howard Moore Jr., said yesterday he was undecided whether to appeal Arnason's ruling immediately or whether to renew the motion for change of venue when the case is moved.

Another of her attorneys, Margaret Burnham, observed that the judge seemed to have picked out the Bay Area county "with the fewest blacks" when he chose Santa Clara.

It was learned that Arnason had made his choice after the state judicial council surveyed 11 Northern California counties to determine which had the least court congestion.

The judicial council also had recommended Contra Costa and San Joaquin counties, it was learned.

Miss Burnham said the judge had acted unconstitutionally by considering merely court calendars, and not taking into consideration the degrees of prejudice in various counties.

Tiburon Council Meets Monday

The Tiburon City Council, meeting in adjourned session at 7:30 p.m. Monday at city hall, will consider levying a one-time property development tax.

The tax, also called a bedroom tax, would apply to all new construction.

Also on the agenda is consideration of leasing additional space for city offices and approval of a master plan for 36 apartments of Marinero Circle.

income and to $800 for income earned in 1972 and thereafter.

A taxpayer subtracts the exemption for himself and each of his dependents from his gross income in calculating his taxable income.

The House-passed tax bill calls for a $750 exemption for 1972 and thereafter, as Nixon recommended.

A House-Senate conference committee must accept the higher figure before it is enacted. That committee's job is to reconcile differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill.

Thirty-eight Democrats and only two Republicans voted for the higher exemption; 28 Republicans and nine Democrats voted no.

But by a two-vote margin, the administration won the victory it considered most crucial. A 37-35 vote turned back a two-pronged proposal by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., which would have:

—Repealed the more liberal business depreciation rules sought by the Treasury to save corporations about $2 billion a year in taxes for decades to come.

—And used that money in 1971 to allow every taxpayer to subtract from what he owes in 1971 taxes $25 for himself and $25 for his spouse —a one-shot $1.8 billion tax reduction.

The administration feared the effort to kill the liberalized depreciation schedule, known as "Asset Depreciation Range," and a matter of fierce debate both for what it does and how it is achieved.

Last January, President Nixon announced the ADR rules, designed to save corporate taxpayers $36 billion over the next 10 years and billions more in future decades.

A number of Democrats said the administration action putting ADR into effect was unconstitutional since the Constitution reserves for Congress the power to alter tax rates. The White House said it had acted under authority extended it by Congress.

As a way out, the House Ways and Means Committee wrote a version of ADR into the tax bill. It did not go as far as the administration's original plan, but its constitutionality was beyond challenge.

The administration's bill, as approved by the House, cuts business and individual taxes by an estimated $15.5 billion over the next three years with the aim of stimulating consumer spending, business modernization and export activity.

Labor May Demand 1-Year Wage Pacts

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—The president of the Retail Clerks Association has indicated organized labor may demand one-year contracts in an effort to recoup wages lost during the period of economic controls.

"We definitely are thinking along these lines at the moment," said James T. Housewright, head of the 550,000-member Retail Clerks Union.

Housewright and Floyd Smith, chief of the Machinists Union, were among the early arrivals Thursday of labor leaders gathering here for next week's AFL-CIO convention.

Housewright said if his union members couldn't regain wages lost during the economic freeze, "we'll consider the short-term contract to gain relief as quickly as possible when controls are lifted."

Smith said he felt it was unlikely that the five labor members of the National Pay Board would walk out to protest the 5.5 per cent wage increase ceiling set earlier this week by the board.

"We feel pretty strongly that we have to stay there for the protection of our members," said the boss of the one-million member Machinists Union.

Smith added that the 5.5 per cent wage hike ceiling didn't come as a surprise to the labor members of the board because "you don't sit in a meeting and not get a feeling of what they're going to peg it to."

The Machinists Union president also said that while he felt the Phase Two of the President's economic program may help slow inflation, it stopped short of helping solve the nation's unemployment problem.

Oil Talks Will Resume This Month

VIENNA (UPI)—The major oil-exporting nations resume talks with Western oil companies later this month to offset losses caused by the "de facto devaluation of the U.S. dollar," the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) said Friday.

A statement issued by OPEC headquarters said OPEC experts will meet representatives of Western oil companies in Vienna Nov. 22 "to develop and analyze facts and other data relating to the external purchasing power of member countries' oil revenues and to assess the loss to the per barrel revenues of members as a result of the recent monetary development and the de facto devaluation of the U.S. dollar."

OPEC had approved a plan to start negotiations for oil price hikes at its last meeting in Beirut Sept. 22. A first round of talks, with oil company representatives, however, ended without results in Teheran earlier this week.

Last February, the Persian Gulf nations succeeded in getting increases in Texas and royalties amounting to $1.2 billion this year alone. In return, they promised to hold the price line for the next five years.

But, in September, OPEC decided "to seek ways and means to offset any adverse effect on the per barrel real income of member countries resulting from the international monetary developments."

The OPEC member nations are Algeria, Lybia, Iran, Venezuela, Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Abu Dhabi, Kuwait, Indonesia and Nigeria.

Cycle Gang Killers Are Sentenced

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Fourteen motorcycle gang members who pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the killing of four rival gang members were sentenced today, 11 of them to 10 month jail terms.

Eleven of those sentenced have been in jail since last March when the killings occurred and will get credit for time already served. They will serve the balance of their sentences in the Cuyahoga County workhouse.

The other three, who surrendered about a month ago, were sentenced to the workhouse until next Feb. 7, 1972.

Common Pleas Judge Frank J. Gorman also placed all 14 on two years probation and ordered that they share the court costs.

"I believe this is the only way substantial justice can be served," Gorman said. "I believe these are reasonable sentences under the circumstances."

The 14 were charged following a brawl between members of the Hell's Angels and the Breed motorcycle gangs at a cycle trade show here March 6.

Among those sentenced to 10 month terms was Russell Beyea, 29, of Van Nuys, Calif.

Yablonski Killer Gets The Electric Chair

WASHINGTON, Pa. (UPI)—Aubran W. "Buddy" Martin, 23, was sentenced Saturday to death in the electric chair for his part in the New Year's Eve, 1969, slayings of United Mine Workers (UMW) official Joseph A. "Jock" Yablonski, his wife and daughter.

A jury of seven women and five men, which on Friday found Martin guilty of first degree murder, met again at 10:26 a.m., EST, today and needed only 40 minutes to decide on the penalty. It had the choice of death or life imprisonment.

Martin, of Cleveland, Ohio, was the first of five defendants to be brought to trial in the triple slaying.

He sat coatless, at the defense table and stared at the jury as Foreman Frank Costello, a former coal miner, handed the jury's decision to Judge Charles Sweet.

The trial judge read the decision: "We the jurors impaneled in the above case, having heretofore determined that the defendant is guilty of first degree murder, do hereby fix the penalty at death."

Martin said not a word and displayed no emotion as Judge Sweet repeated the jury's findings three times, each time mentioning the names of the three victims. The judge made no other comment and dismissed the jury.

The judge, on whom the verdict was binding, will set an execution date, but Martin's ultimate fate still was uncertain.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp, whose term of office runs until Jan. 1, 1975, has said there would be no executions while he is governor.

Under Pennsylvania law, a jury which returns a verdict of first degree murder must deliberate again and decide on one of two sentences —death or life imprisonment.

Martin's trial, which began Nov. 1 with selection of a jury, left unanswered the question of who ordered the slayings and paid the killers $5,000.

The Yablonskis were shot to death in their beds in their home at nearby Clarksville, Pa., Dec. 31, 1969—three weeks after Yablonski was defeated in an election for the UMW presidency by the incumbent president, W. A. "Tony" Boyle, after an unusually bitter and violence-marked campaign.

Yablonski had been the leader of an insurgent group within the UMW.

The other defendants in the slayings were Claude E. Vealel, 27, Cleveland, who made a confession after his arrest; Paul E. Gilly, 37, Cleveland, and his wife, Annette, 31, and Annette's father, Silous Huddleston, 62, of LaFollette, Tenn., president of a small UMW local composed of pensioned coal miners.

Martin denied he took part in the killings. He said he sat in an automobile outside the Yablonski home while Gilly and Vealey went inside.

Prosecutor Richard Sprague said Gilly would be the next to be brought to trial, some time in January.

According to Vealey's confession, Gilly was their leader in the assassination plot.

The state charged Huddleston and his daughter funneled the payoff money from unknown persons.

The $5,000 was split among Gilly, Vealey and Martin, who were accused of the actual killings.

Bar Owner Fined In Assault

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A Kent Woodlands man who is a part owner of a Tenderloin bar was fined $2,500 in U.S. District Court yesterday for assaulting an Internal Revenue Service agent.

Milton Mohr, 40, of 296 Crown Road, was found guilty last month of assaulting and interfering with two federal agents who had gone to his home May 3 to serve a subpoena growing out of an investigation of organized crime in the Tenderloin.

"It seems to me he had his fun and now he has to pay for it," Judge Thomas J. Clary said yesterday as he fined Mohr and also placed him on probation for one year.

Mohr is president of West-Ent Inc., which owns the Mocambo Bar.

Park-Rec Panel Will Study Archery Plea

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Commission is considering a request by the Northwood Bowmen's Association to locate an archery range on city-owned property in Black Canyon.

The commission is expected to discuss the request again at a meeting Dec. 9. Harold G. Mayfield of the association told the commission Thursday night the site had been chosen because the present range in Santa Venetia is too expensive to lease.

Parks and Recreation Director Andrew J. Snyder Jr. told Mayfield that archery was one of the uses considered when the city purchased the land but that no master plan has been developed for the area.

In other action, the commission heard a request from Scott Jones, Glenwood School Parent-Teacher Association president, that a recreation program be held next year for East San Rafael students attending Santa Venetia Middle School.

The commission also plans to discuss this matter again at the December meeting.

A $300,000 Gift From Howard Hughes

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI)—A $300,000 check from industrialist Howard Hughes was delivered Friday to the Board of Regents for the University of Nevada Medical School.

Attorney James Wadsworth, a lawyer for the Hughes Tool Co., presented the cashiers check to Regent Chairman Harold Jacobsen minutes before the board convened its regular meeting.

Careening Car Kills Six; Driver Is Held

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (UPI)—A car driven by a man with no driver's license careened through a busy downtown intersection at noon Friday "mowing people down like grass." Six persons were killed and nine injured.

Hundreds of people were in the area during lunch hour when the car swerved from a congested street into a group of persons along a one-block stretch.

A policeman said the auto "mowed people down like grass."

"There were several pairs of empty shoes that people had been knocked out of," said radio newsman Bill Clark, one of the first persons on the scene. "There was blood all over the sidewalks."

The driver of the car, James Anderson, 30, Youngstown, was not injured and was taken into custody.

"Anderson had no drivers license on him and we are charging him with driving without an operators license," Youngstown police said today. "He's also being held on an open charge pending investigation of the accident."

Police said Anderson started "shaking and sweating" in his jail cell Friday night and was taken to Youngstown Southside Hospital where he was reported in "fair" condition.

"It almost seemed like he was having a seizure," a policeman said. "We don't know if he has any background of epilepsy."

The dead were identified as Joseph LeGree, 68; Al Satterwhite, 42; Leetonia Williams, 12; Mrs. Ortha Hoffman, 79; Gloria Bankston, 30, and Eunice Foster, 60, all of Youngstown.

The owner of a restaurant on the street where the accident occurred, Robert Cahill, described what he saw:

" A car went by my window quite fast and I saw a lot of dust and glass and heard screams.

"I went outside the door and noticed people laying on the sidewalk. I started to go up the sidewalk and the first person I came to looked like he was in shock. He was laying up on his elbow. The next person I saw seemed to be dead. Then I saw a lady who was also dead. I covered her body, somebody brought out a sheet.

"There was one man bleeding from the nose and mouth. I turned him sideways because it looked like he was drowning in his own blood."

The car, which traveled out of control for about 500 feet, went from the street, onto a sidewalk and slammed against the sides of buildings before stopping.

Ross Boys Hurt In Car Wreck

A 14-year-old Ross boy suffered serious facial cuts early today when a car in which he was a passenger slammed into a power pole in San Anselmo.

Mark Lavin of 11 Redwood Avenue was reported in satisfactory condition today at Marin General Hospital.

His brother, John, 16, who was driving the car, was not injured in the accident, which happened at 12:07 a.m. on San Anselmo Avenue near Madrone Avenue.

Police said the older youth apparently lost control of the car on the wet street.

New Panel Member For Gallinas CSD

An incumbent was reappointed and a new member named Thursday night to the Gallinas Village Community Services District board.

Secretary Marguerite F. Clark said incumbent Herbert C. Belben Jr., who originally had planned to retire, changed his mind and was renamed to a new term. The new director is Fred Schroeder of 736 Estancia Way, sales manager for the Continental Baking Co.

Schroeder succeeds Walter Rudolph, who sought but failed to win reappointment.

A fourth candidate was an 18-year-old College of Marin student, Roff Blake.

Belben's and Rudolph's seats were up at the Nov. 2 election, but no candidate filed.

Patrick On The Stand; Takes Fifth

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—"I have nothing to hide," said William Penn Patrick, then promptly took the Fifth Amendment Friday at a Federal Trade Commission hearing when he was asked about his business dealings in his cosmetic company.

Patrick, a San Rafael millionaire and one-time California gubernatorial candidate who is one of seven officers of Holiday Magic Inc. to be questioned about the firm, said:

"My life is pretty well an open book and it looks like it really is by looking at everything (all the court exhibits) here.

"And my attorneys have advised me to take a certain position which I don't like to take ... I don't want to do it but I have to do it," Patrick said.

The FTC has charged Patrick and two other company officers with violation of various parts of the Federal Trade Commission Act and the Clayton Anti-trust Act, including:

—Misrepresentation of potential earnings to prospective salesmen.

—Misrepresentation of the ease with which a person can supposedly build a distributorship.

—Discrimination in prices the company charges distributors for the same products.

All seven officers appearing at the hearing have thus far taken the Fifth Amendment. The hearing began Nov. 1 before Examiner Edgar Buttle of Washington, and is expected to move on to Miami on Nov. 29; then to Detroit, Chicago and Washington over a six-month period.

Mailliard: U.S. Should Restrict Responsibilities

Congressman William S. Mailliard, supporting revival of the Senate-defeated foreign aid bill, said yesterday the U.S. should "restrict perhaps, but not abdicate" its responsibilities as a world power. (See related story, page 1.)

"It's important in this new isolationist mood not to flake out on the rest of the world," the Sixth District Republican, who represents a portion of Marin, told the Marin Property Owners Association. "It's a highly dangerous thing to do.

"As a great power, we have this responsibilty and there isn't any way to put it down."

Mailliard, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, believed the Senate was in a "strange, pixilated, peevish mood" when it rejected American's omnibus foreign aid package last month. But, he said, "they woke the next morning in a little more somber period."

He noted a growing effort to revive at least some features of the program, lamenting that funds earmarked for such areas as child relief, aid to Communist-threatened countries and the international antidope effort had died with the bill's defeat.

Mailliard believed that most people would be inclined to reject the program as a whole, but would take a different view of pieces of the total package.

On another subject, Mailliard told the association's annual luncheon he was worried over prolonged extension of the 10 per cent surcharge on most imports — a feature of President Nixon's new economic policies.

"If it goes on very long," he said, "labor and management alike are going to find it so comfortable, they're going to scream like the devil" when it's repealed.

On the other hand, he said, foreign governments won't stand for it much longer without retaliating. And before long, there would be no trade at all because of financial barriers thrown up by both American and foreign governments, he oberved.

An interested listener to Mailliard's address was Roger Boas, Democratic hopeful for Mailliard's seat, who was invited to the meeting by an association member.

Dean Martin's Gift To The State

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The state Park and Recreation Commission Friday accepted a gift of 78.9 acres of land in Topanga Canyon of the Santa Monica Mountains from entertainer Dean Martin.

The land is valued at $700,000 and brings to 3,147 acres the amount of land in the area owned by the state.

Mill Valley Mystery: Man Found In Rain

A young man found mysteriously wedged between two trees in a Mill Valley park in the pouring rain still had not regained consciousness today nor had he been identified.

Mill Valley Juvenile Offier Jeff Sousa said he received an anonymous call about 3:30 p.m. yesterday that a man was lying in Ethel Park and "might be dead."

Sousa said he found the man, who appeared to be between 21 and 25 years old, jammed between two redwood trees, unconscious and soaking wet. Sousa said the man, who had a weak pulse, was rushed to Marin General Hospital where he was reported in serious condition today in the intensive care unit.

There were no signs of violence, Sousa said, except that the man's jacket had been slashed as if by a knife.

Sousa described the man, who had no identification, as about 5-9 or 5-10, weighing 145 to 150 pounds. He has brown eyes, short brown hair, a short beard and wore brown, horn-rimmed glasses. He was dressed in a white T-shirt, black jeans and a brown simulated leather jacket.

FBI Probe Of Newsman Was 'Clumsy'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon has indicated he feels the FBI investigation of CBS correspondent Daniel Schorr was handled "in a clumsy way," according to the White House.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., said his constitutional rights subcommittee would investigate the incident.

White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told newsmen Friday that because of his concern Nixon has ordered "that whenever anyone is being considered for a government job that he always be informed beforehand and be told that the customary FBI check is being made."

The investigation of Schorr was first disclosed in Thursday's editions of The Washington Post, which said the probe was conducted mostly during the weekend of Aug. 20 and involved questioning of Schorr's friends, neighbors and employers.

The White House said Schorr was being considered for an administration environmental post. Schorr said he never was informed about the job.

Ziegler said Nixon had planned to emphasize to reporters, if asked at his Friday news conference, that "no intimidation was intended in this case and never has been, and there never will be while the President is in the White House."

But Nixon was not asked about the incident, and Ziegler told newsmen afterward the President would have outlined the new safeguards he has ordered to avoid the appearance of intimidation.

Ervin said he would summon Schorr and top administration aides to testify when the Senate panel that he chairs resumes hearings in January on freedom of the press.

"Apparently neither Schorr nor various White House officials with general responsibility in the area of recruiting were aware of any such appointment under consideration," Ervin said.

Young Crash Victim's Status Good

A 16-year-old Mill Valley boy was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital with injuries suffered in an automobile accident on Shoreline Highway.

A Forest Knolls man suffered minor injuries in another accident on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard today, the California Highway Patrol reported.

The hospital said that Charles J. Alfonso of 388 East Blithedale Avenue suffered injuries to his left hand when his brakes locked and he lost control of his car on Shoreline near Ross Drive in Tamalpais Valley about 2:40 p.m. yesterday.

The highway patrol said the car hit an embankment and rolled over. Two passengers in Alfonso's car were uninjured, patrolmen reported.

In the other accident, David T. Kircher, 21, of Arroyo Road, Forest Knolls, told the highway patrol he would see his own doctor for undisclosed injuries suffered when he failed to make a turn and went off the road on Sir Francis Drake just west of Fairfax at 2 a.m. today.

Plane Crash Survivor 'In Bad Shape'

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI)—The lone survivor of an Air Force cargo transport plane crash which killed 10 crewmen was in "very bad shape" today.

S-Sgt. Louis F. Hribar "is listed in very serious condition, but that's just about a step above critical," said a spokesman for Brooke Army Hospital's Burn Center in San Antonio, Tex., where Hribar was flown after the crash Friday of the C-130.

Hribar was flown to the burn center shortly after the cargo transport crashed on takeoff at Little Rock Air Force Base and exploded in a mass of flames, killing 10 of the 11 airmen aboard.

The Little Rock sergeant, a loadmaster on the giant aircraft, apparently was thrown clear in the crash and fought his way through the 40 foot high flames which engulfed the plane. Hribar sustained third degree burns.

4-Year-Old Dies In Burning Shed

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A 4-year-old boy was killed Friday when he became trapped in a shed filled with burning newspapers.

Authorities said Jonathan Cramer and two young companions were playing with matches in the shed behind a Latter Day Saints church. The papers had been collected by the church.

THE GENERATION RAP

Young Bride Wants To Know If Her Marriage Is On The Skids

DEAR SUE: ALSO HELEN:

I know you aren't a marriage counselor, but you're just about my age, so maybe you'll understand, Sue. And Helen —please help.

Duncan and I have been married two months and I thought we'd never fight. I thought he was the sweetest, most considerate person in the world, but I was so-o-o-o wrong.

This evening we were talking about when he'll get out of the service, and he said he might stay in and make a career of it. I always expected us to go back home where he'd work in dad's store. One thing led to another and we were both yelling, so I stormed out the front door, saying I wouldn't come back till he apologized.

Well, I stayed out in the cold for a half hour and when I looked in the window, there he was asleep on the couch — or pretending to be. So I'm now in the bedroom with the door locked, and writing my very first letter to a column. I'd go home, but it's 1,500 miles away and there's no money. Besides I'm getting the sniffles, probably from overexposure to the cold.

Does our marriage have a chance with him so darn stubborn? — JANEY

DEAR JANEY:

True, I'm not a marriage counselor, but maybe this story will make you see that Duncan wasn't any more stubborn than you, and someday you'll be laughing with your kids about that first fight. (I hope you're laughing together about it now.)

Anyway, these newlyweds got into a big hassle over some silly thing. Like you, Janey, the wife stomped outside, thinking he'd be right behind her with an apology.

Naturally, you don't stop to put on shoes or a robe when you're red hot mad, so there she stood barefooted, in her thin nightie; and it was snowing hard. She shivered (and steamed) on their tiny front porch, hopping from one foot to the other, for what seemed like hours, but wasn't. Finally she decided losing face was better than turning into an icicle, so she went in.

Guess what her husband did? Still reading his upside-down book, he remarked casually, "Oh, you're making snow ice cream? I'll take mine with maple syrup."

By the way, Janey, the marriage is still going strong over 30 years later. — SUE

DEAR JANEY:

And I can vouch for it, because guess what teenage columnist just loves telling tales about mama-collaborator?

From personal experience, I know, Janey, that the sniffles you got weren't from "overexposure to cold," but to a cold-shoulder-which warmed soon afterwards when you saw the funny side together. Right?

As for the future: talk it out, don't fight it out, but don't push for decisions until discharge-time draws closer. The present is so much more important! — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

A friend gave me a rabbit he couldn't keep. Then another guy gave me one, because I already had the hutch. My folks went along with the first rabbit. Why are they so dead against two? — RABBIT, ANYONE?

DEAR RABBIT:

Easy: They want to avoid a hare-raising experience. — SUE

DEAR R.A:

Why don't you trade one of your rabbits for a guinea pig and sidestep the population explosion? — HELEN

Single, Ply Yarns —The Differences

Single yarns are those made from a single filament or from a group of staple of filament fibers twisted together sufficiently to form the desired yarn.

Ply yarns are made by twisting together two or more single yarns and are stronger than the equivalent single yarns of the same diameter and fiber.

Cooking In 'Air'

High altitude cooking requires an increase in time for boiled foods and a change in the proportions of ingredients used in leavened foods, such as cakes and yeast bread. In some cases a change in baking temperatures may also be necessary.

Plastic Wrap For Velvet Seams

By EUNICE FARMER

Once again, I'm writing in answer to many letters concerning velvets. Yes, they are beautiful, and they are being used rather extensively in ready-to-wear. Naturally, you will be wanting to use velvet in your own wardrobe.

A friend of mine, who literally spends half a lifetime in her laboratory working out such puzzles as fabrics and sewing techniques, has given me the best tip I have had so far when working with velvet. This technique prevents two pieces of velvet from slipping which causes uneven seam ends. Also, it makes seams appear smoother. I tried it and got the best results I have been able to come up with.

Take a strip of plastic wrap or a strip of plastic from a dry-cleaner's bag, place it between the two layers of velvet (with the pile on the inside) and baste the seams together for machine stitching. Next, turn the seam to the opposite side and machine stitch the seam line, which will mean stitching through the plastic since it is firmly basted in between the two layers of velvet.

By turning your fabric to the opposite side from the side you basted, you will be stitching from the opposite direction. If you basted from the neckline down to the hem, you should machine stitch from the hem up to the neckline. After the stitching is completed, you can easily pull out the plastic from both sides of the machine stitching.

MILDRED BOWLES, Framingham, Mass., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her suggestion:

"With today's rage in tie-making, it is not difficult to make a bow tie. I made one for my husband in black satin, lined in red satin for a dinner suit. I was unable to find the hardware needed to make the adjustable part. I found a workable replacement for it by using the back hook and eye section made for a replacement on a bra. It worked perfectly, and I think it would have worked just as well on an un-tied bow tie.

DEAR EUNICE,

I neglected to take your advice about beginning early to make a winter coat. Somehow when the weather isn't cold, you think it will never get cold so you put off the things you should be taking care of. Now, winter is here, and I still don't have my coat. With time running out, can you please give me information about the easiest type of pattern to choose and the kind of fabric that will not require too much skill.

MRS. P.B.

DEAR MRS. P.B.,

Coats are actually much simpler to make than suits as a general rule. The things that take time are underlining a fabric, if it isn't heavy enough to use as it is, matching plaids, and using fabrics that are difficult to press.

I would suggest a solid melton cloth for a tailored coat. This takes top stitching and tailored details beautifully. They are new and usually don't have a definite pattern that needs matching. If you choose one with a combination of lovely colors woven together, it makes a great background for solid colored dresses to pick up any of the colors.

As to the simplest styles to look for, a Peter-Pan collar is much easier to make than a coat with a notched collar. The facing is usually cut in one with the front of the coat which eliminates a separate stitching at the front edge, which again takes time to grade your seams and do the proper pressing.

If the fabric is the right weight and keeps its shape, it will not require underlining. However, you must always use interfacing for the fronts of your coat as well as the collar. If a garment is not underlined, it is also important to place a bias strip of interfacing at the hem of the coat as well as the hem of the sleeves.

It's never too late to make your coat. In most parts of the country, you will need your coat until late spring even if the winter starts a little late. One advantage to waiting is that you will find marvelous sales on beautiful fall coatings at this time of year. You can probably end up with a much nicer piece of fabric than you originally planned because of the added savings.

Coats are fun to make and more fun to wear, so dig in with my blessings. If you think your coat needs a professional pressing, have it done before you apply your finished lining.

DEAR EUNICE,

I love the nice, smooth fitting, stand-up neckline for dresses, not a turtle neck that doubles over.

Some patterns call for this piece of the garment to be cut on the straight grain. When I do this, I don't achieve the smooth finish I like. Instead, the collar stands away from my neck and ends up with breaks in the collar. This seems to look so home-made. Any solution?

MARY T.

DEAR MARY T.,

I have found that a collar never appears as smooth or attractive when it is cut with the straight grain. I advise cutting this piece of your pattern on the true bias grain-line.

I have also found that there is usually too much fabric given for this stand-up neckline. Instead, pull it slightly as you pin in place. Baste the collar to check for the fitting before completing. You will probably find that the collar was at least an inch too long. When you have determined to exact length, you may finish the ends and apply to your dress or jacket.

May I also add that we find the soft, polyester, non-woven fleece to be ideal as an interfacing for these collars. It will give a smooth, puffy look which fills in the fabric nicely. It is washable, should you intend to wash your garment. It is also dry cleanable.

Eunice Farmer give you illustrated instructions on how to make professional looking sleeves in her booklet "All About Sleeves." To obtain your copy send 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Curtis Case Turns Into Rights Issue

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—What constitutes a fair standard for admission to college, for students in general and athletes in particular?

That, it turns out, is the question Judge Albert C. Wollenberg will have to decide in the next two weeks in U.S. District Court.

What started out Friday as a simple challenge by University of California football players Isaac Curtis and George Brumsey of the NCAA's 1.6 predictability test rule wound up as a civil rights case.

Richard J. Archer, representing the NCAA, flatly declared toward the end of the long day that he was unprepared to argue a civil rights case and asked for more time to prepare a defense.

Judge Wollenberg, agreeing the argument had progressed "beyond the NCAA," granted the motion and tentatively set the next hearing for Nov. 26.

Curtis and Brumsey were declared ineligible for athletic competition by the NCAA for failing to take the standard 1.6 predictability grade test. When the University of California declined to declare the two ineligible, the NCAA put California on probation. The probation prohibits California from participating in any NCAA championships.

Curtis and Brumsey charged the NCAA acted "arbitrarily and capriciously" to penalize them and in so doing acted in violation of the Due Process clause of the 14th Amendment.

Attorneys for the two—Fred Rosenfeld, Stanley Sanders and Herman Selvin—brought in "expert" witnesses—Dr. Thomas MacMillan and Dr. Arthur Cherdack—to testify that standard college admission tests do in fact discriminate against blacks and other underprivileged students.

MacMillan and Cherdack claimed they have conducted extensive research in college admission tests and found that they are, by and large, discriminatory against blacks.

Archer argued since the NCAA's member schools accept the admission tests as a standard the NCAA hadn't acted in a discriminatory fashion against Curtis and Brumsey, both of whom are black, and had in fact merely followed the standard in setting up its 1.6 rule.

Archer further declared Curtis and Brumsey should consider themselves "privileged" since both were admitted to the University of California under the so-called four-per cent rule.

Under that rule four per cent of the total school enrollment each year includes students —

27-0 CLOSER

Terra Linda Whips Drake

By RON LENT

Terra Linda High School lost its Marin County Athletic League football championship but learned a lot.

This schooling was in evidence last night when the visiting Trojans trounced a good Drake team, 27-0, in the Pirates' homecoming at San Rafael High.

"We accomplished quite a bit this year," winning coach Don Lucas commented afterwards. "As far as the instructional aspects go," he assessed, "we're quite satisfied. True, it is not as exciting as when you win a championship (like Terra Linda did the past five years) but we got a lot done. This will certainly show in the future."

For now, Lucas must be content with a 6-3 log and a solid victory over his fierce San Anselmo rivals. The Pirates unleashed a devastating aerial circus on muddy terrain before an enthusiastic, albeit shivering crowd.

Quarberback Kevin Donohoe threw from the very outset in showing Drake, 3-6, that the elements would not preclude the Terra Linda game plan. This pass-oriented strategy was implemented, despite three Pirate interceptions.

The pilfers and moisture failed to slow down the high-powered Terra Linda attack as the visitors scored three second-quarter touchdowns to win going away.

The victors began the assault after safety John Buckley intercepted his first of two passes on the final play of the opening quarter. Encamped on his own 38 as the second period began, Donohoe triggered a four-play, 62-yard drive. The big yardage gainers were tosses of 10 and 27-yards to receivers Paul Mooney and Wes Emerson, respectively. Emerson's grab placed the ball on the Pirates' eight, setting the stage for halfback Mike Sabel's nine-yard scoring run one play hence with 9:45 left. He circled left end behind crisp blocking and scootered across untouched.

Six plays after the ensuing kickoff, monster man Paul Berry latched onto a Tom MacAusland pass and raced 49 yards unmolested down the right sideline.

Their spirits buoyed by this turn of events, the defense again forced the green shirts into a punting situation. However, Rick Herbert fumbled the

Unbeaten Rancho Whips Petaluma

I-J Special Report

PETALUMA — Quarterback Steve Wlodarczyk accounted for four touchdowns as Rancho Cotate High School of Rohnert Park climaxed an unbeaten season last night with a 30-0 win over the host Petaluma High School Trojans.

The Cougar signal caller passed for three touchdowns, covering 42, 35 and 30 yards, and ran two yards for another as Rancho's offense dominated the contest.

The Cougars' passing attack totally negated the Trojans' upset aspirations as Wlodarczyk had a field day against a good Trojan defense. Despite the point disparity, it was only 8-0 at the intermission as the defenses controlled the game. Wlodarczyk's plunge, climaxing a 65-yard drive, accounted for the only score in the first 24 minutes.

However, Wlodarczyk triggered a second half uprising which blew open the tight battle of defenses. Rancho tallied once in the third and twice in the final period to trimph going away.

Until the explosion, two way tackle Dan Cader dumped Wlodarczyk twice and linebacker Al Bettman stood out in aborting Cougar goalward thrusts. Sam Solis also shined in the Trojan secondary.

However, the trio's efforts were not enough, because Wlodarczyk had ample time to pass. "You just can't afford to give a sharp shooting quarterback like Wlodarczyk that much time and expect to win," losign coach Howard Cadenhead said.

This great pass protection was particularly prevalent in the final two periods when Wlodarczyk engineered three touchdowns. The big field general also scrambled in waiting for his receivers to get open.

Such was in evidence when Wlodarczyk hit his tailback Bob Murray with a screen pass. The quick cutting runner took a delayed short toss behind the line and journeyed 30-yards into the end zone behind several crunching blocks.

Warriors Fall To Hawks

CINCINNATI (UPI) —Without newcomer Cazzie Russell, the Golden State Warriors appear to be just another team.

Russell, the club's leading scorer, sat out Friday night's game against the Atlanta Hawks with a jammed finger. He watched from the sidelines as the Warriors wilted in the final 18 minutes to fall before the Hawks 106-104.

Tonight the Warriors are in Cincinnati to play Bob Cousy's fast-breaking Royals. The Warriors defeated the Royals 116-112 in their first meeting at Oakland Oct. 30.

Clyde Lee missed a tying shot with three seconds to go against the Hawks. But don't blame everything on poor Clyde.

It just seems Golden State pays scant attention to the weak sisters in the NBA. Earlier in the season, the Warriors lost to the Buffalo Braves and managed to lose to the Hawks who had dropped 10 of their previous 13 games and were playing without flashy high-scoring Pete Maravich.

Golden State led 60-52 at the half and built that lead up to 13 points early in the third period. But the Hawks went on a tear, outscoring the Golden Staters 29-19 in the final period to pull it out.

Lou Hudson led the Hawks with 28 points. Rookie George Trapp added 25.

Nate Thurmond paced the Warriors with 25 points and Jeff Mullins bucketed 24. Joe Ellis swished eight baskets and Lee chipped in with 11 points.

Santa Rosa Whips Marin; Tars End Winless Season

By JIM SMITH

The rain came down in force last night, and so did Santa Rosa Junior College's football team. The College of Marin Tars suffered through both onslaughts to lose the game, 34-3, and finish the season with a "perfect" record — no wins, nine losses.

The victory by the host Bear Cubs clinched the co-championship of the Camino Norte Conference and assured them a place in the state playoffs. They will face Orange Coast College Nov. 27.

Marin outclassed the hard-rushing Bear Cubs in first downs, passing yardage and interceptions, but not on the scoreboard. The passing statistic is deceptive — the Tars threw because they had to, and completed only 16 of 37. Santa Rosa's defensive line was equally punishing against scrambling quarterback Bob Daniele and passing quarterback Kevin Peak.

Santa Rosa rushed for 278

WORLD CUP GOLF

Player, Henning In Front

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (UPI)—With his stomach ache gone and the South Africans holding a three-stroke lead over the favored Americans, Gary Player was speaking in superlatives.

"I'd say this was about as perfect a round as anybody can play—as perfect a round as I can play anyway," said Player as he and teammate Harold Henning logged a 10-under-par total of 278 at the end of the second round of the 19th World Cup golf tournament.

Player strung together five birdies for a 67 Friday to give him a total of 136, one stroke better than Jack Nicklaus in the race for the individual scoring trophy.

"I never missed one green on the approaches and I only missed one fairway," said the South African, while Nicklaus was complaining that five of his putts lipped the cup and popped out.

Nicklaus and his partner, Lee Trevino—who was named the PGA's Player Of The Year—both hit 69s. It was a big improvement for Trevino who had a 75 on the first round.

"If we had gotten some of those putts we should've had, we'd be doing all right," said Nicklaus, who shot a 68 the first day.

With the U. S. entry in second place with a seven-under-par total of 281, England's team of Tony Jacklin (75-67) and Peter Oosterhuis (69-75) was sharing third place with New Zealanders Bob Charles (71-69) and John Lister (72-74) at 286, two under par.

A field of 92 golfers from 46 countries are competiting in this so-called "olympics of golf."

Trevino, who said "my game seems to be coming around," added that he feels he tried to go back on the tour too soon after an appendics operation last August.

"I haven't played well since the British Open, except for the Sahara," said Trevino, who also holds the U. S. and Canadian Open titles.

Trevino added that he is "very excited" about the announcement Friday from PGA President Warren Orlick that he has been named Player Of The Year.

"It's a great honor," he said. "Every pro athlete has as a goal being named the best in his field."

Player, troubled with stomach cramps during the first round, said he felt better Friday.

"I got some medicine from a doctor and that stopped the cramps," said Player.

Henning, who has shot identical 71s, said he was having trouble hitting the fairways on the 7,096-yard PGA National Golf Clubs East Course.

"Gary hardly missed any fairways and I hardly hit any," he said.

The two South Africans have teamed together in seven World Cup tournaments, winning in 1965.

Drake Booters Face San Rafael

Drake and San Rafael high schools each won soccer games yesterday, thus clearing the decks for their title-deciding collision Monday at 3:30 p.m. at San Rafael.

Drake outlasted Marin Catholic, 3-2, while San Rafael came from behind twice to down Novato, 4-2. In other Marin County Athletic League action, Redwood whipped San Marin, 3-1, and Tamalpais upset Terra Linda, 2-1.

Drake now has an 11-1-1 record for 23 points. San Rafael is 10-1-2 for 22 points. The game Monday is a replay of the two teams' disputed 0-0 tie earlier this year, in which a San Rafael player was ejected and no substitute permitted, contrary to league rules.

The game will be replayed from the beginning, and San Rafael will be allowed to field a full team, including the banished player.

With a one-point lead in the standings, Drake needs only a tie to win the championship. (Each team gets one point for a tie. A victory is worth two to the winner, none to the loser.)

For a while, it looked like San Rafael might be ambushed by Novato. The underdog Hornets led 1-0 and 2-1 on goals by Rick Esmerian and Bob Nissan, but San Rafael came back to tie on Steve Bianchini's goal and won on a pair of tallies by high-scoring Adalpho Flores. Misak Pirinjian got the first Bulldog goal.

Drake jumped out to a 3-0 lead on Marin Catholic on two goals by Doug Harnsberger and one by Rick Larsen. The Wildcats came back to make it interesting on scoring shots by David Stacey and Pete Smith, but time ran out.

Redwood got goals from Shariar Sarabi, Kendall Edgemon and Tom Sleisenger to close with a fine 8-3-3 record, good for third place. Ken Neibur scored for San Marin.

Dave Claxton and Joe Roth did the scoring for Tamalpais, negating a goal by Terra Linda's Bill Aaker.

The standings, which are final for all teams but Drake and San Rafael:

	W	L	T	Pts.
Drake	11	1	1	23
San Rafael	10	1	2	22
Redwood	8	3	3	19
Terra Linda	5	6	3	11

Rockets Outshoot Bucks, Still Lose

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

There's an old baseball story about Stan Musial and a hot streak he had going against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

It seems that Musial, a Hall of Famer with the St. Louis Cardinals, was battering Dodger pitching at a record clip one season.

In one game, an unfortunate Brooklyn hurler actually managed to strike "The Man" out, but the ball rolled so far away from the catcher that Musial made it to second base.

"Even when you strike him out you're lucky to hold him to two bases," lamented one Dodger.

The Houston Rockets must have had similar feelings Friday night. They outshot the Milwaukee Bucks from the floor, 46-42, but came out second best in the free throw and rebounding contests as the champs built their record to 13-1 with a 111-102 victory.

Milwaukee—with a 10-of-12 performance by John Block leading the way—connected on 27 of 38 free throws. Houston managed only 10 of 14 at the line.

The Rockets were outrebounded by 20—58 to 38—as Kareem Jabbar spreadeagled the boards to snare 24.

Jabbar also led all scorers with 31 points. Block added 20. Stu Lantz paced Houston with 26 points as the Rockets swooned to their 14th defeat in 16 games.

Milwaukee lifted its lead to 4 1-2 games over idle Chicago in the Midwest Division of the Western Conference.

In other games Friday night, Los Angeles increased its lead in the Pacific Division with a 115-107 triumph over Seattle, Atlanta snapped a five-game losing streak with a 106-104 squeaker over the Golden State Warriors, Philadelphia crept within a game of Boston in the Atlantic Division as the 76ers routed Detroit, 115-101 while the Celtics were losing to Phoenix, 128-119. Also, Cleveland edged Portland, 106-104.

Los Angeles suffered from "shooter's malaise" in the second quarter, hitting on only three of 26 field goal attempts. Jerry West was symptomatic of the trouble as he missed 11 straight floor shots.

The ice-cold Lakers saw Seattle build a 65-50 lead with 9:48 left in the third quarter before they began to grow torrid.

West collected 13 points in the last seven minutes of the frame and Jim McMillian—the starting replacement for retired Elgin Baylor—added four quick hoops to give Los Angeles an 80-79 lead after three periods.

Seattle, paced by Spencer Haywood's 26 points, moved to a 99-95 lead with 5:27 left in the game, but Los Angeles cinched the game with a closing 20-8 spree.

West finished with 28 points and McMillian and Gail Goodrich each contributed 27.

San Rafael Wins Frosh Football Championship

San Rafael High School's freshman football team clinched the Marin County Athletic League championship by drubbing Marin Catholic 29-8 yesterday.

The victory gave the Bulldogs a 5-0 league mark (7-0 over-all) and preserved their fine defensive record. They have not allowed a touchdown on the ground all year and precious few through the air, outscoring their opponents 192-34.

Quarterback David Steele threw two 20-yard touchdown passes yesterday, to Mike Ellingson and Reggie Bryant. Mark Meredith scored on a 10-yard run and Rick Wright on a 15-yard jaunt. Steele kicked three extra points and passed for a two-point conversion. San Rafael scored in every period.

NBA Body Refuses To Change Playoffs

PHOENIX (UPI) —The National Basketball Association will retain the present playoff system to determine the league champion by advancing the top two teams in each of the four divisions to the post-season scramble.

The NBA's board of governors decided Friday not to alter the present system, amid speculation the board would consider an alternate proposal that would have sent the four division champions into the playoffs, along with the next four teams with the best records, regardless of division.

Commissioner Walter Kennedy said, however, that no alternative was presented and the move to retain the present system as approved by a substantial margin.

In other action on the final day of the winter meeting, the board approved a 32-game television schedule with the American Broadcasting Co., reduced the maximum number of exhibition games for each team by four and heard a report on the proposed merger of the NBA and the American Basketball Association.

Kennedy said the television schedule for this season was worked out with ABC sports executives and will begin with the Nov. 26 Baltimore at Atlanta encounter. From 10 to 12 of the games will be aired in prime time and all seven championship games will be televised nationally.

The board, at the request of the Players Association, approved a cut from 12 to eight in the maximum number of exhibition games scheduled by each team.

The report on the merger proposal was presented by the merger committee, headed by Abe Pollin of Baltimore. The U.S. Senate Antitrust Committee is to conduct hearings on the merger Monday, Tuesday and Thursday.

Kennedy and ABA Commissioner Jack Dolph will testify at the hearings. Kennedy said it was possible the bill proposing the merger would be reported out of committee by the first of the year. He said that if the merger won final approval before the 1972 season, he doubted it could be fully implemented until 1974-75.

Denise Ham Sets U.S. Swim Mark

San Rafael High School swimmer Denise Ham surpassed the national girls high school record by swimming the 100-yard individual medley in 1:04.5 Thursday at San Rafael's pool.

Her brilliant performance could not counteract the depth of opponent Marin Catholic, which won the meet, 72-41, to lift its Marin County Athletic League record to 6-0.

Denise broke the old 100 IM record by four tenths of a second. She also set new MCAL standards in the 50 butterfly (30.1) and the 100 butterfly (1:04.6). Jo Hislop of San Rafael broke her league record in the 100 freestyle (56.4).

Terra Linda defeated San Domenico, 71-42, with three double winners. Anne Engel took the 100 IM and 100 fly, Cyndi Salvisberg took the 50 fly and 200 free and Lisa Benedetti won the 100 free and 100 backstroke.

49ERS VS. SAINTS

Tough Job For Cornerbacks

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Cornerbacks Bruce Taylor of San Francisco and D'Artagnan Martin of New Orleans won't have to look far Sunday to find a speedy, pass-catching skeleton in their closet.

Martin, a rookie from Kentucky State, will at times be called upon to shadow Gene Washington who attracts passes and defenders like wood does termites. Or maybe Ted Kwalick might fly Martin's way.

Kwalick, with 30 catches, and Washington, with 29, are pressuring Chicago's Dick Gordon (33 snags) as the top receiver in the National Football League.

San Francisco is a 14-point favorite to hand the Saints their 14th loss on the road without a win since 1968 before an expected sellout of 45,000 at Candlestick Park. The 49ers won the first go-round this season, 38-20, at New Orleans.

Bruce Taylor is itching to get another crack at Dan Abramowicz, New Orleans' leading receiver who is averaging a NFL-high of 18.7 yards on 22 catches. Abramowicz caught a couple of touchdown passes against the 49ers in the first game.

"He does a lot of yakking about what he's going to do and I'd like to shut him off," said Taylor. "But it's a big challenge."

Rookie quarterback Archie Manning, who has been slowed by a sore thigh and elbow, and substitute Edd Hargett can expect an all-out pass rush from the 49ers who have the best pass defense in the NFL, allowing foes an average of 121 aerial yards.

A front four of Tommy Hart, Cedrick Hardman, Charlie Krueger and Earl Edwards have sacked quarterbacks 32 times for 250 lost yards, another NFL high. Against New Orleans earlier in the season, that group nailed Manning six times behind the line.

"I'm never satisfied unless I can get to the passer three times a game," said the 255-pound Hardman in his second pro season from North Texas State.

The 49ers will be without the full services of safety Mel Phillips who reinjured an ankle and wide receiver Dick Witcher who cut both hands on the turf last week at Minnesota.

RAIDERS-OILERS

Madden Expects A Tough Battle

OAKLAND (UPI) —The one thing Oakland Raiders coach John Madden probably doesn't want to talk about is point-spreads.

Last week his Raiders were picked by 17 points over the New Orleans Saints and wound up with a 21-21 tie. Before the game Madden talked of the "balance" in the National Football League and how hard it is to win these days.

NO CHANGE

"I haven't changed my view one bit since last week," he said earlier this week as he prepared the Raiders for Sunday's game with the Houston Oilers.

The Raiders go into the game with a 5-1-2 record and a half game lead on the Kansas City Chiefs in the AFC West while the Oilers are 1-6-1 in the AFC Central. Naturally, Oakland is favored to win Sunday's game, and by 14 points.

Defenses seem to have caught up with the offenses this year in the National Football League, so much so that hardly any team logically is a two touchdown or more favorite over any other.

"All you have to do is check all the upsets this year," said Madden "to see what I mean when I talk about balance."

CLOSE GAMES

Madden is right, especially in the case of the Oilers. Houston barely beat Cincinnati and tied with New Orleans yet lost to Kansas City, Washington, Pittsburgh and New England by a total of 28 points. The loss to Kansas City, one of the toughest teams in the NFL, was by only four points.

Thus, Madden takes his team into Sunday's tussle with a lot of respect for the Oilers and dismisses the 14 point favorite's role completely.

"We should beat Houston," Madden said, "but I know it won't be easy."

With the Raiders no longer the "big play" team they were in seasons gone by, victory has been tough to achieve this year. A big change in personnel, especially at wide receiver, has forced the Raiders to rely more on their defense and a running game. Any time you take away the "bomb," points are earned the hard way.

MORE PASSING

Last year the Raiders passed their way to 2,865 yards and ran for 1,964 and the touchdown ratio was 28-7 in favor of the pass. This year, in eight games Oakland has passed for 1,132 and run for 1,364, and the TDs are even at 12-12.

Two reasons are responsible for the change. The first is the solid, steady running of Marv Hubbard and Pete Banaszak, and the second is a shakeup in the wide receiving corps after Warren Wells went to jail.

Most coaches would rather run the ball than throw it if the running is doing the job, and Madden is no different.

"Ball control is the name of the game," said Madden. "Also, when you run you have less chance of losing the ball."

NEW SYSTEM

The Oilers have a new coach in Ed Hughes, and with him a new system, and a rookie quarterback in Dan Pastorini, the former Santa Clara ace.

"Pastorini is big and strong and he knows how to throw the ball," Madden said of the Houston quarterback.

While Pastorini likes to throw, he may have to stick to a ground attack inasmuch as Houston's running has improved of late. Robert Holmes, ex Kansas City, Dickie Post, ex San Diego, and Woody Campbell are the team's big running threats.

Rhodes Fires 709 Series; Curry 708

Bill Rhodes was one pin better than Bob Curry and both men were head and shoulders above other Marin County bowlers in scores recorded during the past week.

Rolling at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael, Rhodes recorded a 709 series and Curry tallied 708. Three other hefty series were bowled at the same lanes — Howard Chidester's 681 and a pair of 676 totals, by Chuck Jones and Tony Kozlowski.

Ed Henry was tops at Greenbrae Lanes with a 671, topping Will Bettencourt's 655. Bettencourt rolled a 278 game. Top men at Nave Lanes in Ignacio were Bruce Hubbell and Vern Nathe at 611.

The only woman to break 600 was Penny Taucher at Greenbrae with 611. She also had a 594. Leemoi Bekey of Country Club missed the magic 600 circle by one pin and Judy Griggs at Greenbrae missed by three. Top woman at Nave was Barb Garrison, 577.

Mike Blum, a junior at Greenbrae, recorded a 613.

The honor roll:

GREENBRAE LANES

Men — Ed Henry 671, Will Bettencourt 655, Stan Tiner 652, Fred Lindskog 637, Charlie Hinkle 623. Women — Penny Taucher 611, Judy Griggs 597, Penny Taucher 594, Bea Hoffman 593, Lu Sharp 593. Junior — Mike Blum 613.

mostly black —who otherwise would not qualify for admission.

Since both Curtis and Brumsey also received scholarships, said Archer, "they indeed are privileged young men."

However, when Rosenfeld, Sanders and Selvin sought to blanket all admission tests as being discriminatory, Archer begged off and asked for time to prepare a proper response.

"Obviously," he told Judge Wollenberg, "the question here is broader than the NCAA and has gone beyond the original charges and I will need time to prepare for a defense."

Judge Wollenberg agreed the question had gone beyond the injunction Curtis and Brumsey are seeking and that much study and arguments are needed to draw a conslusion.

If Judge Wollenberg grants the requested injunction, just what will it mean?

Immediately, it would lift California's probation and make the school's football team eligible for post-season play, such as the Rose Bowl.

The Golden Bears, whose games thus far this year have not counted in Pacific 8 Conference standings, have a 32 record against league rivals. They meet Oregon today and Stanford next Saturday. Victory in the two games would give them a 5-2 record and send them to the Rose Bowl, if they get a favorable court ruling by the end of the year.

In the broader context, a favorable ruling by Wollenberg could force a whole new system by which schools will have to guide themselves in granting admissions—to students in general and not only to prospective athletes.

It's a big question, Archer and the three attorneys for Curtis and Brumsey agreed, and it's one Wollenberg will have to decide.

TROJANS

fourth down snap and was snowed under at his own 20.

Four plays later, Donohoe found tailback Sean Casey with an 18-yard touchdown pass.

Trailing 20-0 in the third frame, coach Bob Franceschini's charges were forced to deviate from the ball control ploy. "We're really good on off-tackle and up-the-middle runs, but, when we're forced to throw, we don't do as well. When we hold our opponent, we can usually grind it out. But once you're behind . . ."

To his dismay, Franceschini could only watch as Terra Linda recorded its final touchdown on the heels of a 79-yard, 11-play march. During this prolonged trek, Donohoe teamed with Emerson on passes covering 27 and 11 yards.

A subsequent 16-yard bullet to his favorite target, flanker John Buckley, advanced the ball to the five. Sabel carried the mail over from that point on second down in notching his second score in the cold night.

"What can I say about Buckley?" Lucas asked rhetorically later, "he is like Tom Matte. He excells anywhere you put him. Just like Matte, he does a great job, but without great speed."

Lucas also praised lineback Steve Withers. Regarding his ace backer, Lucas asserted, "he and (Drake's Rick) Bozzio are the best in the league. Withers is the most underpublicized player around."

Lucas also threw kudos at two-way tackle Larry Madden and lineman Brian Jordan "for great blocking."

While Lucas was dishing out the compliments, so was a composed Franceschini.

"You just can't afford to fall behind like that against a team like Terra Linda." In reference to his own team's plight, the veteran Pirate mentor mused, "if we only had a back fast enough to turn those ends." But he didn't, so Franceschini returned to the business of picking up the pieces after a tough year. Split end, "Dan Trimble was really coming along well. He was doing a fine job, but what can I say? The same mistakes, fumbles, beat us again" — that coupled with Terra Linda's stout defense and passing attack.

The score by quarters:

TL—Sabel 9 run (Corbett kick); TL—Barry 49 interception return (Corbett kick); TL—Casey 18 pass from Donohoe (kick failed); TL—Sabel 5 run (Corbett kick).

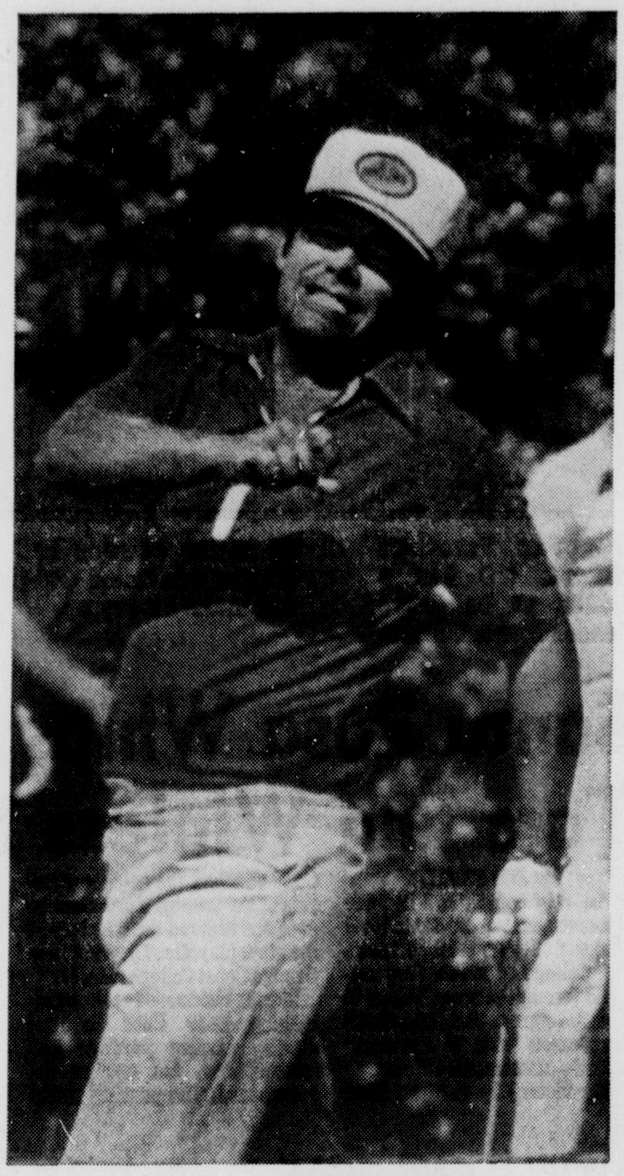
Drake Girls Upset Redwood In Swim Meet

Sparked by double winners Sue Secondo and Robin Bachrach, the Sir Francis Drake High School girls' swim team upset previously undefeated Redwood High, by a 59-54 count in San Anselmo yesterday.

Ann Redig and Kim Hughes grabbed two firsts apiece for the losers.

Marin Catholic High School, by virtue of Redwood's loss, has clinched a tie for the Girls' MCAL title.



SMILE FOR THE BIRDIE

Colorful professional golfer Lee Trevino reacted after sinking a birdie putt on the 11th hole during the World Cup Tournament second round Friday in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla. Despite the birdie antics, the American team of Trevino and Jack Nicklaus trailed South Africa's Gary Player and Harold Henning by three strokes. The leaders carded a 278.

Old Story Repeated: Barry Hot, Nets Not

By United Press International.

Rick Barry scored 38 points Friday night and the 6,602 at Island Gardens was the largest home crowd to witness a New York Nets' game on Long Island.

It would have been a happy occasion but for the efforts of Julius Erving and Charley Scott.

The pair combined for 71 points—including nine in overtime—to lead the Virginia Squires to a 127-123 victory over the Nets. The win raised the Squires' record to 11-4 —good enough for first place in the East Division of the American Basketball Association, one-half game ahead of idle Kentucky.

In the only other contest Friday night, Memphis edged Dallas, 107-103, as rookie Johnny Neumann came off the bench to deliver eight points in the final four minutes of the game.

Seals Take On Blues Tonight, Hawks Sunday

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Now that St. Louis is singing the blues over its lacklustre pro hockey team, the California Golden Seals would like to add another bar to the tune.

The teams meet for the first time this season tonight in this Mississippi River town where the Seals never fare too well.

Only this time, the Seals, at 5-7-3, own a better record than the Blues (3-10-1). California is deadlocked with Philadelphia in fourth place in the National Hockey League West while St. Louis is fighting with Los Angeles to escape the West basement.

The Seals follow with a clash against the Black Hawks in Chicago Sunday night.

California came out of the 5-2 loss to the Boston Bruins Thursday night with one casualty. Wing Norm Ferguson broke his nose in a second-period collision with Boston's Bob Stewart.

"The doctor straightened it out. It's okay. I can play," said Ferguson.

Marin Booters Face Holy Name

Four All-Star teams from the Marin Youth Soccer Association will play four teams from Holy Name Grammar School of San Francisco Sunday at noon at Ross Common.

"Holy Name has more advanced teams than we do and is much stronger," said MYSA head Bob Braghetta. "This will be a terrific learning process for us." Holy Name is a power in the Catholic Youth Organization.

One fourth-grade team, one fifth-grade team and two sixth-grade teams will compete for each side.

Sonoma State Hosts Humboldt

Sonoma State College faced a rugged Humboldt State College football team in Rohnert Park today at 1:30 p.m.

Sonoma, 2-6 in the Far Western Conference, had broken a four-game losing streak two weeks ago only to fall back into losing ways last week against California Lutheran, 40-6.

Retired Catcher Speaks

DETROIT (UPI) — Jim Price, who had the nickname "big guy" during his days as No. 2 catcher for the Detroit Tigers, hopes baseball will "listen to an average guy."

Price retired Friday rather than accept being sold to the Tigers' Toledo farm club and asked baseball owners to get together with the players' association to modify the reserve clause before the U.S. Supreme Court decide Curt Flood's suit.

"I'm not for throwing out the reserve clause," Price, 29, said in his farewell to his playing days. "Baseball cannot survive without the reserve clause."

But the former players' representative with Detroit called for some sort of modification in the controversial clause which binds a player to a team for life unless he is traded, released or sold. Price proposed a three-man review board.

"Each case is different," he said. "Why should one kid suffer? Times have changed.

"Kids watching this on TV or reading this might say 'who the heck does he think he is?" Price said. "Jim Price is a guy who was hurt by the reserve clause."

Price played behind Bill Freehan for five seasons after being obtained by the Tigers from the Pittsburgh Pirates' organization in 1966. He had been unable to crack the Pirates' roster despite having decent seasons with Pittsburgh's Columbus farm team.

"I'm not a big star," he said. "But maybe they'll listen to an average guy."

He retired with a lifetime .214 major league batting average, 18 home runs and 71 runs batted in for the 261 games he played. Detroit sold him to its Toledo affiliate at the end of the season.

Even if drafted by a major league club Nov. 29 during the winter meetings, which would cost a team $25,000, Price said he was through playing. It was learned he had cleared $20,000 waivers three times before being sold.

During his days as player representative, Price said he and Detroit general manager Jim Campbell never had any trouble sitting down and working out differences. He praised the Tigers' organization.

"We don't need the federal government stepping into baseball," he said. "We can settle our own problems."

Hanratty, Phipps Get New Chance

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Terry Hanratty and Mike Phipps, two collegiate stars of recent vintage, get another chance to see what they can do in the professional ranks Sunday, and both are being put under fire at a critical time by their respective clubs.

Hanratty, a former star quarterback at Notre Dame, will start for the Pittsburgh Steelers against the Miami Dolphins due to a sprained ankle suffered by regular quarterback Terry Bradshaw. Hanratty, who was the Steelers' No. 1 quarterback before Bradshaw arrived on the scene, has seen only limited action this year, but he did complete a 40-yard touchdown pass to Dave Smith last Sunday to help the Steelers defeat Cleveland 26-9.

That victory enabled the Steelers to tie the Browns for first place in the AFC's Central Division and Hanratty will have to deliver more of the same if Pittsburgh hopes to defeat the powerful Dolphins. Miami boasts a 6-1-1 record and leads the Baltimore Colts by a half game in the AFC's Eastern Division. The Dolphins have won five in a row and have averaged better than 30 points per game in their last four outings.

Hanratty has not been impressive in two full seasons in the National Football League. Entering this year he had completed only 40.1 per cent of his passes and had 21 passes intercepted while tossing for 13 touchdowns.

Phipps, who was a star quarterback at Purdue during the same years Hanratty was at Notre Dame, will be starting for the Browns against the Kansas City Chiefs Sunday as Coach Nick Skorich had decided to give regular quarterback Bill Nelsen a rest.

Phipps, who is in his second pro year, spent most of his rookie campaign learning his trade and saw only spot duty. He completed 48.3 per cent of his passes for just one touchdown and had five passes intercepted. Like Hanratty, he has seen only spot duty this year.

The Chiefs pose a difficult task for Phipps. They should be coming into this game hungry after being upset by the New York Jets last Sunday, and they are only a half game behind Oakland in the AFC's Western Division. Kansas City has one of the pro football's top defensive units and has been known to feed on inexperienced quarterbacks.

Pittsburgh and Cleveland are both 4-4 on the season, but neither is expected to improve on that mark this weekend. The Dolphins are a 10-point pick over the Steelers and the Chiefs rate a 13-point choice over the Browns.

In other Sunday games, Denver is three over Cincinnati, Washington four over Chicago, Detroit four over Los Angeles, Atlanta seven over the New York Giants, New England seven over Buffalo, Minnesota seven over Green Bay, Dallas 11 over Philadelphia, Baltimore 13 over the Jets, Oakland 14 over Houston and San Francisco 17 over New Orleans.

San Diego is a three-point pick over St. Louis in Monday night's nationally televised game.

WITH ACE

West opened the jack of clubs, and South won with the ace. Declarer led a low trump, and West played low in the hope that South was about to try a losing finesse of some kind.

Since South had the queen of spades, there was no trump finesse. Dummy's jack won, and declarer led the king of spades to force out the ace. West looked at the dummy (always a good idea), and saw that the contract could be defeated only if the defenders could take three heart tricks then and there.

PLAYS POORLY

Unfortunately, West didn't know how to do the job. He led the ace of hearts and then the jack, hoping his partner had both the king and ten. This didn't work because declarer covered the jack of hearts with dummy's queen. East took the king, but then South's ten stopped the slaughter.

ONE WAY

"No use leading the nine of hearts first," West commented. "He plays low from dummy."

This was correct, but West still hadn't hit on the right way. West should begin the hearts by leading the jack. If dummy plays low, the jack wins the first heart trick, and then the defenders easily take the ace and king.

WORLD CHAMP?

If declarer puts up dummy's queen, East wins the first heart with the king and then returns a heart through the ten. West then takes two more heart tricks with the ace and nine.

Now you're ready to declare yourself a world champion.

Tax Return In Humor Magazine

PARIS (UPI)—The French Post Office Department is trying to find out how the income tax return of Prime Minister Jacques Chaban-Delmas disappeared from the mails and turned up printed in a humor magazine.

A photocopy of a notice to the prime minister listing what he owed in taxes was published in the newspaper Canard Enchaine (Chained Duck), which often kids politicians.

The photocopy said the prime minister listed $14,480 as taxable income for 1970.

NO TASK FOR A RAKE

John Rucker, at the controls of a San Rafael public works loader, scoops up a hefty pile of streetside leaves for deposit in a truck and transport to a dump. The scene, on H Street, is an annual one as the city struggles to keep open catch basins during rains. Some minor flooding was reported in downtown streets earlier this week as a result of clogged basins.

'Anti-Swindle' Bill Vetoed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill which supporters contended would have been a major step toward ending consumer swindles by non-accredited colleges has been vetoed by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

The bill by Sen. Albert Rodda, D-Sacramento, would have established a council on private post secondary schools. The council would have been able to investigate abuses by the schools and to recommend needed legislation to regulate them.

Reagan, in his veto message Friday, said "This administration has consistently resisted adding new boards and commissions unless there is an overwhelming requirement of public protection or public participation."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

10 Days Without Water And The Chips Can Be Cashed In

A person can survive for more than two weeks without food but 10 days without water and he's had it. In a hot desert, the individual without liquids might die in less than 48 hours, especially if he perspires profusely. A loss of 10 per cent of body weight as water is disabling; 20 per cent is fatal. Water loss due to sweating can be enormous (up to three gallons) during a day or hard labor in extremely hot weather.

UNDER NORMAL conditions the amount of urine eliminated by the kidneys is equal to the liquid intake by mouth (output equals intake). The water lost in perspiration and in exhaled air is roughly equivalent to the water content in solid foods. The minimum daily liquid requirement for an adult is approximately one quart. Most of us would do better on two quarts. This would increase the water losses in urine — an excellent idea since certain waste products are excreted only by the kidneys. Water is needed as a solvent especially for the end-products of protein metabolism. Theoretically, the more proteins consumed, the more liquids we should take.

THE KIDNEYS also have the ability to maintain water balance. They eliminate the excess liquids, and if too little has been taken, they conserve as much as possible. But the consequences of drinking too little fluid is a concentrated urine which interferes with waste product excretion.

Thirst is a good index of water need. An excess intake of salt or salty foods will produce thirst to maintain the proper water and mineral balance in the body. The normal kidneys also need the additional water and mineral balance in the body. The normal kidneys also need the additional water to excrete the salt. But if the kidneys are malfunctioning, salt cannot be eliminated and water accumulates in the tissues.

MARGINAL ULCER

R. A. writes: My husband had most of his stomach removed five years ago and was told he would not develop any more ulcers. But recently he started hemorrhaging. At the hospital, his physician found he had a marginal ulcer. How could this happen after the acid-producing sac was removed?

REPLY

When most of the stomach is removed, the remaining portion is connected to the small intestine. Now and then a new ulcer develops where these two structures join (marginal). In some instances, a marginal ulcer develops because some of the acid-producing cells remain. In others, the incision is too taut and an ulcer forms where the two surfaces were sewed together.

BREAKING POINT

W. R. D. writes: Please tell me all you can about a nervous breakdown.

REPLY

Our space limitations make this impossible. However, the following are a few of the symptoms that develop. Some victims become hyperactive and irrational. Others refuse to eat and sleep poorly. Still others become depressed, cry easily, and blame themselves for not being able to do what others seem to accomplish with so little effort. As a rule, the individual escapes reality by shutting himself up in a world of his own. This is the breaking point and represents a useful safety valve. Otherwise, the man or woman might commit suicide.

Today's Health Hint — Young people should continue exercising after they leave college so that all muscle tissue including the heart, will be maintained in good tone.

Bomb-Laden Truck Flips

CORNING, Calif. (UPI)—A truck-trailer rig loaded with Vietnam-bound explosives ran off Interstate 5 and overturned Friday forcing closure of a section of the highway for five hours.

Highway patrolmen said the truck's load included land mines and canisters of jellied nitroglycerine. However, a Navy ordnance team would only say the cargo was "Class A military explosives."

The patrol reopened the highway after the Ordnance team determined there would be no danger to traffic and the explosives specialists unloaded the truck.

Nixon Rests

Larkspur Street Job Obliterates History

THE LONG-OVERDUE improvement of the intersection of Magnolia Avenue and Dougherty Drive in Larkspur may be a welcome change to commuters and those who drive to and from Redwood High School (as well as Disco shoppers), but it is somewhat painful to those of us who are local history buffs.

The intersection improvement project now nearing completion marks the final obliteration of what is probably the most historic site in all of Larkspur and Corte Madera.

Even before the white man first came, the aborigines had a settlement there. It existed over so many generations that it resulted in a sizeable Indian mound from whence grew mature oaks.

A tidal arm of Corte Madera Creek extended all the way to the mound.

After the Spanish established Corte Madera del Presidio early in the 19th century, a couple of lumber mills rose in the area. Where the arm of Corte Madera Creek ended at the old Indian mound, scows arrived to be loaded with lumber destined for construction activity in San Francisco.

In 1846 when John C. Fremont and his band of "explorers" visited Marin, they set up camp at this very spot.

Via Corte Madera Creek, they could move by water all the way to and from Sutter's Fort, 100 miles away.

WHAT WAS FREMONT doing in Marin?

According to one account, his Larkspur camp was the site of a meeting with Capt. John Sutter and Gen. Mariano Vallejo, to discuss what they might do to precipitate the take-over of California from the Mexicans by the U.S.A.

A 1935 Marin Journal account reported the descendant of a soldier in Fremont's Larkspur encampment was then living in Sausalito.

By 1850, the former Indian village site and former Fremont camp had become the landing for the logging camp, described as a "little settlement of several hundred." Several times a week, boats from San Francisco brought supplies and carried lumber away to the city.

In 1852, Larkspur got its first permanent house. It was built by convict labor from San Quentin. It was erected on this same site where Indians had maintained a village and Fremont his camp.

The Marin Journal's 1935 account described the exact site as "Southeast of George Nevin's nurseries and on the R.C. Doherty property."

The Nevin greenhouses are still there. Dolph Doherty is long in his grave and the construction project recently saw his home razed and the hill it stood on leveled.

Now it is all but a dim memory.

The historic nature of this spot deserves to be remembered. Perhaps the City of Larkspur and the Marin County Historical Society can find a way to perpetuate the memory in a suitable historical monument.

IT HAS BEEN a year since fire destroyed a famous North Coast landmark, the Russian Orthodox Chapel at Fort Ross.

Early this year, another fire partially destroyed the commandant's house which had served as a museum. Fort Ross was built originally in 1824. It had been preserved and restored as a state park. But arsonists seemed bent on destroying it.

The State Parks Commission wants to see the chapel replaced and the commandant's house repaired. A commitment for a federal grant of $26,500 has been received, providing a matching $26,500 can be raised before the end of this year.

Developers of the Sea Ranch, a real estate development 17 miles north along the coast above Fort Ross, agreed to rebuild the burned-off roof of the museum to the tune of about $11,000. This is acceptable in lieu of matching cash, leaving a balance of $15,500 to be raised before Jan. 1.

The State Division of Highways plans to reroute Highway 1 around the old stockade, instead of bisecting it. The parks department intends to provide greater protection against fires in the future.

Anyone moved to assist in all this can make a tax-deductible donation to the State Parks Foundation at 1948 Pacific Avenue, San Francisco.

If the Fort Ross fund-raising effort is successful, perhaps it will encourage the Marin Historical Society to solicit contributions for a suitable monument commemorating the historic events at Magnolia and Doherty in Larkspur.

TODAY'S WORLD

"Why can't you be the master of your fate here the way you are on the freeway?"

WORTH SAYING AGAIN

There is no evil in the atom; only in men's souls. — Adlai E. Stevenson.

After some 27 years in Washington, where the importance of being accepted is over-emphasized, I am convinced that the "inner ring" mentality, the inordinate desire for acceptance, can produce more spiritual corruption than any combination of things put together by the world, the flesh and the devil. — Ed Lahey.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Water Available From Cascade Creek

The unusually heavy no vote on the MMWD scheme for additional water would indicate that the voters feel that we should develop our local supply of water first.

In the Cascade area west of Fairfax there are at least two sites for dams which would control the waters of Cascade Creek, especially in flood times, as both dams would have an abundant water supply.

This control would eliminate the costly Corte Madera Flood Control Project.

Also if we are so short of water why is the MMWD syphoning off a large stream of water from the outlet of the Pine Mountain tunnel which is of sufficient volume to supply most of Fairfax?

Pal Balmes Could Interview Turnip

An interview with me by Pat Balmes appeared in the Oct. 18 Independent-Journal. Certainly I deeply appreciated the great things she said about me, but her general approach to the interview was most remarkable. Her questions were intelligent and perceptive; she was so charming I forgot I was being interviewed . . . thought I was just having coffee with a friend. This saved me from having a fit of nerves, and I was grateful for that, too.

Pat also checked some facts with me after the interview, something that rarely happens. Looking back, I really don't know how she got all the information, but it was correct —and painless. I had a good time.

Thank you for giving me so much space. I'm sure if Pat interviewed a — well, a turnip, she would have the facts, and make them interesting.

Park Service Should Lease More Land

It has come to my attention that a few years ago a national park was established to preserve the redwood trees in Humboldt County. The Sierra Club proposed that the National Park Service purchase some 97 acres, but instead the decided amount of land was about 50 acres, and the conservationists had to compromise. The result of this compromise is a forest of beautiful trees surrounded by a mass of stumps, erosion and overall ugliness. This is all caused by loggers who bulldoze through and clear out every living form of vegetation, leaving the soil loose and subject to landslides.

I assume that one mistake is enough and that the Park Service will use the Sierra Club's proposal this time, which is to acquire a two-year lease on the remaining 47 acres left out of the original purchase. This would include the slopes above Redwood Creek and Skunk Cabbage Creek. This action should be followed by permanent ownership of the land by the national parks.

Auto Is To Blame For Faire Turndown

I took no pleasure in shooting down the Lucas Valley site for the Renaissance Pleasure Faire at the Nov. 1 planning commission meeting.

The proposed site was literally run over by the automobile. Schemes to move parking somewhere else only offered to dump the auto mess in another backyard.

Discussion of widening Lucas Valley Road suggests the worst kind of conventional approach to the transportation problem. Construction of added auto facilities only invites more autos, more congestion, and in due course even more construction. Witness Highway 101 — in 1955, three lanes and now six lanes but still congested. So we're widening it to eight lanes. Ultimate projection of this approach indicate an eventual 18 or 20 lanes on 101.

Marin still has a chance to avoid wall-to-wall asphalt and concrete through the more imaginative approach to the balanced transportation program, which promises a variety of transit media for moving people around.

I suggest that the Pattersons apply their resourceful and creative minds to a radical transportation solution for the Lucas Valley Faire site: access by transit only, and automobiles prohibited . . .

The Modern Way To Riches Through Pantry And Garage

WASHINGTON — The story concerning Aristotle Onassis' 170-clause marriage contract with the former Jacqueline Kennedy, as described by Onassis' chief steward, and denied by Mrs. Onassis' secretary, points up the hazard that only the rich must deal with. And that is:

"How does one find a faithful butler who has no desire to write his memoirs?"

By accident, I happened to be in the office of a literary agent the other day, and his phone didn't stop ringing.

This is some of what I heard:

"HELLO! YES, JIM, I was going to call you this morning. No, I couldn't find any one else on the Onassis yacht who had anything to add to the chief steward's memoirs, but would you be interested in a book written by Elizabeth Taylor's former hair-dresser? It's got some very juicy chapters in it. He was present when Liz cut Richard Burton's ear lobe with her diamond ring. Right, I'll send you over the manuscript."

The agent hung up and the phone rang again. "Doubleday? George, thanks for returning my call. Remember the gardener I told you about who worked for Frank Sinatra? Yeh, the guy who was fired when they found him in a tree at midnight looking into Sinatra's bedroom. Well he's just written a book titled 'A Tree Grows at Midnight.' It's told from the viewpoint of an outsider looking in on a world people rarely get to see. We're asking $100,000 advance. Okay, but give me your answer in 24 hours."

AFTER THE AGENT hung up he turned to me. "I've got one of Rockefeller's ex-upstairs maids writing a book on what went on in Rockefeller's basement when Happy was in Albany. And I have a ghostwriter working with Henry Ford's ex-chauffeur on a book titled "What Christina Ford Did to Henry Ford When He Got a Better Idea.'"

"That should sell. You seem to have a market for the ex-employees of very rich people," I said.

"We have a saying in the publishing business: 'In every ex-butler there's a memoir screaming to get out.'"

The phone rang again.

"HELLO! AH YES! Mr. McMurtry at the Souffle Chef Employment Agency told me you would call. You worked for Ethel Kennedy as a cook? How long? Three weeks? That's marvelous. What have you got? She served red winve with fish at a dinner she gave for Andy Williams? How soon can you get over here? Good, and don't talk to anybody about this."

"I guess there's a lot of money in being a servant these days," I said.

"If you work for the right person at the right time, there is a fortune to be made. I just sold Putnam the biography of the man who used to clean Bebe Rebozo's swimming pool. It's titled 'Backwash at Key Biscayne.'"

"I'd buy that."

"I ALSO HAVE a deal cooking with one of ex-President Johnson's ranch hands who kept a diary of what happened during the opening of the Johnson Library in Austin."

"Juicy?"

"It's going to shake up a lot of librarians."

The phone rang again. "Hellow . . . yeh . . . yeh. You were? Can you prove it? . . . And you're willing to talk about it? . . . You bet I'm interested. I'll see you at five."

"Who was that?" I asked.

"It's the gal who used to work for Martha Mitchell's answering service."

Amchitka Test Mere Drop In Large, Expensive Bucket

WASHINGTON — The $200 million that the blast at Amchitka cost is a drop in a large bucket. With nuclear weapons already being capable of mass death and destruction on a scale almost impossible to take in, the pursuit of even more fantastic and wholesale killing devices goes on.

On both sides of the great divide, the pursuit seems to have no end, unless it be bankruptcy or total devastation. The demonstrators in Canada against Amchitka forget or ignore that the Soviet Union has had two big underground bangs — one equal to if not exceeding Amchitka, the other somewhat smaller.

IN A CLOSED SOCIETY these things are handled rather differently. Protesters, if any, are hustled off to prison or a lunatic asylum. The fact that no public announcement is made precludes any controversy even if it could occur in, say, the highest ranks of science and administration. Only through the remarkable American network of detection are the Russian bangs known.

They occurred on Novaya Zemlya, a barren island in the Barents Sea far above the Arctic Circle. Zemlya is, to be sure, at least 3,000 miles across the pole from Canada and the Aleutians. It was the fear of earthquake and tidal wave that touched off such widespread demonstrations against the American five-megaton blast.

The first Russian underground test on Zemlya occurred on Oct. 14, 1970. The initial finding from the detection network put it at "about six megatons," that is six million tons of TNT. This was revised to from three to six megatons. The second test was on Sept. 27 of this year, and it was rated from two to four megatons.

SIMILARLY IN RUSSIA the huge amounts spent for weapons development and weapons production are secret. It can hardly be doubted that they match American expenditures, which are staggering. The Atomic Energy Commission budget for the next fiscal year totals $2.294 billion. Of this, $1.357 is under the defense umbrella, largely weapons development and testing. The balance covers a variety of civilian uses from new-type power reactors to isotopes and other medical application of energy from the atom.

But AEC spending on weapons is small compared to the Pentagon budget. Research and development for weapons is billed at $7.9 billion. That is the province of John S. Foster Jr., a master persuader with Congress. He scares the daylights out of the Senate Armed Services Committee with private warnings of what the other side is up to and how our side is falling behind.

It is surely not unreasonable to ask where this race will end. The Cannikan blast (the test's code name) was to be the proof test, the final development test, of the warhead for the Spartan missile of the Safeguard antiballistic missile. The Russians on Zemlya, the conjecture was, were doing just the same thing.

But if Foster's wizards are working up new and more fantastic nuclear weapons, the Safeguard may already be as outmoded as the muzzle-loading rifle. Many scientific witnesses when the antiballistic controversy was at its height two years ago testified that it was then hopelessly out of date and wouldn't keep out incoming missile shots. Many of these witnesses had themselves been part of the inner circle of weapons developers.

SO WE COME to the strategic arms limitation talks, with the breath of hope out of Helsinki that agreement would come before the end of the year on limiting defensive missiles, with the Russians agreeing to approximately 100 around Moscow and conceding up to 250 to the United States to protect the intercontinental missile firing bases in the west. More recently doubts have been cast on this rather fragile hope. The word is no agreement until next year.

What this overlooks is the economic consequences of the race. In a totalitarian society the consumer can be squeezed down to a minimum existence. Take one item alone, the motor car. If the Russians produce this year 150,000 passenger cars, it will be a record. The United States is aiming for a 10-million-car year. All the rhetoric about a rich country being able to afford both guns and butter does not conceal the ravages of inflation and the pinch of poverty.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Okinawans Not All Eager For Japan's Rule

By PHIL NEWSOM

As the United States Senate and the Japanese Diet complete the formalities leading up to the return of Okinawa to Japan, happiness is not wholly unconfined among the Okinawans themselves.

Leftist Okinawan students protest the fact that of 134 military installations on Okinawa, the United States will retain 88 of them even after Okinawa and the other Ryukyu islands return to Japanese sovereignty.

Okinawa businessmen fear for the economic effects of gradual U.S. withdrawal.

And older Okinawans with memories going back to before World War II fear they will be treated as second class citizens by Japanese of the home islands as had happened to them under prior Japanese rule.

ACTUALLY, THIS APPEARS to be the case:

Most of the 50,000 or so American servicemen, plus their many dependents, will remain at least for the foreseeable future.

To reassure Okinawan businessmen and workers whose livelihood has depended upon the goods and services they supply to the American military community, the U.S. command has disclosed plans for a $60 million construction program which will be extended over the next seven years despite Okinawa's change of sovereignty.

It ranges from a $194,000 sentry dog training center to multi-million dollar projects covering repair and maintenance of runways and airfield facilities and construction of a new freight terminal.

Also to be constructed are an addition to the existing elementary school for children of military families, new warehouses, a new chapel and a theater.

THE JAPANESE government also is taking steps to ease for Okinawans the shock of transfer. Integration into the Japanese economic, legal and governmental system will be phased over several years.

Under Japanese rule, for instance, Okinawans actually will enjoy somewhat less autonomy than now.

On the other hand, a major sore point for Okinawans will be removed by a status of forces agreement which provides that Japanese courts will try Americans who commit crimes off post or off duty. Up to now American military courts have handled all such cases, often to the dissatisfaction of Okinawans.

U.S. nuclear weapons will be removed from the island but presumably could be returned in case of emergency.

The powerful Voice Of America relay station will be allowed to continue broadcasting.

TWELVE THOUSAND American soldiers, 66,000 Japanese soldiers and 150,000 Okinawan civilians were involved in the 85-day battle by which the Americans finally overwhelmed a suicidal last-ditch Japanese stand toward the end or World War II, and so it has strong emotional significance for both sides.

Formal date for the turn-over has not yet been set. A possible date is July 1, 1972, beginning of the U.S. fiscal year.

Tiny Micronesia's Great Big Fight

HONOLULU (UPI) — The mighty United States is engaged in a diplomatic battle with a sprawling group of tiny, remote Pacific islands with only 100,000 residents.

The two sides appear to be evenly matched in determination, if not in physical strength.

The islands are the U.S. Trust Territory of the Pacific, or Micronesia. The debate is over the future status of the territory, now administered by the United States under a United Nations trusteeship.

The more than 2,140 Micronesian islands stretch across an ocean area as large as the United States, but their land area totals only 687 square miles, little more than one-third the size of Long Island, N.Y. Containing such famous wartime battlefields as Saipan, Truk, Peleliu and Kwajalein, and the former nuclear test sites at Bikini and Eniwetok, they have been under U.S. jurisdiction since the end of World War II.

THE DEBATE, officially two years old, concerns just how free Micronesia should be. The United States has announced its willingness to give the Micronesians internal self-government under an arrangement similar to Puerto Rico's commonwealth status.

Most Micronesians are not satisfied with that. They want what they call "free association," which would grant them rights similar to a commonwealth with one important difference—at any time they could unilaterally sever their ties with the United States.

Behind The News

SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1971 31

Under either plan, the Micronesians would have internal autonomy, while the United States would handle their external affairs.

The apparent reason for the United States' refusal to allow "free association"—American officials don't like to discuss it —is the importance of the Micronesian islands to U.S. defense interests.

WITH THE REVERSION of Okinawa to Japan next year, that island and its formidable U.S. bases could become a weak link in the rim of U.S. allies and bases around the Communist nations of China, North Vietnam and North Korea. The Pentagon sees Guam and the Micronesian islands as the next line of defense if one day American troops must be withdrawn from their forward bases.

The Micronesians have said they are willing to have U.S. bases on their territory, but they object to giving the Americans carte blanche to take control over any land, at any time in the future.

And in spite of the clear economic and political consequences which would be raised for the tiny territory, the Micronesians say they would prefer to seek their independence through the United Nations, rather than submit to an unbreakable bond with the United States.

Last month, the third round of formal talks between the United States and Micronesia was completed at the remote village of Hana on the Hawaiian island of Maui. The secret talks, which lasted a week, were seen as an indication of some progress as agreement was reached on three key issues:

—The United States agreed to relinquish the right of eminent domain over Micronesian lands.

—The Micronesians will have the ultimate right to determine their future political status through a plebescite.

—The Micronesians will have full freedom to write their own laws and constitution without interference and influence.

IT WAS ALSO reported that for the first time, the United States made known the extent of its defense requirements in the island territory, spelling out specifically what land it may require for bases.

According to Sen. Edward Pangelinan of the Congress of Micronesia, quoted in a Micronesian News Service dispatch, the United States wants to retain the installations at Kwajalein and Eniwetok in the Marshall Islands, and wants to put installations on the island of Tinian in the Marianas chain, and at Malakal Harbor and on the island of Babeljhuap in the Palau Islands.

The substantial areas of agreement were a far cry from earlier talks when neither side seemed willing to compromise. But little or no progress was made on the key issue, whether the Micronesians should have the right to terminate any political agreement.

Simplified, it is the question, if someday the Micronesians want to throw out the Americans, will they have the legal right to do so?

"THE POINT of disagreement is so major that unless our position is met, free association won't be possible," said Sen. Lazarus Salii, chief Micronesian spokesman at the Hana talks.

But there appears to be room for compromise, such as separating military land leases from an over-all political settlement so they would not be affected by any changes. More talks are scheduled in the next few months.

In the meantime, a group of determined Micronesian political leaders is not giving an inch in the face of the power and influence of the United States.

The Swift Political Rise Of Dale Bumpers

By SYLVIA SPENCER

LITTLE ROCK (UPI)—Gov. Dale L. Bumpers has had a swift and surprising political climb since his election last year as a country lawyer whose only public office had been that of school board member.

Now he's being mentioned as a possible Democratic vice presidential candidate in 1972.

Bumpers sought the governorship with absolutely no political base and with little more than a warming smile, a way with a story and a look about him that women liked.

A poll in Arkansas taken before the heavy campaigning of 1970 showed Bumpers was known by less than 1 per cent of the electorate.

THE ONLY lawyer in Ozark mountain village of Charleston (population 1,353), Bumpers came on strong in the end, defeating former six-time Gov. Orval E. Faubus in the Democratic runoff and then swamping Republican Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller's bid for a third term.

With 61.7 per cent of the vote, he had won the governorship by the largest margin in the state's history. The Ripon Forum, the magazine of the liberal Republican Ripon Society, mentioned him as a possible vice presidential candidate for the Democrats in 1972.

Bumpers' first year in office has been just as impressive as his path to it. After a legislative session in which the governor succeeded in pushing through every major piece of legislation he wanted, there was talk he would challenge Sen. John L. McCellan for his seat next year instead of seeking a second two-year term as governor.

McCLELLAN IN the following months was campaigning harder than he had in recent memory. McClellan, 75, is seeking his sixth term in the Senate.

But now it appears Bumpers will not take on the Arkansas senior senator in what would have been a bitter and divisive struggle within the state Democratic party. Bumpers, despite the boyish charm and country-boy smile, is a shrewd and cautious politician of great skill.

Bumpers said in a recent interview that he was flattered by the national ogling but for the present, he intends to devote all his energy to improving Arkansas government and to boosting Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, A-Ark., as a presidential candidate in 1972.

Bumpers is viewed with wonder, envy and some downright distrust by the old courthouse gang who marvel at his accomplishments in the legislature at apparently no cost to his popularity.

HE HAS NOT, however, come through it all entirely unscathed. He has angered segregationists on the right and some liberals on the left, the former for adopting most of the moderate social philosophies of Winthrop Rockefeller and the latter for a less aggressive promotion of the black cause than Rockefeller.

Bumpers' national image, as well as his reputation with the local liberals, was tarnished some by his announcement that he supported Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter's antibusing resolution at the National Governors Conference in Puerto Rico. At a sometimes confusing and misleading news conference back in Little Rock, Bumpers went so far as to say he believed there could be separate but equal, segregated schools contrary to the 1954 U.S. Supreme Court ruling. However, what was not reported widely, was Bumpers' footnote, "But that has not been the case in the South."

At the end of the session, when a reporter told Bumpers his position if practiced could lead to re-segregation of the schools, the 43-year-old lawyer said, "Then disregard what I've said."

That elusiveness and inability to pin him down to one particular position has characterized the Bumpers administration. Many a person has left the governor's office sure of a firm commitment, only to discover he had none at all.

THE GOVERNOR'S biggest accomplishment so far has been the reorganization of state government, shifting more power to the executive branch and collecting some 60 of the state's 140 state agencies into 13 cabinet-like departments.

"The cabinet system is the greatest thing in the world," Bumpers said in the interview, "and reorganization didn't cost anything."

The Door To U.S. Statehood: Long Puerto Rico Wait

By MARGARET HYMAN

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI)— Twelve years after Hawaii was admitted to the union after knocking repeatedly on the door, the commonwealth of Puerto Rico still is stumbling at the threshold.

Its political leaders now are at loggerheads over the question of seeking permission for Puerto Ricans to vote for the U.S. president, a right they do not now have although they are U.S. citizens. The leaders also are divided on whether to seek statehood, full independence, or continue in the present status.

Most recently the issue that has divided the island's political parties is whether or when to ask for permission to vote for the U.S. president and vice president. Eventually, should such permission be sought, a constitutional amendment granting that right would have to be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the U.S. Congress and approved by three quarters of the 50 states.

BUT FIRST, the Puerto Ricans themselves must make up their minds what they want.

The issue has come to dominate the government scene here where continued extreme poverty, industrial development problems, major housing, education and health shortages, and a sagging tourist industry are among the issues competing for the political limelight.

The current "status crisis" was documented by the failure of the two legislative houses, controlled by different parties, to agree on a date when Puerto Ricans would vote on whether they would like to be able to vote in the U.S. presidential election.

Balked in his effort to move the island closer to what he calls "the mainstream of American political life," Gov. Luis A. Ferre said he would make the question an issue in the 1972 elections and would stage the referendum in 1973 "when our party controls both houses of the Legislature."

SENATE PRESIDENT Rafael Hernandez Colon, leader of the opposition Popular Democratic Party (PDP), retorted that the 1973 referendum date was what the Senate had asked for in the first place. Ferre's New Progressive Party (NPP) originally had wanted the referendum next February but the PDP said it would confuse issues to hold it in an election year.

If the island's five registered political parties are agreed on anything, it is that the present status must change. Ferre's party, which controls the executive branch and the House of Representatives, advocates full statehood. The PDP, which controls the Senate, and the People's Party of former Gov. Roberto Sanchez Vilella, want to "culminate" the commonwealth status by giving the island more autonomy. And the other two parties advocate complete independence.

While most observers agreed that a majority of Puerto Ricans favor having the presidential franchise, asking for it is not the same as getting it.

The island's non-voting representative in Congress, Jorge L. Cordova Diaz, admitted during the debates on the referendum that, even if "an overwhelming majority of Puerto Ricans favored it," the proposal would face an uphill battle in Congress. The reason is it is felt many of the states would look askance at an enfranchised sister state whose residents have been demanding more and more federal welfare programs, but don't pay a cent on federal tax.

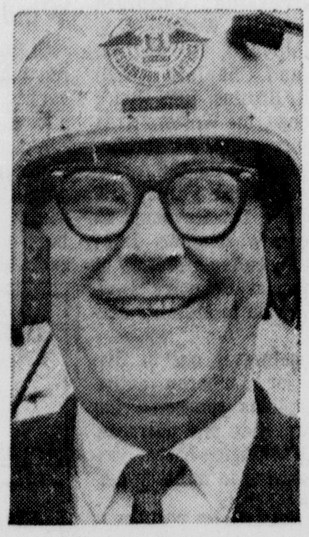
ON THE OTHER hand, one leading U.S. senator, Democrat Henry Jackson has said, the franchise should be extended to all U.S. citizens, including those who live in the territories of the U.S. Virgin Islands and Guam. He said he would introduce legislation to enfranchise all these appendages to the American union.

Jackson, who served on a special committee named by President Nixon and Governor Ferre to study the presidential vote question, says the vote is a right of U.S. citizens, no matter where they live.

During two weeks of legislative hearings into the referendum, only former Gov. Sanchez raised the very real question of what would happen to Puerto Rican political parties if the island voted for the U.S. president.

While Ferre's party is aligned with the mainland Republican party, and Cordova Diaz is a member of the Republican Caucus in Congress, there is no official affiliation. Nor has the opposition PDP ever been affiliated with the Democratic Party, although its affinities lie in that direction.

PUERTO RICO'S parties are "status" parties and always have been. They are even known colloquially as the "statehood," "independence" and "commonwealth" parties. The economic divisions characteristic of the U.S. parties have always been secondary.



ROBERTA VILELLA
Former governor

HENRY JACKSON
Senate Democrat

Whatever else has come out of the latest status impasse, it has not helped the PDP, which ruled under former Gov. Luis Munoz Marin from 1949 to 1964. The party, which a decade ago asked for the presidential vote for Puerto Rico, opposed even the naming of the committee to study the question in 1969, and blocked a legislative appropriation to support the study, forcing Ferre to take up a public subscription to finance a referendum study committee.

When the committee recommended the referendum in its report issued this year, the PDP said it would go along with the recommendation just so long as the ballot explained that a vote for the U.S. president was not a vote for statehood. The party also insisted that the referendum be held this year.

THE SUPERINTENDENT of elections said he couldn't be ready this year, so Ferre's party chose to date Feb. 20, 1972. Then the PDP-controlled Senate chose November 1973 — and there died the hopes of Puerto Ricans for the U.S. presidential vote for at least two more years.

A Dubcek Supporter's Long, Lonely Separation From Imprisoned Wife

By BJOERN F. HOEIJER

LUND, Sweden (UPI)—Jiri Porizka had high hopes that after three years of separation he and his wife, Anna, soon would be reunited with their six-year-old daughter, Pavlina.

Now Porizka, a 31-year-old supporter of the deposed Czechoslovak liberal Communist leader Alexander Dubcek, sits alone in his two room apartment in Lund.

His 25-year-old wife, six months pregnant, is in a prison in the Czechoslovakia they fled in August, 1968, when the Soviet invasion put an end to Dubcek's experiment in "socialism with a human face." His chances of seeing Anna and Pavlina soon are slim.

CZECHOSLOVAK police arrested Mrs. Porizka Sept. 26 in the town of Prostejos near Brno when she flew in with two Swedish pilots for an attempt to smuggle Pavlina out of the country in the Swedes' light plane. The Swedes, Karl-Goeran Wickenberg and Christer Larsson, both 27, also were arrested.

"I should never have let Anna go. Prison will mean death for both my wife and the child she bears," Porizka said.

"I have served time in a Czech prison. I know what they are like," he added.

When the Porizkas fled they decided not to carry Pavlina, then 3 on the risky journey over the border to Austria, from where they emigrated to Sweden. They left her behind in Prostejos with Porizka's parents.

EVER SINCE they have tried in vain to bring their daughter out. In May, 1970 they began a hunger strike in downtown Stockholm to call attention to their plight. They called it off June 4 after Czechoslovak officials said they could have their daughter if they applied for legal emigration from Czechoslovakia.

Only later did they learn processing the applications would take up to four years.

The two Swedish pilots at first tried to rescue Pavlina on their own. But Porizka's parents refused to trust the little girl to a pair of tourists pretending interest in buying a Czech sports plane.

So the second time Mrs. Porizka went along, posing as Wickenberg's wife and with a false passport.

THEY LANDED their rented sports plane at Brno without trouble and prepared to continue on to Prostejos to pick up Pavlina.

Reports vary as to what happened then. One newspaper said they were arrested at their hotel in Brno. Another said they were seized immediately after landing.

One thing was clear, Porizka said: his wife was arrested— and faced a possible 18-month prison sentence for leaving Czechoslovakia illegally in 1968.

The case aroused Swedish public opinion. The Swedish Red Cross asked the Czechoslovak Red Cross to help Mrs. Porizka and the two Swedes.

CZECHOSLOVAK newspapers have accused Swedish news media of launching an "anti-Czechoslovakia campaign."

The Swedish foreign ministry has said it made inquiries about the case in Prague but could do little to help Mrs. Porizka, a Czech citizen.

Her husband said he planned to appeal to the U.N. Refugee Commission in Geneva. He also said he would ask the Swedish government to grant his wife Swedish citizenship.

A 46-member Communist Chinese delegation to the United Nations arrived in New York this week and took up temporary residence at the Hotel Roosevelt. They rented the entire 14th floor.

The delegation is headed by Chiao Kuan-hua, a deputy foreign minister, who hailed Americans as "a great people."

The delegation visited the UN headquarters informally during the week and will make their formal entry into the General Assembly next week.

Cuban Premier Fidel Castro flew from Havana to Santiago, Chile in his first trip outside Cuba since he visited the Soviet Union in 1964. He arrived in a Soviet IL62 jetliner with a Russian crew.

GIVEN A tumultuous welcome in Santiago, he was greeted by Marxist President Salvador Allende and later said the trip and his welcome showed "the imperialists" had lost a round in the propaganda struggle. He is spending 10 days in Chile.

American jets carried out raids inside North Vietnam four consecutive days to bomb Communist antiaircraft missile sites. In Cambodia, Viet Cong attacked the airport, a radio transmitter and a bridge in a coordinate operation, killing 30 persons and destroying two helicopters and two aircraft.

In Washington, the Pay Board and the Price Commission issued rulings for Phase II of President Nixon's economic program. The Pay Board set a 5.5 per cent limit on most future wage raises and banned the collection of pay lost during the freeze. The Price Commission set a goal of limiting price increases to 2.5 per cent a year.

In the house an amendment to put prayer back in public schools was defeated.

The Senate Judiciary Committee spent most of the week in continued questioning of President Nixon's two nominess to the Supreme Court—Lewis Powell and William Rehnquist.

WITHOUT actually declaring himself in the race, President Nixon opened his reelection campaign by attending Republican fund-raising dinners in New York and Chicago, hich had closed-circuit television hookups with similar dinners in 18 other cities. The President praised his vice president, Spiro T. Agnew — but did not say Agnew would be his running mate in 1972.

On Amchitka Island in the Aleutians, last Saturday the United States set off its mightiest underground nuclear blast ever. A crater developed, as expected, at the site. An apparent crack at the bottom of a small lake drained it and dead sea animals began to turn up. Officials for the Atomic Energy Commission said they would run tests to see if a storm or the blast killed the animals.

INTRIGUING IDEA

Sell Art To Feed Poor

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. Religious Writer

England's Cardinal John Heenan shocked some of his fellow Catholic prelates by proposing at the recent Roman Synod of Bishops that the church sell its art treasures to feed the poor.

The proposal never came to a vote, but it remains an intriguing idea for Christians of all denominations to ponder.

The wealth of churches is nowhere near as great as some of the wildly-exaggerated figures that have gained currency. But Christian bodies — Protestant, Orthodox, and Anglican as well as Roman Catholic —unquestionably do have substantial sums tied up in art and architecture. In the United States alone, churches own buildings currently valued at about $100 billion.

Would the church be healthier, would its message be more convincing to the modern world, if it divested itself of this world's riches to the greatest degree practicable, and used the money to serve the needy?

Quite a lot of rank and file Christians of all denominations probably would agree with Cardinal Heenan that this would be a salutary move.

After all, the Founder of the church set an example of poverty. Jesus had no home, and rarely knew where his next meal was coming from. He just "went about doing good" as the Bible puts it, and refused to worry about such things as money.

If the church today were to emulate his example —to the extent practicable —it might live down the bad image it has acquired, among young people especially, as a fat-cat "establishment institution."

But there are arguments to be made on the other side, too.

Since more than 90 per cent of the wealth of churches is tied up in buildings that are not easily adapted to any other purpose, liquidating this investment is much easier to propose than to accomplish. There simply isn't much market for used churches.

Moreover, as Jesus himself pointed out, man does not live by bread alone. His spirit needs to be fed as well as his belly. And while there may be some people who do not need the uplifting effect of beauty to draw nigh to God, there undeniably are others whose ability to worship is enhanced by the soaring majesty of a Gothic arch, or the radiant splendor of a stained glass window, or the deep-voiced music of a great organ.

To love beauty is to love God, for beauty, however it is created and wherever it appears, is a sign of God, one of the hallmarks of His presence in the universe.

It is one thing to say that churches have a bad tendency to spend too much on bricks and mortar, and not enough on ministering to human need. Very frew churchmen would deny the essential truth of that allegation.

But does the solution lie in an attempt to liquidate the treasures of art and architecture already amassed —or in resolving to use future income in a more balanced and generous way?

Is austerity essential to realization of the church's true role as servant of mankind —or is there a legitimate basis for the claim, so glibly made on cornerstones, that a lovely church is erected "to the glory of God?"

These are good questions for any congregation to debate, openly and prayerfully. They deserve something better than simplistic answers.

Chaplins' Meeting Scheduled

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Sixty-five chaplains and national church executives working with military personnel will attend the Western Area Retreat for Lutheran Chaplains to be held Tuesday through Thursday, at St. Paulus Lutheran Church.

Lutheran chaplains stationed in the western states, including Alaska and Hawaii, aboard West Coast based ships, national church service executives from New York City, Minneapolis, Minn., and Washington, D.C., will participate in the three-day meeting.

The retreatmaster will be Rev. Paul Hansen, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church in Denver, Col., a youth and family life counselor. Hansen is the director of research for the Family Life Committee of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

He is also the coordinator and co-author of a six-volume family life study, has written numerous manuals and study guides on family life, and is a member of the Board of Directors of the National Council on Family Relations.

Speaking at five retreat sessions, Hansen, a former U.S. Army chaplain, will lead the chaplains in a discussion of "The Chaplain's Spiritual Equipment."

Other speakers will include Chaplain (Col) Victor H. Schroeder, 15th U.S. Air Force, March AFB, Riverside; Chaplain (CDR) Oliver H. Wentzel, U.S. Naval Shipyard, Bremerton, Wash.; and Chaplain (CDR) Geroge R. Brosius, USN (Ret.), of San Diego, the Western Area field service pastor for the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A.

Presiding at all retreat sessions will be Dr. Raymond C. Hohenstein, Washington, D.C., assistant executive secretary of The Lutheran Council's Division of Service to Military Personnel.

The meeting is one of five retreats for Lutheran active duty chaplains sponsored annually, stateside and overseas, by the Washington-based division of service to military personnel of LC-USA.

Singers will present portions of Palestrina's "Missa Brevis" tomorrow during the 9:15 a.m. service at St. Anselm's Parish in San Anselmo.

The group, under direction of Darrell Park, will also present an adoramus te and an Ave Marie.

Reform Judaism Seeking Return To Synagogue As Center Of Life

I-J Special Report

LOS ANGELES — Prepared to utilize radical experimentation, leaders of Reform Judaism have agreed to engage in a number of programs and field activities to return the synagogue as the center of Jewish communal life and a meaningful Jewish identity for its members.

At the concluding session of the 51st Biennial General Assembly in the Century Plaza Hotel the 3,000 delegates of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations mapped a two-year program to implement findings of a longrange study prior to their centennial convention in New York in 1973.

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, UAHC president, and Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, vice-president, will supervise the intensive assault upon synagogue shortcomings, coordinating national and regional resources of Reform Judaism's 98-year-old organization.

They will direct activites of a national task force that will go into the field of more than a million communicants to "listen to the grassroots" and sample meaningful modern applications of Reform Judaism and its related facilities among both clergy and layment, among distinguished theological and lay scholars.

Staff experts will traverse the entire field of UAHC structures — in major metropolitan centers as well as the hinterland — assessing, evaluating and lending professional assistance to immediate and urgent needs.

The two-year program, which Dr. Eisendrath has declared calls for "radical changes to achieve a resurgence" of Reform Judaism, will also serve as a transmission belt for successful approaches in some synagogues which have helped to pioneer significant changes to transform a large impersonal structure into an intimate, participatory community setting.

Such synagogues, it was indicated, have developed individual programs in various fields — adult education, worship, youth, social action, etc. — that activize major portions of the congregation in creative, involved activities on many levels.

Delegates acted on results of a UAHC longrange planning study by Prof. Leonard J. Fein, Brandeis University sociologist, and a social research firm, T. D. R. Associates of Boston, which concluded that the synagogue has become a peripheral "service station" providing members with counselling, religious education and, only minimally, fulfillment of spiritual needs.

Dr. Fein told delegates the survey demonstrates the need to end the "ideological disarray" among Reform Jews, declaring the wide ranging study shows that in overwhelming numbers they cannot define what Reform Judaism believes in relation to God, ritual, practice and tradition.

To create "a theology for the contemporary Jew," Dr. Eisendrath said, the UAHC Worship Department, in close cooperation with the Central Conference of American Rabbis will develop "not one but many kinds of worship."

Goals will be sought, not by only using distinguished scholars but by learning and probing the beliefs of rank and file members through community forums and study programs in areas everywhere.

Rabbi Daniel Davis, retired director of the New York Federation of Reform Synagogues, heads a newly created Committee on Smaller Congregations to help congregations that are "small in size, withering on the vine, isolated from central Jewish resources, deprived of rabbinic guidance and, worst of all, denuded of young people."

Rabbi Schindler said another major objective of Reform Judaism's synagogue problems will be to "break down the barriers between the pulpit and the pew, using techniques of group inter-action and communication."

An especially successful phase of the longrange research methodology will be continued and expanded — the holding of "games" or weekend workshops which help to provide a "sense of community" within the temple. These will be carefully supervised by Dr. Fein and other professionals.

The need to meet the crisis in interpersonal relationships within the synagogue was underscored by Dr. Eisendrath in his convention keynote sermon in which he called for creating of more "interest-centered" groups within the synagogue to "give value to individual identity within the values of a precious community identity."

"Our synagogues," he asserted, "must strive harder to counteract the paralysis of dehumanization and depersonalization which characterizes our age and corrodes much of the intimacy and comradeship that distinguished the historic house of prayer and assembly."

Choir Will Sing Twice At Seminary

Trouveres, a 16-voice mixed choral ensemble from California Baptist College in Riverside, will sing at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary Tuesday.

They will sing during the morning worship service to begin at 9:50 a.m. in John A. Broadus Chapel and will perform in concert in the Golden Gate Student Center, following the worship service. Speaker for the service will be Dr. C. Arthur Insko, professor of Christian ethics at the Seminary.

The Trouvere's appearance is part of a five-day tour which will include a performance in Sacramento at the 31st annual session of the Southern Baptist General Convention of California.

Under the direction of Dr. Curtis Cheek, head of the Cal Baptist music department, the select scholarship musicians provide a varied program of vocal chamber music, serious contemporary pieces, 16th and 17th century sacred music, and popular numbers.

Service For Skiers Once Again

Growing out of the successful responses last year, a "Skiers Only" worship service will be offered again by Lucas Valley Community Church on Thursday nights at 7:30 p.m.

The services feature folk singing, brief ski-related devotionals by the church's skiing pastor, Rev. Dale Nystrom, and hot spiced cider during the weekly 20 minute ski movies being provided by Modern Motion Pictures of San Francisco.

Starting with a celebration of the church's ski club, "The Great Life Ski Club," on Jan. 6 there will be orientation, the film, "The American Ski Technique," and light refreshments.

The services are non-sectarian, and again they are opened to the public of interested skiers. They will begin Jan. 6 and conclude March 23.

Classical Guitarist Will Lead Service

Larry Kriegbaum, a classical guitarist from Richmond, will lead the congregation of the First Baptist Church of Mill Valley in song at the 7 p.m. worship service tomorrow.

Rev. John A. MacDonald said the young singer-composer will perform some of his own works and also conduct a songfest. The service will be held in Spangler Hall of the church, 285 Miller Avenue.

HELINSKI (UPI) — Four thousand of the 6,000 gypsies living in Finland are able to speak the old gypsy language and for them the Finnish Bible Society is publishing the Gospel of John is that dialect.

'Jesus Cult' Arrives Ice Cream, Hot Dogs

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)— The "Jesus Cult" came to the town of Iraja with a thunderclap from the sky, an image of a bearded man on a cliff, ice cream cones and hot dogs.

Few hippies make it out to the working class Vista Alegre housing developing on the northern outskirts of Rio de Janeiro where the Cult of Jesus is for school girls, housewives, the poor and humble, the sick, the faithful, and just the curious.

For Iraja, Christ came Saturday, Oct. 16, with a loud crash of thunder that shook the neighborhood.

"I was at home Saturday and I heard the terrible roar myself," Mrs. Marili da Silva, 32, said as she lit candles at the base of the cliff.

On Sunday word spread throughout the neighborhood that the image of the face of Christ, roughly engraved on the wall of a sheer, 100-foot cliff behind the Vista Alegre superblock, could clearly be distinguished. It was about two feet square, and the face appeared draped in desert robes.

Word of the event spread quickly in the neighborhood.

A goat was slaughtered at the base of the cliff in homage.

Thousands of onlookers arrived daily to gaze at the shrine.

Discussions in the crowds frequently broke out as to whether a miracle had in fact taken place. The doubters were quickly drowned out by a chorus of the faithful.

Newspapers got word that a new spiritual cult was in the making in Iraja and spread the news. They carried headlines when water began to seep from the cliff. Worshippers and curiosity-seekers poured into Iraja from other neighborhoods in cabs, private cars and buses. With them came vendors of popcorn, soda pop and ice cream to nourish and refresh the impromptu pilgrims in the hot tropical sun. Boys sold candles at three for 10 cents.

Dozens of candles were burned at the foot of the cliff at all hours of the day and night. Cripples in wheelchairs made their way to the quarry in search of divine cure.

The Roman Catholic Church was quick to disapprove. It has been doing its best to fend off an upsurge of spiritism in Brazil during the past five years.

"We take Christ seriously, but we do not take apparitions on the wall seriously," commented Msgr. Ivo Lorsheiter, secretary general of the National Conference of Brazilian Bishops.

But the words had little effect on men like Esteven Pinto Ramos, 61, who spent an entire day at the base of the magic cliff, chipping off bits of stones and distributing them to pilgrims for tips in return.

What miracles can the enchanged rocks achieve, he was asked.

"Well, they say its good for the cough," he replied.

Missionaries Will Speak In Petaluma

Youthful missionaries will be guest speaker at the 7 p.m. service tomorrow at the Neighborhood Church of the Christian Missionary Alliance, Petaluma.

Speakers will include Donald Kiehl, who served in Gabon, Africa, and Lillian Ng, a student from Hong Kong who served in Taiwan. Both are members of the Alliance Youth Corps and are students at Simpson College, San Francisco. Both are committed to foreign missionary service after their schooling.

Carleton To Preach At Convention

Dr. W. A. Carleton, Distinguished Professor of Church History and former academic dean of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary will preach the annual sermon at the California Southern Baptist General Convention in Sacramento on Wednesday.

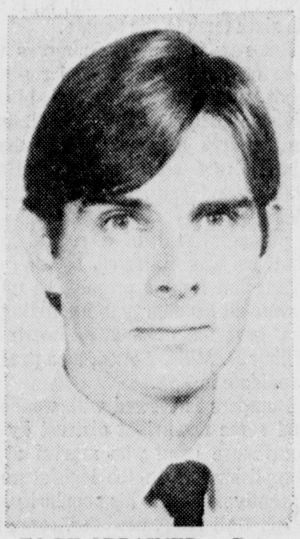
Carleton will speak in the morning session of the topic, "The Preacher's Task."

The convention will meet Tuesday through Thursday in Sacramento's Memorial Auditorium.

THANKSGIVING NOTICE DATE

Special Thanksgiving Day church notices are being sought for a special roundup to be carried in the Independent-Journal on Tuesday proceeding the holiday.

Deadline for the notices will be Friday to assure publication. They can be mailed to James E. Williams, church page editor.



TO BE ORDAINED — Peter Romanowsky will be ordained into the ministry of the New Covenant Evangelistic Association at 4 p.m. tomorrow in services at Castle Rock and Garden Way in Woodacre. A light buffet will follow.

Executives Will Speak At Seminary

The executive secretaries of the Southern Baptist Christian Life Commission and Foreign Mission Board will be guest lecturers at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, November 18-19, respectively.

Dr. Foy Valentine, of Nashville, Tenn. and head of the CLC will be speaker on the Golden Gate campus at 9:50 a.m., Thursday, in John A. Broadus Chapel.

Speaker at 9:50 a.m. on Friday, in the chapel, will be Dr. Baker J. Cauthen, of Richmond, Va., executive secretary of foreign missions for the 11.7-million member Southern Baptist Convention.

Jesuit College Has Winds Of Change

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Jesuit-run John Carroll College in University Heights here has made a lot of changes this year.

A rabbi was added to the theology faculty, a new policy permitted guests of the opposite sex to visit in dormitories and beer was served in a student-run rathskeller.

'Superstar' Will Be Given At Hub Church

A live and full-scale performance of the religious rock opera "Jesus Christ Superstar" will be presented in San Anselmo's First Presbyterian Church next Friday.

The 8 p.m. public performance is to be presented by a troupe from Old First Presbyterian Church in San Francisco, where it has been playing.

The event is the fourth in a continuing series of musical events this fall at the San Anselmo church on Kensington Road at Ross Avenue.

"Jesus Christ Superstar" is currently running on Broadway, and the record is near the top of best seller lists. It portrays in music the last week of Christ's ministry, following the week's events as written in the gospel of Matthew.

Scripture Reading

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Bible Society encourages wider reading of the Scriptures in three major ways: it publishes annually a daily Bible reading plan, promotes Worldwide Bible Reading Month, from Thanksgiving to Christmas, and endorses observance of National Bible Week, Nov. 21-28, and Bible Sunday, the Sunday before Thanksgiving.

Is Your Church in Need of Reformation?
Test it with these five theses:
T F The Bible is without error in everything it says.
T F God declared mankind not guilty because of Christ.
T F Jesus Christ is true God and true man.
T F Faith in Christ alone without works saves.
T F Religious fellowship requires full agreement in doctrine.
According to the Word of God, these statements are true. See John 10:35, Romans 5:18, Colossians 2:9, Ephesians 2:8, and Romans 16:17.
If any of the teachings of the Bible are not accepted as God's truth in your church and your protests prove useless, He advises you to find a church which holds Him and His Word pre-eminent.
We have such a church and invite you to share its blessings. Sunday service at present is at 7:30 p.m.

Buses May Need Fund Surpluses

Golden Gate Bridge District directors were told yesterday the agency may have to spend more than $3 million in surpluses to finance forth coming commute bus operations in the first fiscal year.

District staff, repeating predictions made Thursday to the district's transportation and finance-auditing committee, said operating expenses of the system, scheduled to go into operation early next year, would be roughly $5.8 million before depreciation if the proposed fares are adopted.

District staff has said right along that the agency, despite using more modern buses than Greyhound and offering better routes, would not be able to avoid operating the system in the red.

Directors yesterday said they hope to get an idea of just how deeply surpluses will be affected by the bus operation at a budget session on Nov. 23. At the same time, board members also will review a planned five-fare zone structure for the system.

The tentative bus budget figures were drawn up without any actual operating experience to supply data, the staff stressed.

The district's fleet of buses is expected to roll a total of 4,385,858 miles during its first fiscal year, at a cost of $1.32 per mile before depreciation.

One big question is that of driver's wages, equal to about 69.5 cents per mile, but still subject to negotiation. The labor issue, particularly involving protection of transferring Greyhound drivers' pension funds, has delayed start of the commute bus system past the Dec. 6 proposed date, probably to early January.

tem for the surplus funds are a five-year plan to spend $15.2 million on bridge repairs and improvements to approaches in the next five years, Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring pointed out to the board.

In addition, the Legislature has instructed the bridge district to draft rapid transit plans for presentation to Scaramento in 1973. Even if the district receives two-thirds of the planning costs from federal grants, the plans are expected to cost the district $800,000, Luehring warned.

The spending would drain the district's existing reserves to half a million dollars by the end of fiscal 1873-74, according to Robert W. Tough, deputy auditor-controller.

On the black-ink of the ledger, continuing bridge tolls at the present rates should generate surpluses of about $3 million a year.

"These figures would indicate we could fund the bus and ferry subsidies during this (five-year) period from bridge toll surpluses, but the trend would definitely indicate additional funds would be needed in succeeding years," Luehring and Tough explained.

They added that the bus and ferryboat depreciation probably could not be funded from the surplus.

Complicating the picture is the district's long-range commitement to provide rapid transit in the Golden Gate corridor. Assuming federal payment of two-thirds of the actual construction costs, the district may still need to lay out $88.5 million between fiscal 1973-4 and 1975-6.

Luehring and Tough predicted the district "must look to other sources in order to implement its longer-range program."

A Banner Year For The Bridge District

The Golden Gate Bridge District's 1970-71 annual report, released yesterday, concluded that the last fiscal year was a banner one for the agency.

The report noted that the last of the original construction bonds were paid off and that the district moved firmly into ferryboat and bus service.

Operating revenue reached a record $8,341,881 for the fiscal year, but expenses of $5,822,231 also set a record. As a result, according to the report, the surplus toll revenuc was $4,020,690, compared to $4,629,436 the preceding year.

Lowell Edington, president of the district board, said the fiscal year resulted in major strides toward reducing the glut of 92,000 vehicles that cross the span on an average day.

The Golden Gate Bridge board Also:

PRIVATE FIRM — By an 11-2 vote, confirmed the Marin Transit District agreement to subsidize the Marin Transit Systems Inc. after its routes are taken over by bridge district buses. The private, Marin City-based firm will be paid the difference between its fares and $15,000 a month for one year. It will test proposals for transporting senior citizens, welfare and health care recipients, and visitors within Point Reyes National Seashore.

LIGHTS — Heard Dist. Engr. Robert E. Shields report that a dozen new lighting fixtures are being tested on the span, preparatory to relighting the entire span.

FENCE — Referred to the building and operations committee plans for security fencing of the enlarged employee parking lot southwest of the span.

PAINTING — Heard from Shields that the long-range span repainting program approved two years ago is on schedule, and that the bridge has been found to be in good condition after rust removal.

TRAFFIC — Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring reported October traffic was 3.6 per cent above October 1970, with a total of 2,872,080 vehicles crossing the bridge. Ferryboat patronage was up 40 per cent over a year ago, with 64,014 passengers in October.

TOW TRUCKS — Referred to the district's attorney a California Highway Patrol request that bridge district tow trucks extend their service as far north as the Spencer Avenue overcrossing in Sausalito.

VISIT — Heard Luehring report that four congressmen and the administrator of the federal Urban Mass Transportation Commission will tour the bridge, ferry facilities and Larkspur ferry site beginning at 8:30 a.m. Nov. 20.

Novato Seeks A City Seal

The Novato City Council will consider adopting a city seal at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Novato Community House.

The council now has four designs to chose from. They were submitted by Barbara Murphy, Betty Beebe, Carl Rangel and Eileen Morrison.

The city adopted a seal several years ago which split the center of Mount Burdell. The left side showed Indian teepees and a tomahawk, and the city hall and gavel on the right.

The seal was so unpopular that it was never used. The council recently passed an ordinance abolishing that seal and will now try to select one that is more acceptable to the public.

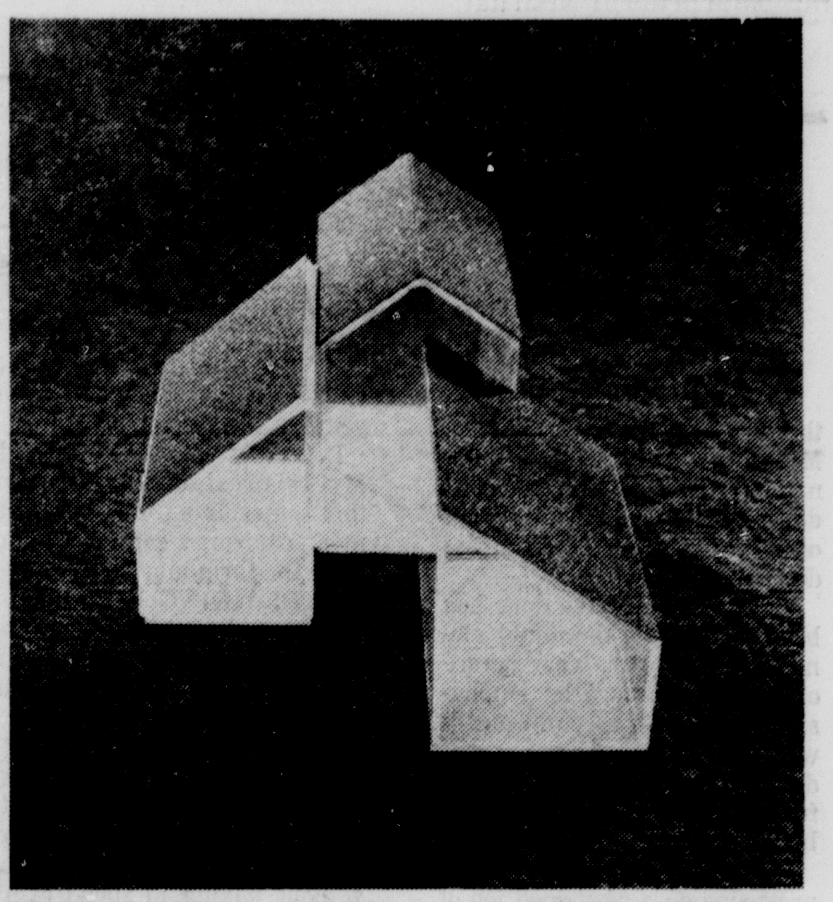
THE INTERIOR of Eugene Wedell's house features space sharing of the entry, living, dining and kitchen areas, yet each space is expressed in a different way and functions individually, according to Wedell.



ONE OF the arrangements possible under the room module system developed by the Wedell Group of Sausalito is displayed in the above model. The system utilized an exposed timber and plywood sandwich construction technique, and the room units can be arranged in a variety of conventional or unconventional ways.

Old, New In Homes

Sausalito architect Eugene A. Wedell, a member of the Wedell Group which has developed innovative low cost housing, lives in an half-century-old home.

His home "started from a World War I era sea captain's house and the new addition takes its gambrel roof shape and exterior materials from the original house," Wedell reported.

"The interiors are clad in one by four cedar siding and the floors are walnut veneer," he said.

THE HOUSE "built largely by myself and my friends over a period of yeard" is on a 30-foot lot in Sausalito and although small, looks spacious inside, Wedell reported.

"The overall aspect of the house is one of respect for the old house with a new life."

While maintaining respect for the old, Wedell also is concentrating on new, low cost housing.

BETWEEN 1968 and 1970 the Wedell Group developed a room module system using exposed timber and plywood sandwich construction techniques and has constructed two prototypes in Sausalito.

The room units consist of a two-story, gable-shaped trussed living unit and story and one-half and shed-shaped bedroom and bath units that can be arranged in a variety of ways.

THE COLLEGE OF MARIN COMMUNITY BAND, shown rehearsing for a concert last summer, was one of the musical organizations developed during Myers' term as chairman of the music department. Since he has stepped down from the chairman's post, Myers has more time to devote to conducting the band and the community orchestra.

helped me to be a better conductor."

Myers is also proud of the opportunities offered in the department's adult education program. Junior college is not really the correct term for the College of Marin, he points out. It is one of the California Community Colleges. "That is the legal, official name," he declares, "and we do serve the community.

"AMONG our day credit students are a great number of returning adults who come back to broaden their education, including housewives. We have had women who have got music degrees, he says.

He added, "Four of our major performing ensembles — orchestra, band, community chorus and opera workshop — are scheduled at night and include a great many adults. This provides the opportunity for those with musical skills to continue playing their instruments and singing for the rest of their lives. The College of Marin is one of the few places where they can do this."

The former music chairman's views on music as a way of earning a living and on future trends in music were of exceptional interest.

Convinced of the practicality of a musical career, Myers hastened to point out under what circumstances he believes in this practicality.

College Of Marin Teacher Totally Dedicated To Music

"In one sense employment opportunities for people with musical training are better than ever," he notes, "but in another sense they are not. If a student is prepared to consider going into fields other than performance, opportunities are better than they have ever been."

HE SAYS the field of teaching — from music in public elementary and high schools through college — will be good, though it is temporarily bad at the present time.

The door is open, he says, in the retail and general merchandising end of music and anything related to the recording industry.

"The guy running the corner music store and the publishing company like Carl Fischer prefer someone with a musical background," he observed.

"I heard the owner of a chain of recording studios say that if he had the choice between hiring a fine technician who knew nothing about music and a person with a good musical background, he would choose the latter."

He continued, "Other fields open are those of music librarians — there is a certified music librarian now in the big city libraries that have music departments — and the whole new area of music therapy.

"PERFORMANCE is another matter," he admits. "In popular music dance bands are practically a thing of the past — even famous musicians can't work —" he says, "and in classical music, performing in such groups as symphony orchestras is restricted. There are about 1,200 symphony orchestras in the country — most are community orchestras — but we probably have no more major professional orchestras than we had 20 or 30 years ago. And the average salary is miserably low."

Why the College of Marin music department, with its progressive principles and up-to-date equipment does not have facilities for teaching and producing electronic music was another point of interest.

"Electronic music means investment in tools, staff and space that are very expensive," Myers says. "We have thought about it, but the current tight money situation precludes moving in that direction."

HE IS not convinced, furthermore, that electronic music is the music of the future.

"My personal opinion is — and I may be wrong —" he conceded, "is that this is not the music of the future, but I do think it has made a contribution and will continue to make a contribution in new sounds and the manipulative possibilities of tape and other electronic techniques that can be incorporated into music.

"I do think there is a main stream in music, though I'm not sure we can say where we are going. I don't think electronic music is going to supplant the type of music we have been accustomed to. People want to produce music themselves."

SO DEDICATED to music is John Myers that he finds little time for much of anything else. When he can find the time, he says he enjoys fishing, camping, hiking, and, of course, adding to his record collection.

He has one son, Russell, who is in his second year at the College of Marin.

"He has studied and played the flute for a number of years and plays rather well for fun," his father said. "No, I've never pushed him in music," he smiled.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The real reason "All in the Family" has been so popular on CBS is not its so-called daring in having as "hero" a bigot who tosses off ethnic labels with biased abandon. Basically, it is simply a slightly updated version —and you could find some bigotry in the program I'm about to mention if you reflect — of Jackie Gleason's "The Honeymooners." And, if you care to go back even farther, "The Bickersons" program of radio days. As the French so aptly put it —the more things change, the more they are the same. The old formula of loudmouthed, dominant male winding up with egg on his face more often than not.

Universal Pictures will produe a two-hour television version of "The Royal Family" with the legendary Lynn Fontanne heading an all-star cast, not yet defined. The show will be filmed in Hollywood early next year, but the outlet and time have not been determined. This, of course, is the notable 1927 Broadway play by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber about a famous theatrical dynasty that, obviously, had the Barrymore clan as prototype.

The Jenny Sullivan seen Oct. 28 on ABC's "Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law" episode is the daughter of veteran star Barry Sullivan, who also happened to be on that particular show.

Joe Namath, a pro football quarterback of note when he isn't sidelined with injuries, as at present, gets another television shot with a syndicated series. Stadium Productions has put him back on the air with a weekly half-hour involving interviews with guests from the sports world and other milieus.

Suicide Prevention Center "Line"

Call Four, Five, Four Four, Five, Two Four

By FRANK FARRARA

For some persons the line between life and death can be a telephone line ... a line to someone who will listen to their calls for help.

In Marin the line is open to an office in San Anselmo where the Marin Suicide Prevention Center stands ready to listen.

"Our first job is to save lives," said Richard H. Reubin, recently appointed executive director of the center.

"We often just talk and motivate them to get through the night," he said. "The phones are ringing, we're getting 30 to 40 calls a week and they're increasing."

THE SUICIDE rate in Marin, an affluent county considered by many one of the choice living areas in the state, is the second highest in California, Reubin reported.

Reubin believes that most suicidal individuals, even those who jump off the Golden Gate Bridge, aren't 100 per cent committed to killing themselves. Two who survived the bridge leap said later they were "relieved they didn't die," he said.

There is always some force toward life and "we work on the part on the side of life," he said. "We try to find the things that make a person want to go on living. Each individual has something that gives meaning to his life."

A slogan adorning the wall of the office is "Your Friend For Life," but Reubin indicated there might be a better one in the offing.

ONE OF the problems is that persons contemplating suicide give clues, but their family, friends and acquaintances aren't aware of them.

"Every suicide could be prevented if people were aware of the prodromal clues," he said.

Often people who have made suicide plans "go into a state of euphoria," he said. "Suicide isn't usually an impulse behavior. It is thought out and communicated to others, but people don't pick up the clues."

At the same time, Ruebin advised, the belief that a person who talks about suicide won't commit suicide is a myth. "That's false," he said. "He's a high risk and should be taken seriously."

POTENTIAL signs are marked changes in behavior, depression, apathy, suffering a significant loss of some kind, loss of appetite or sleep, giving away personal possessions, drawing a will or writing a suicide note.

There are comments such as "I just won't be able to make it through the day," he said.

There are persons who say, "I'm going to kill myself," but the people around them often would rather not recognize their serious intent and prefer to remain uninvolved, Reubin commented.

There is a reluctance to discuss suicide if a person is worried or "not talking," he said.

One of the center's goals is an educational program to remove the taboo suicide has . . . people are afraid to mention it," Reubin said. "Moreover they often fear triggering suicidal acts through the power of suggestion."

IT WOULD help to discuss the problem directly with the person contemplating suicide, Reubin advised.

The center operates 24 hours a day, every day of the year, with a part-time, paid secretary and "some 60 volunteers," each on duty at least four hours a week.

The center refers callers to other agencies such as the Community Mental Health Center, Marin Open House, etc., depending upon the type of problem and the best way to help the caller, Reubin said.

"Right now we don't have the staff, volunteers or time to see people in person," he said.

"However, that is one of our long range goals.

REUBIN emphasized that all matters that come through the center are "completely confidential" and people shouldn't "worry that stories will be spread."

Police are notified only when it is a "matter of life and death" and emergency action is required," he said.

There are two incoming lines to the center and the number is four, five, four — four, five, two, four.

Anyone concerned about a friend can call and "we'll give counseling and advise, and probably suggest that we be permitted to call "the friend," he said.

REUBIN stressed that volunteers from the community are vital to the center, commenting: "It's the volunteers who make the center work."

Being a volunteer at the center "isn't the kind of work everyone can do, and we have extensive training and screening of our volunteers," he said. A 12-week training course is provided through the College of Marin and individuals who wish to volunteer can call the center any week day from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

As executive director, Reubin's job including screening, training, evaluating and supervising the volunteers in their task of counseling persons who are contemplating suicide.

"Part of a volunteer's job is to clarify what can be done" when they receive a call, Reubin explained. "They have to know how to evaluate and make appropriate referrals."

Reubin said among the long range goals of the center is to have a clinic with a professional staff and "expert public speakers" to inform the public.

ANOTHER goal is to undertake a study on suicide. Marin has a high rate of suicide, alcoholism and divorce, Reubin reported. A study could delve into whether the "same phenomen accounts for these."

He said the Golden Gate Bridge has become "world famous for suicide" and the publicity keeps it going as a place for suicide, a self-perpetuating chain of events and he wondered what the effect would be if the bridge "weren't romanticized."

Reubin, who once worked for the University of Hawaii's "Life Line," said the suicide rate was high in Hawaii, a place that is similarly "romanticized."

Marin County is one of the last counties in the Bay Area to have a suicide prevention center. "Previous calls from Marin were going to the San Francisco center," Reubin explained.

THE NEWLY organized center needs community financial support, a requirement for obtaining other funding such as grants, Reubin said.

"A sustaining membership is $100 and an associate membership, $10, but we'll accept any amount," he said. Donations may be sent to the Marin Suicide Prevention Center, P. O. Box 792, San Anselmo, 94960.

The center has had a series of fund raising efforts including a bake sale and white elephant sale and has received a "one-time" grant from the Marin County Board of Supervisors to keep it operating until it receives funding from another agency.

The San Rafael Junior Women's Club plans to place 200 contribution containers marked "HELP — Marin Suicide Prevention" in Terra Linda and San Rafael this month in the latest fund raising effort.

Reubin also said he would welcome professionals in the mental health field who want to volunteer to train lay volunteers.

The establishment of a center has been culmination of an effort that began in September, 1970, when the articles of incorporation were signed.

At that time, Deputy County Coroner Keith C. Craig, chairman of the ad joc committee to set up the suicide prevention program said the group hoped to open a center by Jan. 1, 1971.

WHEN IT was approved as a nonprofit corporation, the center elected a six-man board of trustees, headed by Kathleen Lyons of San Rafael as president, and a call was sent out for volunteers to man a center.

The next major step was to find quarters for the center, since an office at Northgate Industrial Park, donated by Harry Heifetz, was inadequate as a permanent location.

In January, the center gained permission from the Marin County Board of Supervisors to rent a portion of the county health clinic building at Fourth Street and Grand Avenue, San Rafael.

There were appeals for donations to purchase emergency telephones and recording equipment, and about two dozen volunteers had completed their training, but operations were delayed by lack of money.

CRAIG said the organization had written to about eight different foundations throughout the United States, but requests were being turned down, and the main source of revenue was individual membership contributions of small sums.

The center obtained office space in San Anselmo and volunteers began manning telephones on July 1.

Then the Marin Mental Health Advisory Committee and the Marin Health Facilities Planning Council endorsed the center's operation; endorsements required by the Marin County Board of Supervisors before it would act on a request for $6,000 to finance the center until Jan. 1, 1971 and permit hiring a professional director.

Craig said the center would not become eligible for financial support from the United Bay Area Crusade until it had a paid director.

IN AUGUST the supervisors voted to grant the center $6,000 and in September the center board hired Ruebin, 25, who had worked for the Los Angeles Suicide Prevention Center, the University of California at Los Angeles's "Help Line" and the University of Hawaii's "Life Line."

The training of volunteers paid off in September when a typist in the county auditor-controller's office, who had received special training for the center, saved the life of a woman.

They typist, Penny Curtis received a call at work from a woman complaining about a bill from the county for emergency medical services she had received at Marin General Hospital.

FROM THE tone of the conversation and the desperation in the caller's voice, Mrs. Curtis recognized the potential of suicide.

Acting on a hunch, Mrs. Curtis called the woman back and discovered she had taken at least 15 pnehobarbital pills. A police officer was sent to the apartment while Mrs. Curtis kept the woman talking.

When the police arrived, the woman was still talking and police put her in touch with doctors.

Mrs. Curtis said later she would not have recognized the danger without the training she had received, and even if she had, she would not have known what to do.

A FUND RAISING effort in the offing, Mrs. James Myers, vice president of the San Rafael Junior Womens Club, is ready with containers which will be placed in Terra Linda and San Rafael this month as a club project to aid the center.

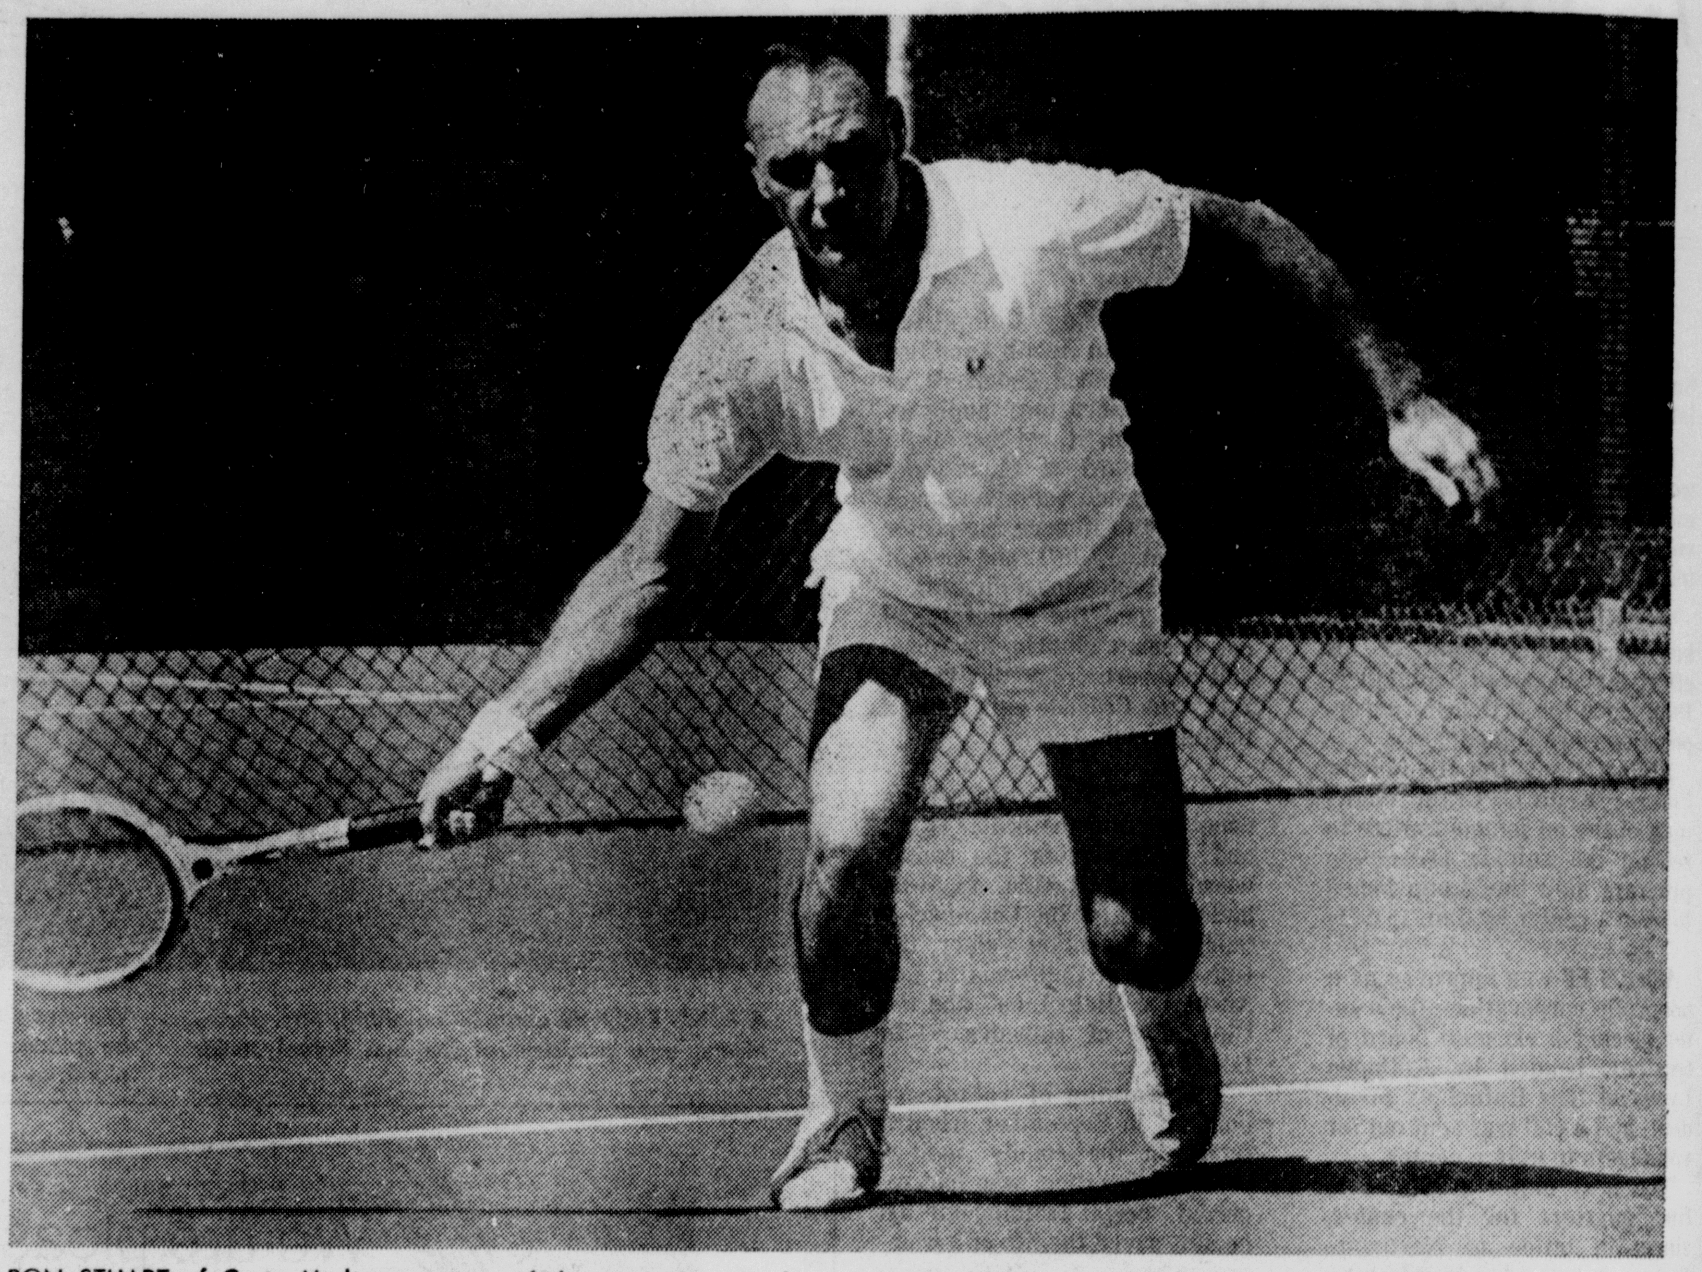
Tennis Perfectly Suited To Marin

Tourneys, Players Abound



RON STUART of Corte Madera was one of the competitors in the 12th annual National Men's 35 tennis championships at the Mill Valley Tennis Club last year. Marin, with its fine weather and host of tennis enthusiasts, has been the scene of many tournaments for players of all ages.

By DAVID EINSTEIN

Suppose you tried to invent a sport perfectly suited to Marin County.

It would have to be something that could compete successfully for the leisure time of our affluent society. Also, it should take advantage of our magnificent weather. And finally, it ought to appeal to all kinds of people, including women and children.

That's quite an order, but don't bother racking your brain to find such a pastime. The game of tennis fills the bill.

TODAY thousands of Marin residents play the game. They play for exercise, for competition, and just for the fun of it in private clubs, at schools and on public courts.

On the competitive level, Marin has become one of the hottest spots in Northern California, with four top tournaments hosted by local clubs. And we have given our share of talent to the tennis world, including Mike Machette of Belvedere, a member of the U.S. Junior David Cup team, and Sharon Walsh of San Rafael, U.S. Junior Women's champion and the junior champion at the 1970 All-England Championships at Wimbledon, England.

ALL THIS becomes more impressive when you consider that tennis did not really catch on in Marin until about a decade ago.

Marin was first introduced to tennis officially in 1901, with establishment of the Lagunitas Country Club in Ross. It stood alone until 1929, when the Mill Valley Tennis Club was formed.

Yet Marin still was a long way from being ready for tennis, and vice versa. It wasn't until after World War II that the game really began to snowball into national popularity. And it wasn't until the late '50s that Marin was settled down enough to embrace it.

ONCE it started, however, growth of the sport in Marin was phenomenal. In 1957 the Belvedere Tennis Club opened its doors. In 1960 it was the San Rafael Racquet Club. A year later, the Tiburon Peninsula Club opened.

The Tiburon Club, with a membership of 500 families, and the racquet club, with 400, are the largest tennis plants in the country, each boasting 10 courts. Lagunitas, which has intentionally kept its membership down, has six courts, while Mill Valley, with 260 families, and Belvedere, with 150, have five courts apiece.

Other private clubs in Marin include the San Marin Recreation Club in Novato and the Harbor Point Beach Club in Mill Valley. Two other clubs, one in Fairfax and one in Scott Valley, are in the planning stage.

HOW DO Marin's private clubs compare with facilities elsewhere? According to Barry MacKay, they measure up quite well. MacKay, a former Davis Cupper and touring professional who now lives in Ross, said, "I think there are a half-dozen real good club layouts in Marin. The clubs themselves are way above average in relation to clubs all over the country."

Unfortunately, the success of the private clubs has not been carried over into the public sphere, where municipal courts have not been built at a rate commensurate with the need for them. In fact, almost all new courts in the last decade have been built at schools, and not by cities.

BUT A court, and the schools have helped make tennis available to more people. The newest large-scale facility, the complex at College of Marin, has gone far to alleviate the problem.

Another solution, which has been proposed by several leading exponents of tennis in Marin, is to have a public tennis center and program financed by the county. Hal Wagner, a teaching pro at the racquet club for the last decade and at Mill Valley for 14 years before that, said, "In several years we'll have a crop of junior players who will make it necessary for the county to take a long look at the possibility of building a public tennis center. There could be some big tennis complex on county property."

MACKAY spoke of a similar need. "I think there could be a better and more organized junior program for the public — on public courts and maybe at the clubs, too," he said.

Meanwhile, schools and park and recreation departments throughout the county, organize and run public summer tennis programs each year. Coincidentally, the San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department has just finished its courts at Boyd Park.

One school, Redwood High of Larkspur, has become a legendary tennis power in Northern California. Last year the Giants, under coach Glen Dickey, reached a milestone unparalleled in Marin sports history when they won their 50th straight Marin County Athletic League match.

MOST of Redwood's talent comes from the Tiburon Peninsula, which is producing junior champions at a fantastic rate. This year 18 junior players from Marin have Northern California Tennis Association rankings, and 12 of them are from Tiburon.

Junior tennis long has been a focal point for the sport nationally, and Marin long has been a center for junior competition. Two prestigious tournaments are held here each year — the nine-year-old Belvedere Junior Tourney, and the 13-year-old Mill Valley Junior Hardcourts.

ON THE adult level, the Mill Valley club has for 13 years hosted the National Men's 35 Hardcourt Championships, and the Tiburon Peninsula Club is the annual site of the Bay Counties Tournament.

All four tournaments draw entries from throughout Northern California, and in the case of the Mill Valley nationals, competitors have come as far away as the East Coast.

Television Writer Moves To Wyoming

By DON KEOWN

NEW LEASE ON LIFE by Otis Carney; Random House, 177 pages, $5.95.

More and more Americans are finding the pollution, noise, congestion and especially the intense competitive pressures of urban life intolerable and are fleeing to rural refuges in Australia, Canada, Europe and the few remaining quiet and isolated pockets in their own land.

Otis Carney, successful author and television script writer, is one such.

He, his wife, and their three sons eventually abandoned a glamorous Benedict Canyon home and Hollywood existence for the rough but satisfying life of the rancher in remote Wyoming where the snows pile high, the neighbors are distant, the bear still prowls and the elk and moose feed in comparative peace.

Carney, who has not abandoned the writing profession even as he has taken up ranching, has written the story of the decision and the adjustment in his "New Lease on Life" which the dustjacket described as "The story of a city family who quit the rat race and moved to a ranch in Wyoming."

It was no abrupt transformation, but instead on that was undertaken in steps.

Despite Carney's professional achievements and the cultural and social advantages that attended their Southern California residence, the Carneys felt themselves vaguely dissatisfied and unfulfilled. Smog and traffic were moving up their canyon. The social whirl seemed more often a treadmill. Commercialism too often overruled creativity in Carney's work.

Their "revolt" began in a minor way with the leasing for a couple of summers of a small Utah "spread" where the urban family began to acquire a feel for the land.

Then came the acquisition of a 2,600-acre ranch in Wyoming — nearest town, Cora, population 3. For a time the Carneys divided their year between Hollywood and Wyoming. Then finally, after much soul-searching, the home in Benedict Canyon was sold—to actress Ann-Margret and husband Roger Smith. The Carneys have traded conveniences and ego satisfactions for a rougher way of life they find more satisfying. They have experienced no regret.

"Sense of worth, this was the poison in the blood," Carney reflects on his earlier life. "Indeed, maybe it's the sickness of our times, at least in many who were raised and trained as I. We've been nurtured on the creed that only by doing can we have fulfillment. Money, power, fame, get to the top: then you have self-esteem because you're the mirror of what society adulates. But fail to make it . . . just 'be' not 'do' . . . just be committing daily to your life in all its aspects, accepting your failures and your blessings and continuing to commit, regardless of outcome: this is not the coin of success."

And of his new life: "You have come finally to see how small and insignificant you truly are; and the moment you can admit and breathe that, that is the moment you begin a new life. Stop caring about doing what the world says. Be. Commit to being with all the ardor of your soul."

In himself, says Carney, the change has brought about "a kind of what-the-hell-fling-the-chips creative freedom you've never known before."

The frustrations which our culture imposes upon its creative artists was exemplified for Carney by the distortions and compromises imposed upon "The Monroes" television series that he created hopefully as the realization of a long cherished dream to present the Old West on TV with authenticity and honesty. By the time the networks had finished with it, the series was a far cry from what Carney had proposed. But, ironically, with all those alterations, it was still one of the best presentations of life on the American frontier yet achieved on television. And, predictably, it failed commercially.

In moving to Wyoming, Carney has not escaped all such frustrations. To a degree, civilization's stupidities have followed him. There was, for instance, a plan to make of the Green River — running through his ranch — a "wild river" that would not only have required the condemnation of embankment from the owners, but also the construction of a paved road, and, of all things, an amusement park where Carney now grazes heifers.

The ranchers had the support of the state of Wyoming in defeating that proposal, only then to discover that their ally, the state, had a plan of its own — for a dam that would flood their lands. That idiocy is still the subject of combat and controversy.

Still, the Carneys have found in Wyoming a peace and a sense of identity that was unavailable to them in their previous homes in California and the East. Unfortunately, such a move is not the solution for most of the other millions suffering a similar malaise. A mass migration would simply transfer the urbanization and its attendant problems to those now uncongested regions. Besides, it is not the upper class and upper middle class that suffers most from the injuries of city and suburban congestion and compression. The poor, the working people and the lower middle class endure far greater hardships and disillusionment. And they lack the means or opportunity simply to shift their bases and thus escape the oppressions of society. For them the only solution, the only hope, is an improvement in the urban environment where they must continue their now too-drab day-to-day existence.

It is fun to read about how one family like the Carneys thwarted these pressures. But the remote mountains of Wyoming are not where the real battles must be fought. And not where the war for a better America must be won.

AN ACCOUNT of man's attempts to explore, conquer and conserve the Sierra Nevada, one of America's mightiest mountain ranges, is told in "Sierra Album" by Paul C. Johnson, (Doubleday, $12.95), which is illustrated with more than 270 photographs and maps including the above photograph of pioneers courtesy of Yosemite Park and Curry Company.

BRAZ WALKER of Waco, Tex., is paralyzed from the neck down and dependent upon a mechanical breathing apparatus for the oxygen that keeps him alive.

Nevertheless, he has made himself one of the world's leading authorities on catfishes, and is the senior contributing editor to The Aquarium magazine. He does his own typing — with a tongue-operated electric typewriter, and does his own photography as well, using his mouth to trip the camera's shutter.

"Tropical Fish Identifier," just published by Sterling Publishing Co., provides an example of his skills. Color photos disclose the beauty and the distinctive markings of 120 species. And Walker's manuscript provides all the other necessary information, not only for making identifications, but for going into the hobby of raising and breeding these exotic creatures as well.

At $3.50, it is a book that the hobbyist, beginner or expert, will regard as essential to his avocation.

And it is an impressive demonstration of one man's refusal to bow to a seemingly insurmountable handicap.

ONE OF THE more unusual books to appear in the do-it-yourself field of late is Leigh P. Beadle's "Brew It Yourself," $1.95 paperback, $4.95 hardcover, and published by Noonday Press, 19 Union Square West, New York.

It is offered as "A Complete Guide to the Brewing of Beer, Ale, Mead and Wine," with instruction on how to concoct your own beverages without any great investment in equipment or ingredients, and without too much fuss. There are a number of beer recipes. And along with the products covered in the subtitle there is also a chapter on making of old-fashioned cider.

But it should be duly noted that the production of distilled spirits and beer outside a registered distillery or brewery is a violation of federal law. And that while home winemaking is permitted, it requires prior registration with the Internal Revenue Service.

"THE SUN Is Going Down for All of Us" is a small book, a compilation made by Jane Wilkie of the indictments that can properly be leveled against man of the crimes he has committed against his environment. Several color photographs show the beauty before the soiling. The book has been published by Random House on its Stanyan lists and is priced at $3. It really adds nothing new to what the aware already know — it just serves to underline the gravity of the situation.

While Tom Pace's "Fisherman's Luck" does no great damage to publisher Harper & Row's well-earned reputation for superior suspense fiction, it certainly contributes nothing to that luster.

Ben Garden, chief of police in a Florida coastal tourist and fishing city, must deal with a clique-ridden city council and with his own troubled fiancee even as he attempts to solve the slaying of a mate on one of the fishing boats. Politics and power behind the scenes are aligned against him. And at one point Garden finds himself without a job, but he still presses on, his morale now boosted by a pretty girl named Angela.

Writer John D. MacDonald praises this book as "a gem," and Pace's earlier novels have been lauded for their toughness and fast-action. But "Fisherman's Luck" seems to us totally devoid of subtlety, so that the characters emerge as one-dimensional, the plot as simplistic and the dialogue as predictable and recitative.

El Salvador Artisans Fashion Miniatures

The day begins in Ilobasco, a village of 4,000 inhabitants in El Salvador, Central America. The men take their cartloads of wood, coffee, and pottery to their destinations.

The women set up their stalls in the market place to sell their wares — pineapples, eggs, chickens, trays, pottery, yards of material.

A woman stops by a stone wall to rest with a load of wood and her pet dog.

A LITTLE boy rushes to market with two pigs on leashes and his schoolbooks tucked under his arm. A woman fetches water from a well. And a senora is making guacamole while her young son busily grinds corn for tortillas.

Another typical day in a typical Salvadorean town — except for one incredible thing. In Ilobasco all these commonplace everyday events are being captured in tiny, thumbnail-sized clay miniatures — the famous Ilobasco "munecas."

Every day, minute little scenes of amazing detail and expression are hand-molded and preserved by the town artisans.

FAMOUS throughout Central America, these intriguing miniatures are products of a very unique assembly line.

One home, or several, acts as the assembly plant, with each family member doing his special part. The division of labor is decided by ability. The grandfather may design and mold the scene. One child may cut the tiny bits of cloth that form the clothing for the mini-figures. Another child may carry the figres to the ovens for firing. An older child may paint the figures.

At one time practically the entire town was engaged in making these miniatures, passing the skill from generation to generation, but now only a handful of these "miniature" experts remain.

THESE experts in the art of miniature, each using his own secret method of manufacture, mix the clay with the resinous extract of the escobillo plant to improve the clay's malleability, and then proceed to manipulate the clay into the desired tiny shapes.

Each miniature is carefully worked, then baked either in earth ovens, on stones on the ground, or in home kilns. After being fired, the figurines are painted with one or more coats of gold and colored enamel. Sometimes the tiny figures are adorned with bits of cloth typical of that woven and worn by the local Indians.

A specialty of Ilobasco's is the Nativity Scene. Long before the Christmas season, the miniaturists busy themselves with the production of creches the size of walnut shells. Included in these manger scenes are the Holy Family and the animals and fowl actually mentioned in the Bible.

These creches are quite popular in the market places of El Salvaedor's principal cities, where the Ilobascans set up booths every Christmas.

THE VILLAGERS of Ilobasco prefer to represent the Nativity Scene in their own unique way. The "Nacimiento," or scene of the Nativity, may occupy the entire floor of an Ilobascan home.

Mountains, rivers, trails, villages, farms with cattle, groups of Indians, and the manger scene itself are all represented — in miniature, naturally. Sometimes, even mechanical contraptions are included, such as a train (of course there were trains in Biblical times!) or a waterfall or stream. Sometimes refreshments are served to those visiting the different "nacimientos."

In addition to their miniature work, Ilobascans are renowned throughout the Latin countries for their other, more conventional, ceramics, such as lamps, ashtrays, statuettes, bowls, toys, and the like.

THE ILOBASCAN ability with clay seems to be inherent. Indeed, for centuries Ilobasco has been a potter's paradise, most likely because of the superb clay deposits found scattered throughout the surrounding countryside.

Pre-Columbian figurines are constantly being turned up in the fields around Ilobasco. And of course "copies" of these figures abound, produced by the descendants of the original craftsmen, using the same techniques and materials.

But the piece de resistance of Ilobasco remains those tiny representations of everyday life in this delightful town, one hour's drive from San Salvador.

The drive to Ilobasco from San Salvador (about 55 miles) is a pleasant one through coffee fields and grazing land — a pastoral and lush green scene. Once in Ilobasco one strolls down the various streets crisscrossing the town and surveys the Ilobasco ware set up in front of the houses.

ALL MANNER of ceramics, including the miniature figures, are found easily in any part of town. Ilobasco was originally located about four miles from its present location, but about 100 years ago the statue of San Miguel, Ilobasco's patron saint, mysteriously disappeared on two occasions, then was found — both times in the same locations. The town saw this as a sign and moved to the spot en masse. It's been there ever since.

For further information on Ilobasco or El Salvador, contact the El Salvador Tourist Information Office, 703 Market Street, Suite 1502, San Francisco, California 94103.

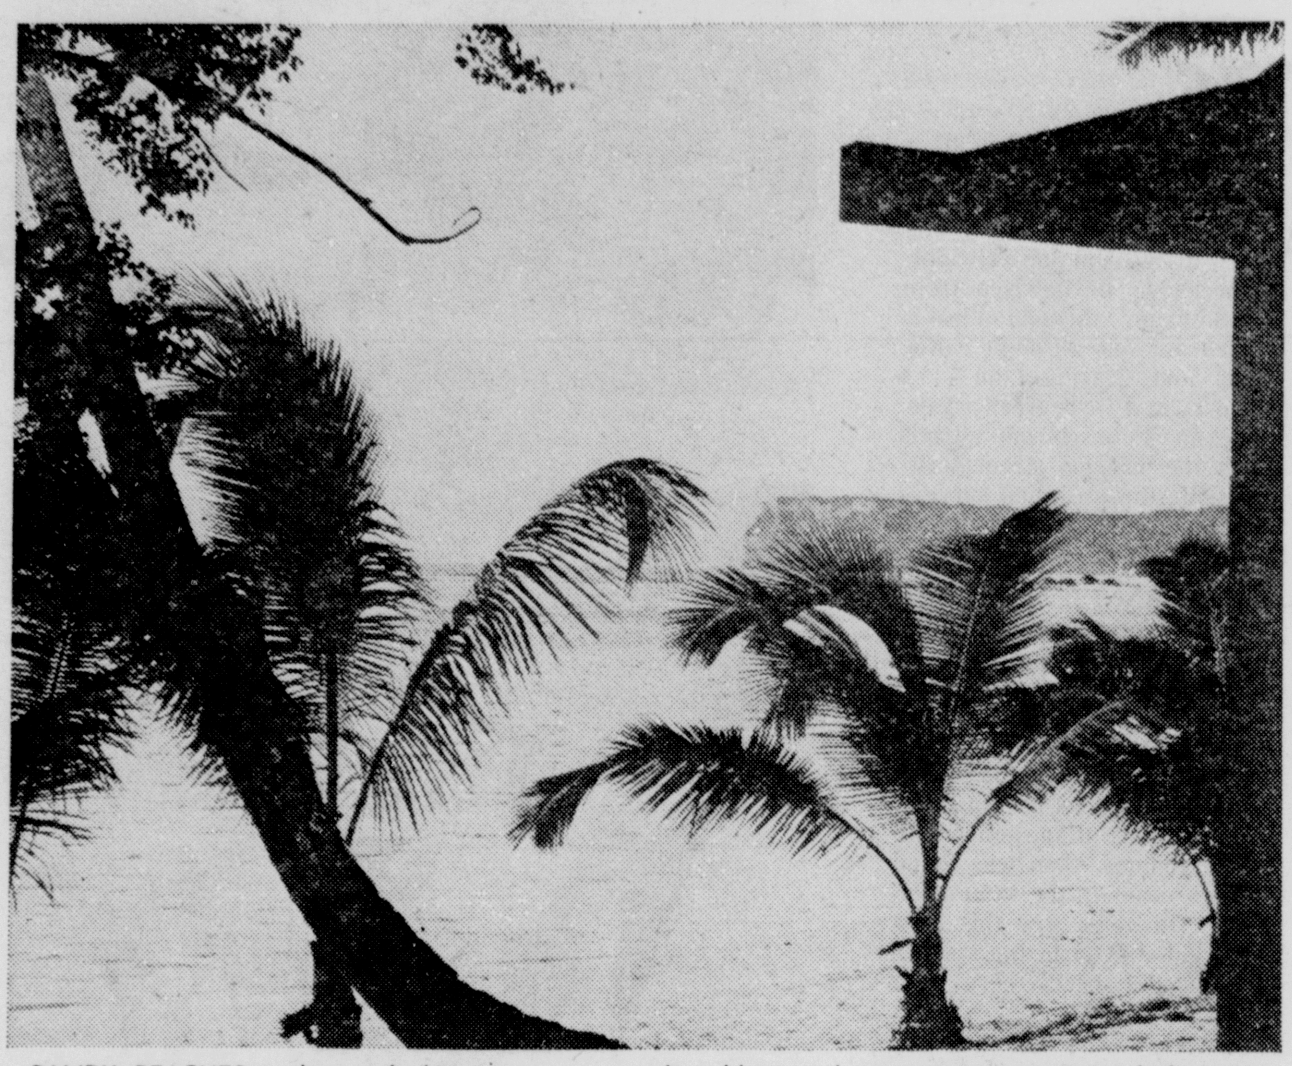
Guam A Rising Tourist Attraction



SANDY BEACHES and crystal clear waters are key attractions for visitors to Guam, scene of World War II battles and military outpost which has blossomed into a resort area, which is a favorite of honeymooners from Japan. Tourism is increasing on the Pacific Island, which has an historic past in world events.

World War II Site Now Honeymoon Spot

AGANA, Guam — This 212 square-mile island, shaped like an hourglass and sitting atop the equator, on the far side of the International Date Line in the middle of the Pacific some 6,000 miles from San Francisco, likes to boast that it is "where America's day begins."

This isn't true, of course. Wake Island, another U.S. possession, is further west and is the first U.S. territory to greet a new day's sun. Guam's 102,000 residents, including a major military colony, like to ignore this bit of geography, however, as they push ahead with one of the fastest growing tourist developments in the Pacific.

"IT'S A growing, exotic resort," reports the travel experts for Continental Airlines. "In 1966, only 11,500 people visited the island. This year, the total will be more than 75,000."

The big attractions on Guam, which is also being promoted as a gateway to all of Micronesia, are low prices, duty-free shops, beautiful beaches, perpetual sunshine, uncrowded roads, dramatic scenery with perpendicular cliffs plunging into the sea, technicolor sunsets and pastel dawns. Already, the island is rivaling Mt. Fuji as a top spot for Japanese honeymooners.

Tumon Beach, a plam-tree shaded one-mile stretch of sand just outside Agana, is the site for several new and modern resort hotels, including the recently-opened Guam Continental TraveLodge, which has 200 rooms. There are now over 1,000 tourist rooms on Guam, representing an investment of more than $25 million.

A GOOD round-the-island highway, some 50 miles long, is made for sightseeing. There are some interesting beaches and cliffs north of Agana, the capital city which sits in the middle of the 30-mile long island, but most of the attractions are to the south, where most of the history and legend is concentrated.

Among them are the invasion beaches of World War II, which U.S. troops crossed in 1944 to retake the island from the Japanese, 1,334-feet high Mt. Lamlam, and the spot where Magellan landed when he and his starving crew first stumbled on the island in 1521.

Everywhere on Guam there are superb swimming beaches and history. The Chamarros, who are of Polynesian stock, were the island's original settlers. Brown-skinned, dark-haired, tall and heavily-built, they came in the prehistoric migrations from Southeast Asia.

IT WASN'T until 44 years after Magellan chanced upon the island that Spain claimed it formally, and it was a Jesuit priest who game the name "Marianas," to Guam and the surrounding islands in honor of Mariana of Austria, Queen Regent of Spain.

Agana — pronounced ah-Gawn-ya — which was almost completely destroyed in the 1944 fighting now has all the makings of a modern American town, with first-class shops, new government buildings, homes, churches, parks and hotels. The Plaza, at its center, is the site of the Guam Cathedral, Congress Building, and Guam Museum. Good taxi and car rental services are available in this city where gusto and progress compete with a languid atmosphere.

Like Hawaii's "Aloha," Guam has its "Hafa Adai," which conveys a warm hello and a hurry-back-soon farewell.

Equally popular is the phrase "Na bonita Guam!" It means "Guam is beautiful."

Floating Dollar Impact Slighter Than Expected

By ROBERT GRIFFIN
Staff Vice President-
Marketing Development
Pan American World Airways

The impact on tourism of President Nixon's recent action setting the United States dollar afloat in relation to foreign currencies has been much less than some observers anticipated.

The fluctuation has been downward to date, but generally in very small percentages, thereby only slightly affecting the cost of foreign travel to American tourists. In fact, the fluctuation has generally been less than the usual difference between hotel and bank exchange rates overseas.

IN ENGLAND, for example, the pound is now worth $2.46, up only six cents from the exchange rate before the President's action. This means that a room at a first-class hotel that previously cost the equivalent of $20 would now be priced at $20.50, an increase of 2.5 percent.

Elsewhere in Western Europe, currencies have experienced revaluations ranging from almost no increase to about four percent, with West Germany the only exception. The West German mark has recently been trading at 7.2 percent above its rate of a year ago.

In the Orient, the Japanese yen is the only currency that has experienced strong upward price pressure. The U.S. dollar purchased about 360 yen in August; during the past few weeks the range has been 330 to 340 yen to the dollar, an increase of six to nine percent.

OTHER PACIFIC currencies have had more modest changes in value, with maximum increases of about four percent. For instance, a dinner for two with floor show at the Savoy Club in Hong Kong, which would have cost $18 before, now costs about $18.65.

Overall, the currency situation has not caused any serious problems for Americans traveling abroad. There is no problem exchanging dollars into foreign currencies, and most revaluations have had minimal impact on the dollar.

The traveler and his wife who take a three-week trip and spend an average of $50 a day will find their bill for the whole trip to be only $20 to $35 higher because of the President's actions.

OFFSETTING the loss in the value of the dollar are the lower airfares available to Europe in the off-season. A round-trip excursion fare between New York and London (17 - 28 days) costs $322 now, compared to $382 in the peak summer months — a savings of $60.

COCKNEY MARKET COLORFUL

LONDON — Search the city maps and you will never find it. Neither will you spot it spelled out on a street sign. The place? Petticoat Lane, London's most famous Sunday morning street market.

A taxi driver can take you there, a Londoner will direct you forth-with and buses pass within yards of it. But the lane is now Middlesex Street, renamed in the early 19th century when the flourishing market and spread of population enveloped the once remote land.

SEVERAL centuries ago, the winding country lane meandered through meadows and fields where wallowing pigs caused it to be known as Hogs Lane. However, by 1598, where the area had grown and prospered, well-to-do residents in the neat cottages gave the garden-lined lane its more delicate name, Petticoat.

The open market here goes back three centureis when traders settled along the lane and sold their wares in the open air, according to National Airlines which provides daily flights between California and London through Miami.

THE REAL fascination of today's Petticoat Lane lies in its unique personality, for this is a Cockney's market. There can be no better place to pick up a few pointers on the art of selling junk or jewelry, trash or treasures, than from these English countrymen with their particular brand of humor and individual use of the language.

Scots Dedicate Plaque Honoring Grant Visit

TAYPORT, Scotland (UPI) — Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, who ended the Civil War by defeating General Robert E. Lee, felt that his world tour in 1877 would not be complete without a view of the Tay railway bridge then under construction.

Now the Scots have decided to preserve the record of the occasion by unveiling a commemorative plaque on the site of Tayport railway station, and with extraordinary hush the unveiling ceremony was carried out before a few Scots by Carl Bartch, the U.S. Consul General, who is based in Edinburgh.

AS THE station has gone, the plaque has been placed on the gable end of a row of council houses!

The plaque states: "This plaque erected on the site of Tayport Railway Station, commemorates the visit on September 1, 1877 by General Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States of America, 1869 to 1877. He then embarked from Tayport Harbour to view the first Tay rail bridge."

Whether he like what he saw is unrecorded, but on Dec. 28, 1879 — two years later — the bridge fell down as a train was crossing, with heavy loss of life, one of the biggest of all Scottish railway disasters. The present bridge built to the west of the old one was opened on June 20, 1887.

"THERE is no record of this famous man's visit to the burgh so we decided to do something about it," said the local Town Clerk, Harry Wilson.

"We have decided to call the local council housing estate President Grant Place. This should attract many American tourists."

Take A Look At Rose Garden

When you consider that Californians can enjoy blooming roses into late fall — and even at Christmastime, in certain areas — it comes as an eye-opener that the bare root planting season is drawing near.

Many nurseries will offer bare root roses in time for Christmas giving — especially the newer introductions and All-American Selections — and as the new year arrives, the planting season takes off in full stride.

IF YOU plan to replace certain of the older roses in your garden, or plant the new-for-1972 choices, now is the time to start preparing. The two All-Americans — Portrait, a radiant pink, and Apollo, a sunny yellow with crimson shadings — plus a bumper crop of other outstanding varieties, await your planting pleasure.

First, survey your present collection of roses. It's a rare instance that a gardener isn't enticed or attracted to a newer rose, which shows more glamour than one which has been performing in the garden for a span of years.

Now is the time to dig the older variety, and work the soil so the ground will be ready to accept a new plant around the first of the year.

AFTER pulling out a rose, remove some of the soil that exists in the original planting area and add new soil from another part of the garden. Work like amounts of peat moss or organic material into the soil — your nurseryman can recommend the proper material to impart the slightly acid condition a rose like. Do this when the soil isn't soggy or else the soil will tend to compact.

If the soil is loose now, you may wish to set a quantity of it aside — in boxes or cans — and store it in a dry location. This assures you of workable soil when it comes time to plant — and to fill-in around the bare roots.

FINALLY, check with your local nurseryman to determine the new varieties he will be offering. Inquire if it is necessary to order plants now to make sure you get the varieties you want, come January or February.

With all the exciting and breathtaking introductions soon to be gracing the garden scene, it would be a shame to miss out on a newcomer because the supply was limited, and it was an early sellout.

OLD SMOOTHIE, a red hybrid tea rose with long stems, is one of the choices awaiting gardeners who are preparing for planting this winter. However, many are attacted to a newer rose which has more glamour than one which has been a fixture in a garden for years.

Winter Garden Can Have Color

If the fall clean-up was done properly, the gardener should be faced with some bare spots in the garden. Bloomed-out annuals have been removed, certain Perennials have been cut back; summer and fall-blooming bulbs are dormant or have been lifted.

There is no lack of color to fill the bare spots. Color that brightens the winter garden in spectacular fashion.

The answer is simple: Use bedding plants. Several bedders will bloom in mid-winter and others will get your garden off to a fast start in late February or March — which is really winter, too, if you go by the calendar.

FOR EARLIEST and bright, bright blooms, set out plenty of Calendulas. The intense shadings of hybrid blooms come in lemon, cream, gold, orange and fiery persimmon and the best part is that Calendulas require little attention and repay you with a long succession of color into early summer.

Pansies and Violas are other quick-to-bloom winter annuals and also provide long-lasting beauty. If you keep picking the bright, cheery flowers, new blooms will keep appearing through spring and into summer. These are ideal over newly-planted bulbs since they not only give color now, but bloom with — and after — bulbs.

Another choice for winter cheer is the Fairy Primrose — which is a border and edging plant without many rivals. Line a shaded walk with these light and airy favorites and enjoy their lasting spikes of lavender, white or pink through the cool season.

THE CALIFORNIA gardener has a wide and varied choice of blooming bedders for early spring bloom. Nurseries also have supplies of Iceland Poppies, Stocks and Snapdragons. Snaps are available in dwarf varieties, as intermediate-growers and as tall growers, which increases their potentiol for use throughout the garden.

Too, you may find Cinerarias, English Daisies, Pinks and Alyssum — both annual and perennial — and others your nurseryman knows will perform well in your area's winter climate. Let him guide you in selecting several bedders to brighten your garden and life.

Lawn Mower Needs Winter Checkup

After the final grass cutting of the season, it's a strong temptation to shove the lawn mower in the corner of the garage and forget it until next spring.

According to Champion Spark Plug Company, you'll save yourself possible trouble and expense if you spend a few minutes preparing the power mower for its winter's hibernation.

The firm offers the following tips:

1. MAKE sure all the fuel is drained from the gas tank, fuel lines and carburetor. To do this, let the engine run at idle until all fuel is gone.

2. Remove the spark plug and check its condition. If you've had a season's or more use out of the plug, it probably needs replacement. With plugs of lesser usage, clean off any deposits and file the electrodes so they are flat and have sharp edges.

Also, regap the plug to manufacturer's specifications. Inspect the spark plug well for any debris. And before re-installing the plug pour several teaspoonsful of oil into the cylinder. Then turn the engine over a few times to distribute the oil on cylinder wall and piston.

3. REMOVE and clean the air cleaner screen. If your mower has a steel mesh type of cleaner, wash it out in solvent (not gasoline) and apply a fresh coat of oil. For the oil bath type cleaner, pour out the old oil, clean the parts and put in new oil. In mowers with disposable paper filters, you'll probably need a new filter since this type is not cleanable.

4. Check V-belts for wear or cracks. (Inspect the underside as well as the visible portion.)

5. Clean the muffler thoroughly. Do so, by removing it and soaking the threads with penetrating oil. Tap out excessive accumulations of carbon. Then, after removing the carbon buildup from the engine's exhaust port, reattach the muffler.

6. Check all nuts, bolts and connections for tightness.

7. CHECK the choke valve operation. When the throttle lever is in the start position, the choke valve should be closed completely.

8. Clean the colling fins, particularly with a two-cycle engine.

9. Apply a light coat of lubricants with an oil-soaked rag. Then cover the machine and store it in a dry, well-ventilated area. Be sure to retard the throttle all the way to prevent accidental starting.

Growing Hybrid Vegetables A Saver

Growing hybrid varieties of vegetables will save you cash for you'll produce sturdier plants, more disease-resistant in many cases and obtain greater yield (so you can use less space) as well as larger leaves, fruits or roots.

If you're unfamiliar with hybrids, it's time you knew about them.

They're the progeny of two different varieties, each selected as a parent for one or more outstanding characteristics that, combined, will mean a better plant for you, the gardener.

AFTER PLANTS of both parents have been grown, pollinated with their own pollen generation after generation to accentuate those important characters, and resulting seed has been harvested and replanted all those years, the result is an "inbred" line of plants — scrawny and unbeautiful, but bearing the characters for which they were selected.

When inbred plants are crossed, that is the pollen from the flowers of one parent has been brushed by hand on the pistils of blossoms of the other, plants grown from the resulting seeds will display "hybrid vigor."

That's what you get in the hybrid seeds you buy for only a few cents more per packet than those of ordinary varieties. You also get the desirable characteristics for which the plant breeder has gone through the long, expensive process outlined above.

THERE are hybrids of both flowers and vegetables. Most corn varieties available are hybrids; those mammoth petunias and marigolds are hybrids.

Look in the catalogs or on the seed packets for the designation F1. This is shorthand for "first filial," a first generation hybrid from those inbred parent plants. Those varieties are your "best buy."

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week.

✔ For portable displays, try planting Daffodils and Tulips in pots or other distinctive containers.

✔ This is the time to give the garden a Fall cleanup spray. Your nurseryman can recommend the proper plant protection chemicals to use. A follow-up spraying to control Peach Leaf Curl should be made in late winter or early spring — as the buds begin to swell.

✔ Cool season vegetables should be set out at the earliest date. A few may be available this month in nurseries as pre-started seedlings.

✔ Fall feeding keeps many lawns greener over the winter than gardeners seem to realize. Feed regularly.

AN ANIMATED DISPLAY at Christmas season is an eye catcher, such as the choir boy and girl shown above. The upper part of the figures move back and forth while candle flames twinkle on and off, through the power from a small pack or two regular flashlight batteries, and a loudspeaker with music coming forth can round out the effect.

Moving Christmas Figures

By STEVE ELLINGSON

One of the nicest things about Christmas is what happens to the imagination. Many people who are never motivated to create at other times of the year become aware that there's a bit of artist in every one of us.

For a change this Christmas why not make an animated yard display? The choir boy and girl shown here are certainly eyecatchers. The upper part of the figures move back and forth realistically while the candle flames twinkle on and off.

The secret lies in a small power pack which operates on just two ordinary flashlight batteries. These drive the motion mechanism and light the candles.

BOTH figures are easily made from hardboard. Here's what you do — glue the full-size patterns on the wood. When the glue is dry, you paint right on the patterns by the new popular paint-by-numbers method.

After that you need only install the power pack on the back side, insert two flashlight batteries and your display is ready for action. Add a loud speaker and you'll have a crowd watching as the singers bow to each other and to those who pass by.

IF YOUR local merchant doesn't carry the power pack units, the pattern tells where they may be ordered. This is an inexpensive project.

To obtain the full-size choir boy and girl patterns number 429430, send $2 to: Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent Journal Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Ca. 91409

Other patterns you might enjoy are: Number 486 Paint-by-numbers Christmas tree, $2; number C-4 Paint-by-numbers Santa, deer & sleigh display, $2; or number C-5 Paint-by-numbers train display, $3.

Don't Take Chances With Extension Cord

The extension cord is a mediocre object — forgotten, mistreated, overloaded with work, and used long after its time of retirement. It is also a powerful object, capable of destroying life and property. Given the proper attention, however, it is safe and useful.

According to Underwriters' Laboratories, one of the most important rules is to match the extension cord with the same size and type cord supplied with the appliance.

Remember that special cords are necessary for large appliances, such as clothes dryers and air conditioners, and should not be operated with ordinary extension cords.

SECONDLY, an extension cord should never be overloaded. By adding up the number of watts plugged into the extension, safety of the electric load can be determined. Check each appliance for the number of watts it uses, then, if you must use an extension, make sure it can safely handle the load.

Periodic examination of all extension cords in use can eliminate a potential fire hazard. Check all screw connections, which should be tight with all wire strands held firmly under the screws. Inspect the cord for breaks, which often occur near the plug, look for frayed and broken insulation, and replace rather than patch defective cords.

PLACEMENT of extension cords is also an important factor. Cords that are near a source of heat; cords that are supported on nails; or cords that are placed under rugs, through doorways, or across walkways and tables are dangerous. Only cords marked "water-resistant" or "oil-proof" should be near oil or moisture.

Finally, all extension cords should bear an important sign of confidence: the mark of Underwriters' Laboratories, a not-for-profit testing organization dedicated to product safety.

Sundeck Brightens Addition To Home

Handyman's Pages

A room added to a house brings a bonus of brightness when it is oriented to a deck or patio, blending the indoor area with outdoor living.

One such remodeling observed recently also gained character and warmth with the strong use of western wood on ceilings and walls, accented by exposed framing and beams.

THE MASTER bedroom added to the house opens onto an enclosed sundeck, with screens in the summer replaced by windows to keep out the winter rains of the San Francisco Peninsula.

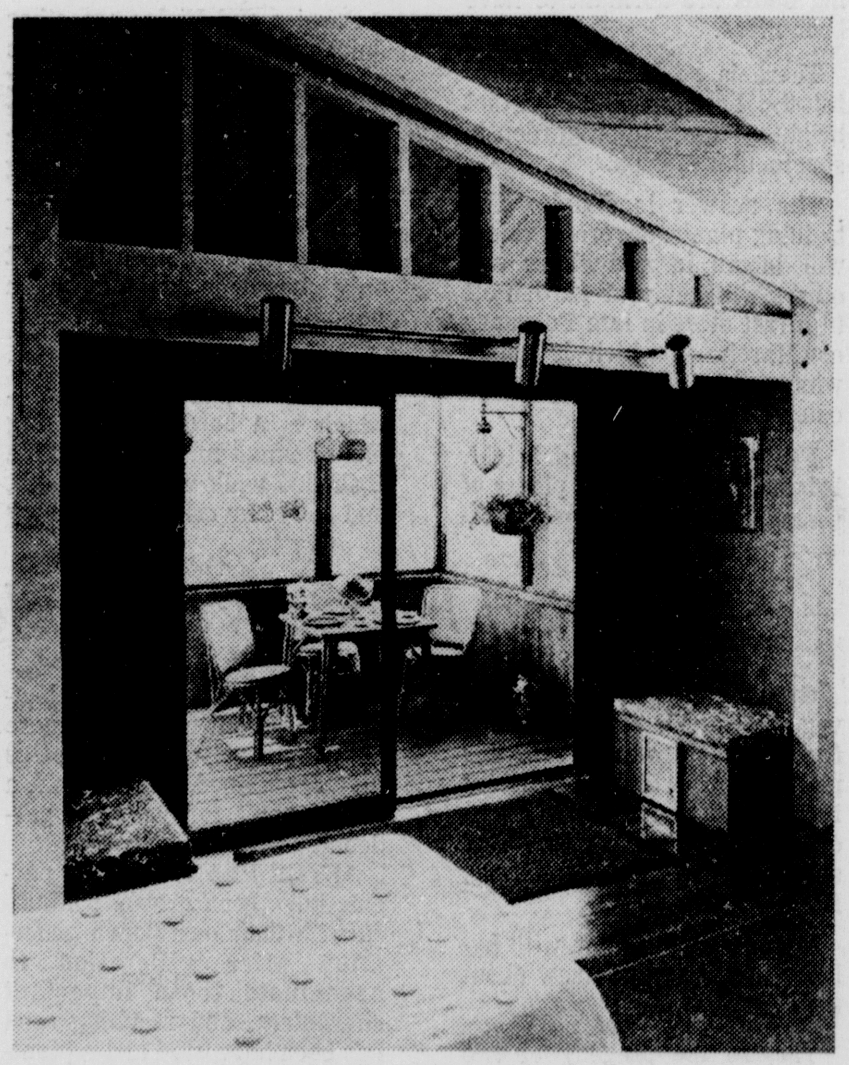
The sundeck is a charming spot for late breakfasts on weekends or a second cup of coffee while reading the morning newspaper. Combined with wood screens, such a deck could be added decoratively to the front of many houses, extending the living area onto growing and displaying shade-marginally used yard space.

The sundeck is a natural place for growing and displaying shade-loving plants. The deck of slightly spaced two by four-inch Douglas fir laid flat makes maintenance easy if water or dirt is spilled while tending plants.

WOOD-FRAMED sliding glass doors open the bedroom wall wide to the deck, with draperies for privacy. The doors are flanked inside by box seats, one for storage, the other enclosing an electric heater.

The six by six-inch posts and two by twelve-inch beams lend rustic strength to the room, complemented by the open ceiling with four by six-inch Douglas fir rafters.

The ceiling is faced with one by six-inch bleached western hemlock boards. Diagonally placed hemlock boards are used on the upper portion of the end walls, behind exposed two by four-inch fir studs.



AN ENCLOSED SUNDECK brightens a bedroom which was added in remodeling with exposed framing of Douglas fir beams. One box in the bedroom encloses a heater and the other is for storage.

Shelves For Laundry

A utility room with plenty of built-ins to hold and hide supplies is a desirable thing, but where space is lacking, some simple shelving will erase the clutter curse.

It's an easy matter to run two shelves along the wall above the appliances. The top one should be large enough to store the bigger packages of soap powders and bleach.

THE LOWER one can have less height and still take care ofmeasuring cups, starch, blueing and the like.

Twelve-inch boards may be installed on wall brackets or adjustable standards and brackets. To add doors, use ready-made louvers or hinge lengths of matching boards cut to fit the shelf height.

Work Your Worries Away By Building Workbench

By DONALD R. BRANN

Get the workbench habit, use your hands to save your heart! That is one good method that provides direction for today's tension. When worries build up, let the steam escape through a convenient and practical outlet. The workbench habit actually permits you to put worry to work.

A new book tells you "How to Build Workbenches." Reading it provides instant escape. Building any one of the four different workbenches offered provides great relaxation.

This book simplifies building a regulation size 6 foot workbench, a child's size version, and most important for apartment dwellers — a versatile foldaway bench. The foldaway bench is ideal for small space ... for the gardener, for those who sew, for the model train railroader. There is also a table top of workbench measuring 7 inches by 28 inches that is clamped to the kitchen table.

STEP-BY-STEP directions plus detailed illustrations simplify construction. All materials required are readily available at your local lumber yard.

For help in every problem that concerns your home, make your lumber dealer your friend. Those who are new at woodworking, have much to gain. Your dealer is always glad to explain any step that confuses you. Never hesitate to ask his advice.

The book offered below lists all the tools and materials you will need, and also contains valuable construction hints, like dipping screws into glue before driving.

A SPECIAL treat for the youngster in your life — whether it is your son, grandson, nephew, or just a dear friend — is to make him his own workbench. Directions and illustrations included in this book simplify building a child's size bench.

Many men have found that constructing one workbench starts them on the road to added income. When acquaintances see and admire yours, orders often develop for more workbenches. What started out as a hobby can lead to a second income.

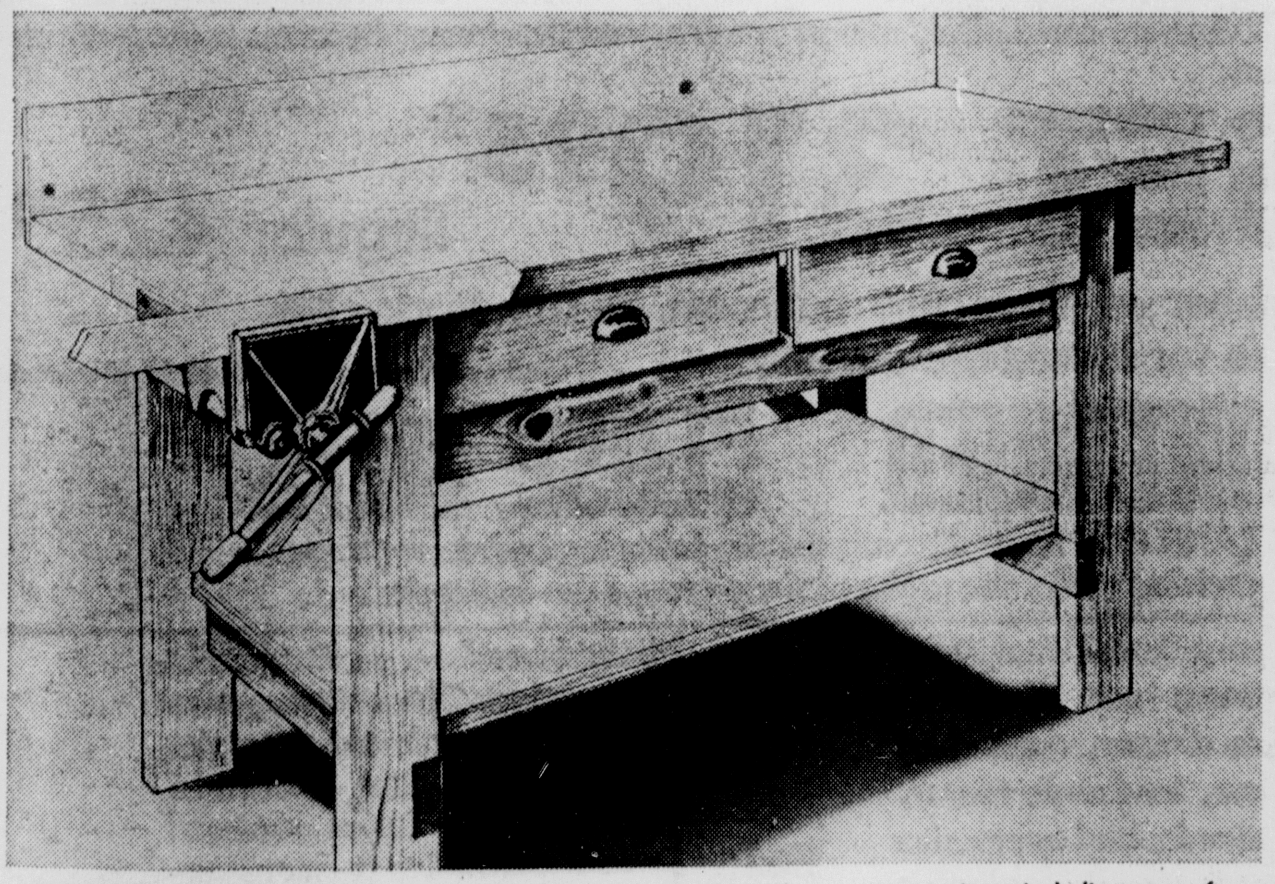
The woman in the family would dearly love a workbench of her won. Good for painting and collage, ceramics and jewelry making, the workbench is also ideally suited for sewing. The large surface acts as a layout table for fabrics and patterns.

A BENCH can be many things to many people. To the homeowner, a workbench is the center for home repairs and improvements. To the lady of the house, it is a sewing center or art workshop; to the hobbyist, it has unlimited uses; and to junior, it is a place of pride where he can be like Dad.

Step-by-step directions assume the reader has never attempted building a workbench. Every step is explained in language anyone can understand. While directions suggest building the bench 6 feet in length, any other size can be constructed.

Easy to follow assembly illustrations simplify building a six-foot workbench with two big drawers, a large lumber shelf, plus many other features. A novel feature is a four-foot long vise extending across its full width. Its sturdy construction insures years of hard use. All lumber specified is readily available.

Send $1 for Workbench Book Number 672 to Independent-Journal P.O. Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y. 10510.



A STURDY WORKBENCH is the center for home repairs and improvements or relaxing headquarters for the hobbyist. Workbenches can be constructed in various sizes including one for children, who want to have one of their own and tackle jobs, or one for women who want to practice their handicrafts.

Packing Cartons Can Be Closets

Wardrobe and utility packing cartons, like those used by millions of families that move each year, can provide handy storage and complement the decor of any home.

You don't have to be moving to get your money's worth. Wardrobe cartons can be used as "extra closets" in the bedroom, family room, basement — wherever. They're ideal for many uses such as the seasonal storage of clothing, or as closet space for overnight, weekend and vacation guests. A fold-down flap allows easy access for hanging clothes.

WITH contact paper, fabrics, paints or other covering, wardrobe and utility cartons make attractive decorator items. You can be your own creative interior decorator. Select covering in soft pastels or wild psychedelic colors.

Possibilities are unlimited. For example, a few brass upholstery tacks and a brightly-colored plaid bedspread can turn an "extra closet" into a unique complement to home or apartment decor. Colorful beach towels and dress material can be used, too.

INTERESTING design and form patterns can be achieved by decorating and stacking utility cartons in various ways. Visitors might never guess these attractive pieces are actually storage places for books, toys and any number of other items.

Both wardrobe and utility cartons are durable and collapsible for easy storage when not in use.

These cartons — like the professional movers use — are available at low cost from truck and trailer rental companies.

HOW NICE it is to find a chest sufficiently compact in size to neatly contain all the things that men use, including storage bins for shirts and sweaters. There are a variety of cabinets designed for men, including the one above by Hickory.

In Your Home: Chests Are Neat

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

Advice to women who wish to be liberated from household monotony: Find the man of the house a superorganizing chest that will house his haberdashery. And do it in such style that he'll never, but never, drop a pair of socks on the floor or toss a tie over a chair back.

And if you want true freedom, why not find a similar storage system for your own needs? Demand equal rights for your wardrobe!

There are a variety of handsome cabinets designed with the man in mind. Many have mirrors and built-in lighting as part of their refinements. Some provide bulk storage bins for shirts and sweaters, trays for decorative accessories and jewelry. Others include hardware for ties and belts.

BUT ALL chests designed specifically for men have one thing in common: They're built high enough so that most of the storage areas can be reached without bending.

I don't know why ladies' storage pieces are cut at lower levels. Very few women have the time to sit down leisurely to dress or apply make-up. Almost all of us stand at the bathroom or dressing room mirror and sit on the edge of the bed while dressing. We still have to bend over to search for hosiery, handkerchiefs, scarves, embellishments.

SO I'D say men and women alike would vote for the gentleman's chest illustrated today. It even has an ample area where a portable television set could be placed. Or if one wanted a permanent installation of a television set, a small hole could probably be drilled to allow an exit for the electrical connection and antenna. The height is 54 inches, so decorative accessories or a small lamp could sit atop the unit.

THERE'S a timeless look about this cabinet by Hickory. It combines a traditional wood quality with hard-edge contemporary design. So it's truly a no-period or an every-period piece of furniture.

The wood is particularly interesting. Crafted in elm solids and fine veneers, it has a rich and mellow look. The veneers are made of an unusual wood called Paldao. This well-defined grain has strong dark and light contrasts and Paldao veneer comes from the East Indies, the Philippines and Indochina. The vertical graining on this cabinet and others in the collection is due to the use of a 7-ply construction, rather than a standard 5-ply.

But there are dozens of well-engineered gentlemen's chests on the market. In recent years the emphasis has been on the word armoire, but you'll frequently find that today's armoire is merely another good version of the gentleman's chest delineated in a sturdy wood.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The real reason "All in the Family" has been so popular on CBS is not its so-called daring in having as "hero" a bigot who tosses off ethnic labels with biased abandon. Basically, it is simply a slightly updated version —and you could find some bigotry in the program I'm about to mention if you reflect — of Jackie Gleason's "The Honeymooners." And, if you care to go back even farther, "The Bickersons" program of radio days. As the French so aptly put it —the more things change, the more they are the same. The old formula of loudmouthed, dominant male winding up with egg on his face more often than not.

Universal Pictures will produe a two-hour television version of "The Royal Family" with the legendary Lynn Fontanne heading an all-star cast, not yet defined. The show will be filmed in Hollywood early next year, but the outlet and time have not been determined. This, of course, is the notable 1927 Broadway play by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber about a famous theatrical dynasty that, obviously, had the Barrymore clan as prototype.

The Jenny Sullivan seen Oct. 28 on ABC's "Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law" episode is the daughter of veteran star Barry Sullivan, who also happened to be on that particular show.

Joe Namath, a pro football quarterback of note when he isn't sidelined with injuries, as at present, gets another television shot with a syndicated series. Stadium Productions has put him back on the air with a weekly half-hour involving interviews with guests from the sports world and other milieus.

SHE'S A HAPPY MOTHER

Nora Ryerson cries out in joy at reunion in Chicago with her son, David Garland, 20, after a 19-year separation. Mrs. Ryerson, who has had eight children, had left David at an orphanage for safekeeping because of family troubles. At age 4, he was adopted by Philip and Lee Garland. Mrs. Ryerson says she never gave permission for the adoption and protested in vain. David plans to live with his true father and mother now. (UPI Telephoto)

Senators Attack Agnew

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew was the subject of an attack by two Senators Friday who suggested he begin performing his constitutional duties before accusing them of shirking theirs.

At the same time, Agnew, addressing the Northeastern Republican Conference, charged the news media was helping Democrats conduct a "total propaganda war aimed at misrepresenting" President Nixon's accomplishments.

Sens. Earnest F. Hollings, D-S.C., and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I. attacked the vice president for his speech last week condemning Democratic presidential prospects for missing the Oct. 29 vote which temporarily killed the foreign aid bill.

They said Agnew was not present for that vote and did not have the "guts" to come to the Senate any more.

Meanwhile, Agnew criticized by name the Washington Post and Newsweek magazine, claiming they were "distorting" the administration's record on the school lunch program.

And the vice president also hit the press generally for ignoring an attempt by the administration to obtain jobs for American Indians, while giving "full coverage" to a recent Democratic attack on the administration's Indian programs.

"It offers a striking object lesson in how the partisan opposition abetted by its allies in the press, has all-too-often obfuscated the constructive efforts of the Nixon administration in the domestic field," Agnew said.

Quartet Invades Radio Station

MIAMI (UPI) —Four armed and hooded Cuban refugees in green fatigues took over control of a leading Spanish-language radio station for about 10 minutes Friday night, and broadcast a tape message for Cubans to "take to the streets" to "purify" the regime of Fidel Castro.

The men, police said, were armed with automatic pistols and burst into the control rooms of WQBA-AM at 11:05 p.m., bound newsman Luis Fernandez at gunpoint, and then held a pistol to the head of talk show host Jose Alva.

They ordered Alva to play a 3 1-2 minute tape recording which conceivably could have been heard by listerners in Cuba tuned to WQBA.

63 Charged For 'Conspiracy'

MANILA (UPI) —President Ferdinand E. Marcos said today criminal charges were filed against 63 persons for conspiracy to overthrow the Philippines government.

Those charged included former army lieutenant Victor Corpus, who defected to the Communist New Peoples Army (NPA) nearly a year ago, several student leaders connected with protest demonstrations and Mila Astorga Garcia, a young woman writer for the Manila Times Sunday magazine.

A charge sheet identified 45 of the accused as "officers and or ranking members of the Communist Party of the Philippines."

All 63 were accused of conspiring "by taking arms against the government" and engaging in "urban guerrilla warfare" in an attempt to overthrow the Philippines government.

Longest Session For Legislature

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —The 1971 state legislature set an all-time record for longevity Friday as hooky-playing lawmakers celebrated by staying away in droves.

The legislature has been in session for 313 calendar days, surpassing the 1940 session by one day. Lawmakers hope to adjourn by Thanksgiving, or at least by Christmas.

Harrington Remains On Critical List

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Henry Harrington, the sixth person to survive a leap from the Golden Gate Bridge, remained in critical condition today at San Francisco General Hospital.

Harrington, 36, jumped 246 feet off the span near the south tower Thursday and landed in a shallow moat.

His wife, Freida, their son, Dan, 4, and daughter, Sandy, 11, were in seclusion at their Pacifica home.

Mrs. Harrington said her husband was depressed over his work at the Internal Revenue Service.

Bombs Destroy Teamster Office

SANTA MARIA (UPI) —The office and car of the executive secretary of Local 381 of the Teamsters Union were destroyed by two bombs here Friday night.

Ben Sanders, the executive secretary, had left the office with a friend in another car before the blasts. There were no injuries.

Police and U.S. Treasury agents were investigating.

Forty Jailed In Gambling Crackdown

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — More than 40 persons were arrested in Los Angeles County Friday in a crackdown on illegal gambling on football games.

Sheriff's deputies and local police staged 38 raids in the cities of Los Angeles, Glendale, San Gabriel, Gardena, Redondo Beach, Hermosa Beach, Manhattan Beach, Torrance, Hawthorne and Lynwood.

GOP Women Group Names Treasurer

Mrs. Harland B. Hennessy of 11 Gary Way, Fairfax, has been elected treasurer of the Northern District of the California Federation of Republican Women.

She was elected at the closing session of the group's 17th biennial convention held Thursday in Palo Alto.

Barnard Completes His 8th Heart Plant

CAPETOWN, South Africa (UPI)—Dr. Christiaan Barnard performed his eighth heart transplant operation today, inserting the heart of an unidentified dead person into a 62-year-old man.

Before undergoing the operation at Capetown's Groote Schuur Hospital, recipient Lindsay Rich, who has been bedridden with heart disease, said:

"I think it is definitely worthwhile, even at my age, to get a new heart. What person at my age would not cling to the last spark of hope to lead a normal life.

"At the moment I have no life—I just exist. I would prefer death to continuing the way I am. Even a year or so of normal life would compensate for all the trouble."

Under South African law, doctors are barred from releasing the identity of the donor.

Of Barnard's seven previous heart transplant patients, two survive. They are Dirk Van Zyl, 44, and Dorothy Fisher, 39.

Remodeling Plan Approved

The Fairfax City Council approved final plans last night for remodeling city hall.

City Mgr. Robert E. Crowe said the council will advertise for bids early in December. Construction is scheduled to begin in early 1972 once rains subside.

The renovation, estimated to cost $9,000, will include raising and stabilizing a corner of the building, installing new wiring and refinishing interior walls.

30-Car Peninsula Pileup In The Rain

BURLINGAME, Calif. (UPI) —More than 30 automobiles were damaged Friday in a freeway pileup in rainy weather. Three persons were injured.

The pileup caused a massive traffic jam during the rush hour, with thousands of motorists slowing to a near stop to avoid getting involved, or just to get a look at what was going on.

Double Slaying— $10,000 Reward

WALNUT (UPI)—A large oil company posted a $10,000 reward in the aftermath of a robbery and double-execution type slaying Friday of a pair of young gas station attendants who had less than $50 in the till.

The bodies of Terry L. Evans, 18, an employe of only four days; and Karl Barranowski, 21, a three-year Vietnam veteran, were found in a storeroom with gunshot wounds in the back of the head.

Atlantic Richfield Corp. offered the reward Friday for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer or killers of the two young men.

Parking, Review Top Plan Agenda

The Belvedere Planning Commission will consider a request for relief from parking requirements when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday at city hall.

Ernest Haycox is asking a variance so he may remodel his residence at 101 Bella Vista Avenue without providing the required two offstreet parking spaces.

The commission also will review the Belvedere planning study prepared by Livingston and Blayney of San Francisco in preparation for a public hearing set for Nov. 29.

Grim Life In Prison Camp Through Eyes Of A Child

A CHILD IN PRISON CAMP by Shizuye Takashima; Tundra Books, 69 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Wat Takeshita.

Artist-author Takashima uses illustrations and a minimum of words to describe the mass evacuation of 22,000 Japanese from Canada's west coast in 1942, right after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Through the eyes of a child (the author was 13 at the time), she recalls her fear and bewilderment as her family and all Japanese Canadians were ousted from Vancouver and herded into camps 700 miles inland where they were forced to stay as virtual prisoners for three years, the first year without electricity or running water.

This is not a detailed and ponderous documentation of what Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson later described as "a black mark against Canada's traditional fairness . . ." Writing with the simple brush strokes of the Oriental artist, the author skips along in child-like simplicity from episode to episode, giving the reader a series of vignettes, which, when tied together, depict the anger and anxieties of a people imprisoned for no crime other than the poor choice of ancestors.

Each vignette is a poignant reminder of how the stoic Japanese bowed to authority, yet emerged with dignity and sanity unimpaired through three years of forced exile.

She tells it simply, without anger or bitterness.

The Canadian evacuation, on a smaller scale, was identical to the evacuation of 110,000 Japanese from the United States west coast.

The main difference was that in Canada, the camp residents could visit neighboring towns, although the Caucasians were not always pleasant. In the United States, the detention camps were planted in the middle of the desert or wasteland and sealed off by barbed wire and gun towers.

In either case, here is a chapter in history which both the perpetrators and the victims would prefer to forget.

ARCHDUCHESS Maria Theresa, painted before her accession to the throne of Austria at the age of twenty-three, is one of the fascinating characters from the famed family, whose history is recounted in "The Hapsburgs" by Edward Crankshaw, a Viking Studio Boo, $16.95.

Faculty Member Tells Of Strife On Campus

HOW TO KILL A COLLEGE by Cy Epstein; Sherbourne Press, 201 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"How To Kill a College" is a story of the troubles at Fullerton State College in Orange County in the spring of 1970, told by one who was there and a participant.

Cy Epstein was assistant professor of English at Fullerton State and adviser to the Student Mobilization Committee, which played a central part in the confusing events that followed heckling of Gov. Ronald Reagan during his appearance on campus on Feb. 9, 1970.

William B. Langsdorf, president of the college, had disciplinary charges filed against two students as result of heckling of the governor. Fullerton police arrested the same two students on disturbance charges. Campus rebels, advised and led by Prof. Stuart Silvers of the philosophy department, made this the issue for major protest which escalated in predictable fashion, with "pigs on campus," destruction of property, and disruption of classes.

After students occupied a building following the Cambodia invasion, President Langsdorf dropped his more-or-less hard line to allow them to remain. This brought more property destruction and more disruption.

Epstein feels it was all wrong, but his suggestions as to how such violence should be avoided are rather vauge — as is his own role in the proceedings, although he writes in the first person and it appears that he participated in many of the events.

Lonely Woman Finds Young Writer Adrift

MRS. PALFREY AT THE CLAREMONT by Elizabeth Taylor; Viking, 178 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Dorothy Gardiner.

A poignant tale of a lonely old woman who moves to a London hotel.

Here she is confronted by a small group of women and one man — who like herself — have become outcasts.

Here Mrs. Palfrey is faced with the problem of being the "new girl" in the tight, tradition bound society of the group of aged and lonely people.

Her grandson, Desmond, who lives in London and works at the British Museum ignores her presence in the city. Her golf playing married daughter in Scotland is too busy and preoccupied with her own life to bother with her aging and recently widowed mother.

Using irony, pathos, humor and vivid description, Elizabeth Taylor exposes the sadness of growing old.

Mrs. Palfrey finds a friend, Ludo, a hungry, aspiring young writer, who like herself, has been sent adrift.

His mother is too busy with her lover to spend time with her lonely son.

The inter-relationship between the old woman and the young man is the core of the story.

Surprises are in store for the reader in this book that could be enjoyed by all ages.

Inflation Not Easy To Stifle

THE IMMORALITY OF INFLATION By Charles E. Williams; Theo. Gaus' Sons., Inc., 244 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Gordon Parr.

The evils of inflation are by now pretty well known so Williams risks flogging a dead horse once again — except that the horse refuses to die as Mr. Nixon is finding out.

That inflation steals from savings accounts and lessens the effect of a salary increase in commonly recognized but the idea that government actions may have played a major role in this loss is emphasized by the author.

Beginning with an indictment of the Federal Reserve System, "that engine of inflation," Williams reminds us that no president since Herbert Hoover has had the courage to effectively control inflation.

An important part of his remedy is a return to the gold standard which supposedly forces participating nations to be fiscally responsible. History demonstrates, however, that whenever a country faced serious losses of gold the standard was simply abandoned and so much for the gold standard.

Although the book is at least timely — the U.S. and its trading partners are suffering a new wave of inflation and currency realignments — it would have more impact if Williams sounded less like Elmer Gantry and more like a schooled economist.

Dynasty Of Habsburgs Through The Centuries

THE HABSBURGS by Edward Crankshaw; Viking, 264 pages, $16.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

From the time that Count Rudolph of Habsburg was crowned king of the Germans in 1273 until World War I brought the breakup of imperial dynasties on the continent, there was always a Habsburg (more often spelled Hapsburg) in power in Austria.

The fortunes of this dynasty are traced — mostly through the wars in which it participated and the marriages it made with other royal families to cement its power — in Edward Crankshaw's "The Habsburgs," subtitled "Portrait of a Dynasty."

Much of the history of Europe in those centuries is here, for the Habsburgs were always at or near the center of the power struggles. Yet, as their story is told by Crankshaw, they appear a rather unimpressive lot, with a few exceptions — especially Maria Theresa. Crankshaw suggests that the secret of their long success was their uncanny ability to survive.

Crankshaw, a London Observer foreign correspondent, tells the story in enough detail but not too much. Richly illustrated, "The Habsburgs" is at the same time a "gift style" book and a worthwhile chronicle of a family whose part in history eclipsed its members' interest as individuals.

Depressing Tale Set In Tennessee Valley

MEET ME IN THE GREEN GLEN by Robert Penn Warren; Random House, 376 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Shirley Graves.

There is sex and there is murder, but this is not a love story or a mystery thriller.

It is a rather depressing novel about a "heroine" who never really had a chance. In her childhood she was repressed by an ambitious mother who then pushed her into marriage with an unbelievably crude older man who, unfortunately, owned most of the run-down west Tennessee valley in which they lived, which impressed her mother.

He in turn pushed her into a sanitorium with a breakdown. Twelve years later he had become a helpless invalid and Cassie was released to care for him. Now she is 42 years old and has not yet had any fun out of life.

As the book opens, down the road comes Angelo: young, virile, and looking for a place to stay. He finds it.

The author writes with great detail and understanding about his characters' thoughts and fellings, their reasons for their actions, their fantasies. You anticipate the next moves as you come to know Cassie and Angelo, living in that wreck of a house; and Murray, who left their valley and became a big important lawyer in the big City, but who returns often enough to complicate things. From a slow beginning they all rush toward the only possible ending.

Norway Rates High In Natural Views

By MURRAY J. BROWN

VOSS, Norway (UPI) — With its fjords, mountains, glaciers, waterfalls and other natural wonders, Norway has to rate high among the most beautiful countries of Europe, if not the world.

I sampled some of its scenic spectaculars on a two-day tour from Oslo into the picture-post-card country of western Norway.

Voss lies in the heart of the fjord district, about two hours from Bergen and five hours from Oslo by train. A popular year-round resort with top-rated hotels, it is also accessible by road during the summer months and serves as a major base for sightseeing tours of the area. It's one of Norway's outstanding ski centers the rest of the year.

AMERICAN football buffs should know that Knute Rockne of Notre Dame gridiron fame was born here.

The train ride from Oslo was in itself a memorable experience. It was a comfortable, enjoyable trip mostly through virtually-unspoiled country — snow-topped mountains, blue-hued glaciers, frozen lakes, heavy forests — and once in a while a solitary hut in the distance and a hamlet nestling close to the rail line.

The Bergen-Oslo electrified railway is the only permanent year-round land link between eastern and western Norway — a brochure notes there are about 200 tunnels, 18 miles of snowsheds and 300 bridges along its 300-mile route. Oslo and Norway also are linked, however, by excellent air services, both being major terminals for Scandinavian Airlines Systems (SAS).

HIGHLIGHTS of the Voss include the Church of St. Michael, built in the 13th Century and the oldest stone church in Norway. The octagonal spire is built of heavy timbers joined by wooden pegs, the walls are up to 7½ feet thick and the interior is a virtual treasure trove of ancient church art and other religious artifacts.

Voss also boasts the Finneloft, built 700 yaars ago and the oldest wooden building in the country, and the crudely-fashioned stone Cross of St. Olav, believed erected in the 11th century when the people of Voss adopted Christianity.

A favorite winter resort for Americans and Europeans, Voss has the longest downhill ski slope in Norway and excellent cross-country trails. There are cable cars and chair lifts and other facilities for skiiers and snow bunnies. In the summer, there are hiking, fishing, hunting, sightseeing and other activities.

FOR a side trip we took a bus to Gudvangen to catch the steamer for a ride through an arm of the Sogne Fjord, which cuts up to 110 miles inland from the sea on the west coast.

At Gudvangen, we boarded the fjord steamer for the voyage to Flam. The ferry glided smoothly through the narrow waterway, flanked by almost-bare cliffs which rise almost straight out of the water. Scores of waterfalls tumbled down the sides of mountains still wearing wreathes of snow.

The ferry stopped at several fjordside villages to load or disembark passengers, frieght and mail. In most cases, it is their only link with the outside world.

The final leg of the tour was by train from Flam. Going up it takes 45 minutes to cover the 12 miles to Myrdal — it takes longer going down because of the almost constant braking necessary during the descent from about 2,800 feet to near sea level. The track winds back and forth through the valley, through tunnels cut inside living rock.

FREQUENT halts are made to allow closeup views of the spectacular scenery, including the breathtaking Kjosfossen waterfall, which is hundreds of yards across and plunges straight down for more than 225 feet.

Train connections to Bergen and Oslo, or stops in between, are made at Mydral.

High Level Eating

If you like to eat on a high level, Germany is the place for you. It has more tower restaurants than any country in the world, claims the German Tourist Information Office.

SKIING IN NORWAY lures thousands each year as the winter beauty covers the hills and the views are spectacular, such as the above view from Geilo, a popular resort along the Oslo-Bergen railroad. American tourists often make a skiing trip to Norway a part of their European travels, and take in the country's other attractions during their stay.

YANKEE WEEKEND

The 18th season of Yankee Winter Weekend packages, featured on the weekends of January 7, 8 through March 24, 25 inclusive, will be held this year in Sturbridge, Massachusetts and headquartered at the over-200-year Publick House.

The Publick House, founded in 1771 by Colonel Ebenezer Crafts, catered to 18th century travelers on the Old Colonial Post Road, offering them food, drink and overnight accommodations. It does the same for space-age travellers of the 20th century.

Parts of the original Publick House are still around. It's the section that includes the Tap and Pineapple rooms, the front desk and sitting rooms and guest rooms directly above.

Rooms 1A-1B is the Lafayette Suite, said to have been occupied by the famous general. In other words, "Lafayette slept here."

WASHINGTON NEED NOT BE AN EXPENSIVE CITY

Most tourists come to the Nation's Capital with no advance knowledge of local motel and hotel rates, and many fail to stay overnight because they fear rates are "too high."

But Washington D.C. can be one of the world's least expensive tourist cities. Accommodations are available for every pocketbook, and the city has a wealth of free and low-cost sightseeing attractions.

Forty-four area hotels offer 25 per cent discounts on weekends, with advance reservations. And that traditional European institution, "the small hotel," thrives in the Capital.

Single-room rates start at $5 a day in one small hotel near downtown, and several others in downtown proper rent rooms in the $6 to $10 range. A $20 bill will get you a suite in more than one downtown hotel.

These inexpensive hotels are in many of Washington's best areas, including Foggy Bottom, noted as the home of the State Department, and on Capitol Hill. Indeed, many frequent Washington visitors prefer the small hotels because of their personalized informal services.

And the cost-conscious tourist has many choices among activities. He can visit the Capitol, the White House, the National Archives, the Washington Monument, the Jefferson Memorial, the Lincoln Memorial, the National Gallery of Art, the Museum of History and Technology, the Museum of Natural History, the Museum of Arts and Industries, the National Portrait Gallery, the Washington Cathedral, the Freer Art Gallery, the Supreme Court, the library of Congress, the National Zoo and all the federal office buildings for a total cost of one dime.

That's how much it costs to ride the elevator to the top of the Washington Monument.

All prospective tourists should write the Washington Convention and Visitors Bureau, 1129 20th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., 20036, requesting a brochure on Washington room rates and a map.

The tourist should then decide what area best suits his purposes, and how much he wants to spend for accommodations, then make reservations prior to leaving home.

John H. Myers—A Man Of Music

Led College Of Marin Into Musical Bloom

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

"I was in the right place at the right time," says John H. Myers, as part of the explanation of his outstanding record during his 11 years as chairman of the College of Marin Music department.

"If the work I have done has been productive, the major element is due to the very nature of Marin County," he emphasized. "It is a community where there has been a great deal of sympathy and support for and participating in the arts by residents.

"The fine public school music programs do a very good job of preparing students at lower levels so that at the college level we have a large number of well trained, talented and interested students. The department is a reflection of that.

WHAT HAS happened in the past 11 years has happened to meet a need that exists in the county," he declared.

When Myers, who had been head of the music department of Eldorado High School in Placerville, came to the College of Marin in 1960, the only performing groups were a small a cappella choir and small orchestra, and he handled the whole program himself.

The staff now includes six full-time instructors, four part-time ones and 48 different music courses. Performing groups are now a 60 piece symphony and 80-piece concert band, both directed by Myers; a small madrigal group, a collegiate chorale and community chorus, which when combined number about 200 voices; an opera workshop, a chamber music group and a jazz ensemble.

Not a large man, Myers is nevertheless forceful and speaks with the same focused intensity and energy one sees in his conducting.

"OURS is one of the larger music departments in all of the junior colleges in California," Myers says, "in terms of curricula, staff and, in my opinion, quality. I am fiercely proud of this department. I think we have one of the finest junior college departments I know of."

In fact, the reputation of the department, which offers a music major, has acquired such prestige, he noted, that some very talented students, who normally would enter a conservatory or university, now choose to take their first two years at the College of Marin.

In view of this record, Myers's resignation effective this semester as music department chairman came as a surprise in Marin music circles.

EXPLAINING his reasons, Myers said, "I've headed the department for 11 years, and it has been one hell of a lot of hard work. I felt I needed a change. The pressures have been very great, and I also wanted to be able again to devote an adequate amount of time to teaching and conducting without having to spend every night and weekend working. I felt it was time to turn over the job to someone else who might have some fresh ideas and institute some changes helpful to the department.

"The present chairman, Scott Merrick, before coming here was the music department head at Contra Costa Junior College and is well qualified, and I am working under his guidance with pleasure."

Myers's present title is instructor of music, and he teaches introduction to classical music and elementary musicianship, a pre-theory course for prospective music majors. He says he is especially delighted to be able to devote more time to conducting the community orchestra and band.

MUSIC has been a part of the former music chairman's life ever since he was born in Chicago in 1924.

Both of his parents, as well as his brother and sister, have been involved in music, he said, and he studied violin and voice as a boy. He earned his bachelor of music education and master of music degrees at Indiana University, where he got his first taste of conducting as student conductor of the University's symphonic band and conductor of the ROTC marching band.

While attending the University he specialized in percussion instruments, for percussion had been his major interest since high school.

It is not surprising, therefore, that some of the outstanding numbers in the College of Marin's band and orchestra concerts have featured percussion.

"I did my master's recital on tympani," he recalls. "I can and have played all the instruments in the band and orchestra, but my performing skills are rusty now," he confesses.

MYERS has studied under Ernst Hoffman, former conductor of the Houston Symphony and Breslau Opera and with William Schaefer, conductor of the University of Southern California Symphony band. While working toward a doctorate of music at that University he assisted with operations of the famed Trojan marching band, was arranger for concert band music and a tenor soloist with several Southern California choral groups.

His first job was as instrumental music teacher at Livingston elementary school in Livingston, Calif., four years. His second position was head of the music department in Eldorado High School.

A perfectionist totally devoted to very high standards of musical achievement, Myers is aware that he is known as a "tough prof" and makes no apology for his reputation.

"MUSIC is a very stringent discipline," he argues. "The kind of music we pursue here in study and performance is the kind of musical activity which does demand a great deal of participants. It is no accident that we have the fine performing groups that we have. This stems from having a great many talented students and also from teachers and directors who set very high standards and demand students achieve them.

"One of the interesting things I find about music performance is the search for perfection which can never be attained."

Conductors, he points out, are rarely popular. "Musicians may not always want to work very hard, but they have to be made to work hard. You have to have subordination of individual ideas to a common one that everyone is striving for in large ensembles, and in order to mold people, individual psyches sometimes have to be stepped on."

Questioned as to what he feels has been his most important contribution during his chairmanship of the department — apart from building it to its present stature — Myers replied without hesitancy, "I would say the band and the orchestra, and as one single accomplishment, the institution of the concerto concerts."

THE CONCERTO concert is one in which several students play the various movements of concertos instead of one soloist performing in all movements.

"This has been one of the bright spots in my life," Myers said enthusiastically. The concerto concert has been a fantastic music education experience.

"Playing under this plan gives seven or eight young people their first experience with playing in public with orchestral accompaniment. The orchestra loves it, and I have found it a very rewarding conducting experience that has

(Editor's Note: The Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is running a series of "state of our city" reports on Marin's municipalities, prepared by officials of those cities. This week's report on San Anselmo was prepared by Mayor Kenneth L. Anderson.)

By KENNETH L. ANDERSON

San Anselmo is attempting, under increasingly difficult conditions, to face up to not only today's problems, but also our inheritance of yesterday's problems — the unrepaired streets, undeveloped parks and inadequate storm drains.

Fortunately citizen involvement is strong, with a variety of ages and philosophies making their contribution. There's more awareness now, more sensitivity to long range planning and, of course, more conflict of opinions. But the city is very much alive and well in terms of citizen participation.

THE HUB intersection is finally intelligible; the Robson estate is a city-owned park; there are two new tot lots; the library now has a reciprocal agreement with the county library, plus membership in the North Bay Cooperative Library system.

This year's budget contains matching funds for a H.U.D. grant for parks development; and there's an appropriation to study the potential advantages of combining certain city services in the Ross Valley.

There are citizen committees on housing and ecology; we have a new sign ordinance; and San Anselmo is the first city in California to become mundialized.

NEEDLESS to say, not everyone will consider the above as "progress;" but after several decades of standing, San Anselmo has begun to face up to its municipal responsibilities.

Meeting these responsibilities today requires planning and action that goes beyond the city limits. It takes an awareness by the citizens of just what local government is and should be, and how — or even if — it is going to survive in the increasingly complex web of state and federal taxation and control.

The federal and state governments take a bigger and bigger portion of the available tax revenue, and both governments are mandating more and more requirements on local government without giving local government direct access to needed additional revenue.

THE CITIES are just about at the end of their ability to tax and to provide the normally expected city services. The reason for this is the cities' overwhelming dependence on the property tax. People say 'taxes are too high', and immediately protest to their city council, without stopping to compute what a relatively small percent their city asks for out of the citizen's total tax bill — federal, state and local.

This fear of higher and higher taxes has a real effect on city councils and city budgets. In San Anselmo, for example, we need to resurface at least five miles of city streets every year just to keep even. We aren't doing it.

In this year's budget we deleted two new pickup trucks which would have replaced two 1956 trucks which should have been replaced some years ago. We gave no salary increase to our employees for the first time in many years. We cut one of the recreation programs.

LOCAL citizens are being short-changed — or, more accurately, they are short-changing themselves because we have not made it plain enough to our state and federal legislators that we want a healthy and effective local government.

State and federal legislation continually dictates more and more programs, all of which cost money, without giving the cities access to adequate revenue. Such programs as mandated general plans, the updating thereof, housing elements, open space elements and liberalized retirement benefits for municipal employees are all commendable, but are achieved primarily by cutting back on traditional city services.

I AM not suggesting that municipal government should take over what are properly state and federal functions. I am trying to tell people as plainly as possible that your local government may very well disappear in your lifetime if you don't support it, and if you don't tell your federal and state legislators where you want the lines drawn — what the federal government should do, what the state government should do and what should be the functions of local government.

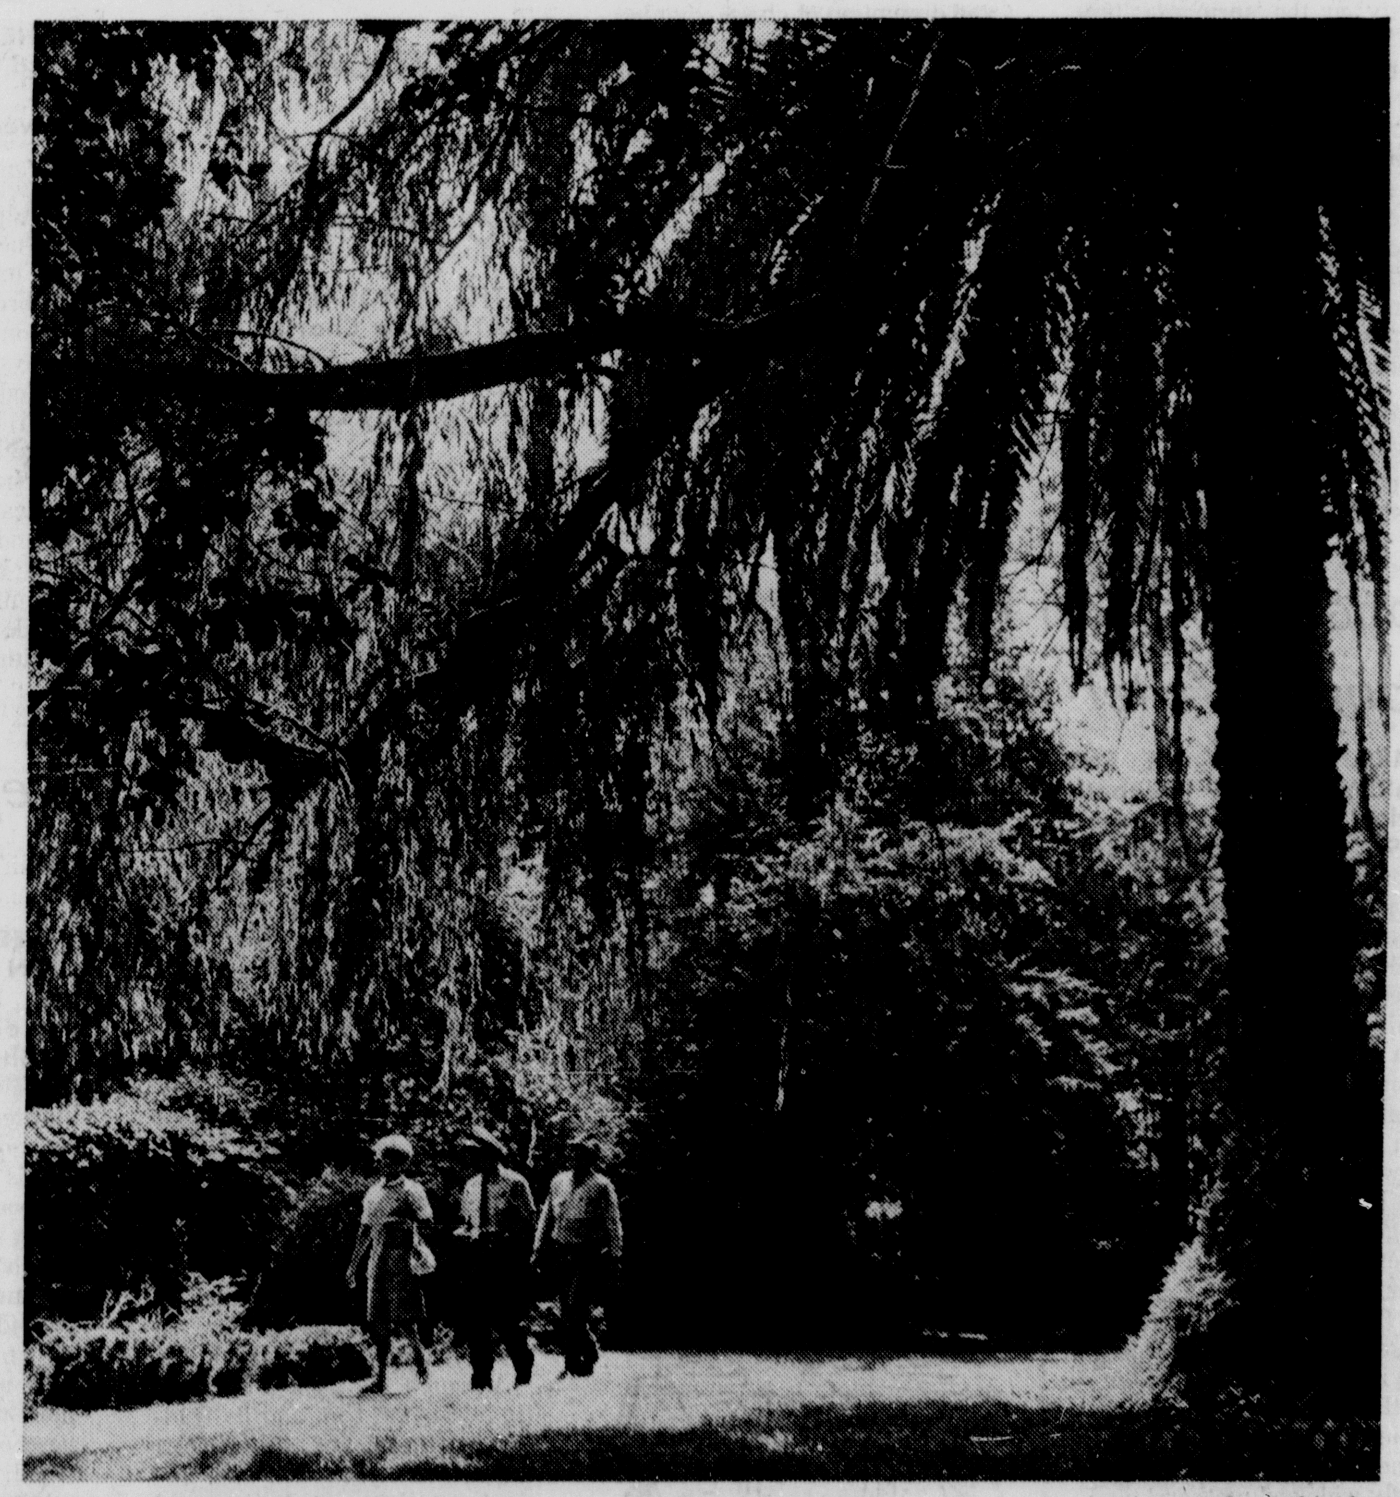
OPEN SPACE is a rapidly disappearing and increasingly valuable asset in populated eastern Marin and the city of San Anselmo, in the heart of the urban area, is retaining some of it at the Sorich Ranch. The park area will serve as a reminder to future generations of Marin's naturally beautiful terrain.



THE FORMER ROBSON estate has become a city-owned park, marking continuing efforts by the city council to provide recreational areas for residents in face of budget restrictions and many demands on city funds. The Robson and surrounding grounds are suited to a variety of uses.
